Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Hybrid organizations that combine multiple organizational forms deviate from socially legitimate templates for organizing, and thus experience unique organizing challenges. In this paper, we introduce and develop the concept of hybrid organizing, which we define as the activities, structures, processes and meanings by which organizations make sense of and combine multiple organizational forms. We propose that social enterprises that combine the organizational forms of both business and charity at their cores are an ideal type of hybrid organization, making social enterprise an attractive setting to study hybrid organizing. Based on a literature review of organizational research on social enterprise and on our own research in this domain, we develop five dimensions of hybrid organizing and related opportunities for future research. □Corresponding author. 2. Giving Versus Giving In

给予 vs. 屈从

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Altruism is central to organizational and social life, but its motivations are not well understood. We propose a new theoretical distinction that sorts these motivations into two basic types: “giving” indicates prosocial behaviors in which one willingly engages, while “giving in” indicates prosocial behavior in which one reluctantly engages, often in response to social pressure or obligation. Unlike those who give, those who give in prefer to avoid the situation that compels altruism altogether, even if doing so leaves the would-be beneficiary empty-handed. We review the existing literature on altruism in behavioral economics, psychology, and organizational behavior and suggest that the distinction between giving and giving in is not only central from a theoretical standpoint, but also has important methodological implications for researchers trying to study prosocial behavior and practitioners trying to encourage it.

利他主义是组织和社会生活的核心，但其动机尚未被充分理解。我们提出了一个新的理论区分，将这些动机分为两种基本类型：“给予”表示一个人自愿参与的亲社会行为，而“屈从”则表示一个人不情愿参与的亲社会行为，通常是为了应对社会压力或义务。与那些“给予”的人不同，那些“屈从”的人更倾向于完全避开强迫利他主义的情境，即使这样做会让潜在的受益者空手而归。我们回顾了行为经济学、心理学和组织行为学中关于利他主义的现有文献，并指出“给予”与“屈从”之间的区别不仅从理论角度来看至关重要，而且对于试图研究亲社会行为的研究人员和试图鼓励亲社会行为的从业者也具有重要的方法论意义。

3. Putting Framing in Perspective: A Review of Framing and Frame Analysis across the Management and Organizational Literature

透视框架：管理与组织文献中的框架与框架分析综述

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

There are few constructs that are as ubiquitous across traditions of management and organizational research, and indeed the social sciences more generally, as that of frame or framing. The widespread popularity and use of the concept has led to rich streams of research, ranging from work in managerial cognition and decision-making to strategic and organizational change, and social movements and institutions. At the same time, the popularity of framing across these literatures has perhaps also come at a price. Indeed, it has meant that these streams of research have essentially developed along separate paths, despite the prospect and promise of a greater connection between them. In this paper, our general aim is to consolidate and advance the current body of research on framing in the management and organizational literature. We do this by providing an extensive review of the key research traditions on framing across this literature, noting the salient contributions to date and highlighting potential areas for further theoretical development and research. Building on this review, we also elaborate on connections across traditions of research; we hope these will serve as pointers to instigate further research on framing processes across different levels of analysis.

在管理与组织研究传统，乃至更广泛的社会科学中，很少有像“框架” (frame) 或“框架化” (framing) 这样无处不在的构念。该概念的广泛流行和应用催生了丰富的研究流派，涵盖了从管理认知与决策到战略与组织变革，以及社会运动与制度等领域。与此同时，框架化在这些文献中的流行或许也付出了一定的代价。事实上，这意味着尽管这些研究流派之间存在加强联系的前景和承诺，但它们基本上是沿着各自独立的路径发展的。在本文中，我们的总体目标是巩固并推进管理与组织文献中关于框架化的现有研究。为此，我们对该文献中关于框架化的主要研究传统进行了广泛的回顾，指出了迄今为止的显著贡献，并强调了进一步理论发展和研究的潜在领域。在这一综述的基础上，我们还阐述了不同研究传统之间的联系；我们希望这些联系能作为指引，激发对不同分析层面上框架化过程的进一步研究。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

There has been a long history in management and industrial/organizational psychology of studying methods to improve performance at work. These efforts have traditionally been concerned with individual-level performance (with some attention paid to team performance as well); even when research began to more broadly consider the topic of performance management instead of just performance appraisal. However, the often unstated assumption was that, if an organization could effectively improve the performance of individual employees, this would accrue to improvements in firm-level performance as well. A review of the literature suggested that this link had never really been established in a direct way. Instead, we found considerable support for relating “bundles” of human resource (HR) practices to firm-level performance, and several models for how these practices could create the transformation from individual-level to firm-level performance. We drew upon several of these models, from somewhat diverse literatures, to propose a model whereby bundles of HR practices, when aligned with the strategic goals of the organization, can be used to create a climate for performance that could transform generic knowledges, skills, and abilities (KSAs) into specific KSAs needed to improve firm-level performance.

摘要 (中文):

5. Power in Management and Organization Science

Authors / 作者: Peter Fleming, André Spicer

DOI: 10.5465/19416520.2014.875671

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This paper reviews and evaluates the concept of power in management and organization science. In order to organize the extant literature on this topic, we develop a framework that identifies four faces of power (i.e. coercion, manipulation, domination, and subjectification) and four sites of power (i.e. power enacted “in”, “through”, “over”, and “against” organizations). This allows us to evaluate assumptions both shared and contested in the field. Building on the review, the paper then points to potentially novel areas of research that may extend our understandings of organizational power in management and organization science.

团队微观动力学: 迈向团队合作的组织化路径

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Team researchers in the field of organizational behavior (OB) seem to be increasingly aware of the need to embrace the organizing nature of teams. In this article, we outline the limitations of the prevailing static collectivist explanations in team research and suggest how an increased emphasis on a microdynamics-oriented approach that takes into account the essentially relational and organizing nature of teams can provide new insights to our understanding of teamwork. We argue that a multilevel, multi-theoretical, and multi-period framework may help enhance our understanding of teams. To show the advancements of the field in this sense, we review the OB literature on teams and highlight exemplars of research that have started to emphasize the microdynamic nature of teams consistent with this general framework, and their contributions to our understanding of team phenomena. We conclude by outlining the opportunities and needs for a microdynamic insight into team and teamwork, providing guidance for scholars who are interested in adding a microdynamic perspective into their models of teamwork.

7. An Aspirational Framework for Strategic Human Resource Management

战略人力资源管理的一个愿景框架

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The field of strategic human resource management (HRM) has a long and rich tradition. As a prelude to our description of the field's history, we provide an expansive definition of strategic HRM scholarship and offer an aspirational framework for strategic HRM scholarship that captures the multidisciplinary nature of the field. We then systematically review and critique three decades of strategic HRM theory and research, paying particular attention to the value of HRM systems as management tools for influencing a wide variety of outcomes of concern to internal (employees and their managers) and external (owners, customers, society, other organizations) stakeholders. In support of continued advancement of the empirical knowledge base of strategic HRM, we encourage new research that embraces systems thinking, more fully addresses the concerns of multiple stakeholders, and strives for greater practical usefulness by addressing significant problems such as managing innovation and environmental sustainability.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

There has been a growing debate about the role of history in management research with several authors making suggestions on how to bring the two (back) together and others even highlighting the need for a “historic turn”. What we argue in this paper is that, while history was indeed sidelined by the scientization of management since the late 1950s, it started to make a comeback from the 1980s onwards and is increasingly employed in a number of research programs. We stress that the crucial question for management scholars engaging with history (or wanting to do so) is how it relates to theory. First of all, we present a systematic overview of the way history has been used—both at the micro (organizational) and macro-levels of analysis—distinguishing between what we refer to as “history to theory” and “history in theory”. In the former, we consider those research programs, □Corresponding author. In the case of “history in theory” we identify research programs where history or the past are part of the theoretical model itself as a driver or moderator, with “imprinting” as a prime example. Second, we also identify a growing number of studies that go further by displaying what we call “historical cognizance” in the sense of incorporating period effects or historical contingencies into their theorizing efforts. Finally, drawing on our broad overview, we make more specific suggestions for increasing the visibility and influence of history in organization and management theory.

关于历史在管理研究中的作用的辩论日益增多，几位作者就如何将两者（重新）结合提出了建议，另一些作者甚至强调了“历史转向”的必要性。我们在本文中认为，虽然自 20 世纪 50 年代后期以来，管理学的科学化确实使历史边缘化，但它从 80 年代起开始回归，并越来越多地应用于许多研究计划中。我们强调，对于从事（或希望从事）历史研究的管理学者来说，关键问题是历史如何与理论相关联。首先，我们对历史的使用方式进行了系统的概述——包括微观（组织）和宏观分析层面——区分了我们所称的“历史通往理论”和“理论中的历史”。在前者中，我们考虑那些研究计划，* 通讯作者。电子邮件：mkippling@schulich.yorku.ca 《管理学会学报》(The Academy of Management Annals)，2014 年第 8 卷第 1 期，535–588 页，<http://dx.doi.org/10.1080/19416520.2014.911579> # 2014 Academy of Management 535，例如（新）制度主义，其中历史作为发展、修改或测试理论的证据。在“理论中的历史”情况下，我们识别出那些将历史或过去作为驱动因素或调节因素纳入理论模型本身的研究计划，其中“印记”是一个主要例子。其次，我们还发现越来越多的研究通过在理论化工作中纳入时期效应或历史偶然性，展示了我们所称的“历史认知”。最后，基于我们的广泛概述，我们为提高历史在组织和管理理论中的可见度和影响力提出了更具具体的建议。

留住高效员工：人格的作用

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Prior meta-analyses and quantitative reviews have examined the construct-related true-score correlations by personality in predicting important organizational outcomes or have focused on relatively specific, practical problems generally associated with using personality tests in selection. However, there lacks a theoretical integration of major theories developed in the literature. In this review, we propose an integrative research paradigm for personality research by identifying key mediating and moderating mechanisms explaining why, how and when personality traits predict employee work effectiveness. Based on the compatibility principle, we develop a theoretical model to reconceptualize the effect of the five-factor model (FFM) on broadly defined work effectiveness outcomes. We contend researchers have not exploited the breadth of the FFM bandwidth and thus have underestimated the predictive power of personality. In support of our new propositions, we systematically review the almost overwhelming literature by focusing on retaining productive employees, in order to contribute theoretically by identifying a few key generalizable findings and to improve managerial efficiency by uncovering possible “best practices” .

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Sensemaking is the process through which people work to understand issues or events that are novel, ambiguous, confusing, or in some other way violate expectations. As an activity central to organizing, sensemaking has been the subject of considerable research which has intensified over the last decade. We begin this review with a historical overview of the field, and develop a definition of sensemaking rooted in recurrent themes from the literature. We then review and integrate existing theory and research, focusing on two key bodies of work. The first explores how sensemaking is accomplished, unpacking the sensemaking process by examining how events become triggers for sensemaking, how intersubjective meaning is created, and the role of action in sensemaking. The second body considers how sensemaking enables the accomplishment of other key organizational processes, such organizational change, learning, and creativity and innovation. The final part of the chapter draws on areas of difference and debate highlighted throughout the review to discuss the implications of key tensions in the sensemaking literature, and identifies important theoretical and methodological opportunities for the field.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Although foundational organization theory recognized the role of both formal and informal elements, for the past two decades scholarship appears to have primarily attended to the role of informal social structures (i.e. social networks) in explaining organizational functioning. This trend, however, has left a disconnect between the literatures on formal organization and informal social structure such that crucial questions and problems at the intersection of the two Authors contributed equally. □Corresponding author. In this essay, we make the case for rediscovering the inherent interplay between formal organization and informal social structure given their common basis of interactions in organizations. We argue that by bridging the gap between formal organization and informal social structure scholarship we can advance our understanding of both the origins and evolution of social networks and the design and effective functioning of organizations. As a first step towards achieving greater integration of research on formal organization and informal social structure we: consolidate existing scholarly understanding in this area, profile the few studies that have begun to bridge the disconnect between formal and informal elements, identify conceptual logics for linking formal and informal elements, and propose an agenda for future research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Psychologists, sociologists, and philosophers have long recognized that people have multiple identities—based on attributes such as organizational membership, profession, gender, ethnicity, religion, nationality, and family role(s)—and that these multiple identities shape people’s actions in organizations. The current organizational literature on multiple identities, however, is sparse and scattered and has yet to fully capture this foundational idea. I review and organize the literature on multiple identities into five different theoretical perspectives: social psychological; microsociological; psychodynamic and developmental; critical; and intersectional. I then propose a way to take research on multiple identities forward using an intrapersonal identity network approach. Moving to an identity network approach offers two advances: first, it enables scholars to consider more than two identities simultaneously, and second, it helps scholars examine relationships among □Email: lramarajan@hbs.edu The Academy of Management Annals, 2014 Vol. 8, No. 1, 589–659, <http://dx.doi.org/10.1080/19416520.2014.912379> # 2014 Academy of Management 589 identities in greater detail. This is important because preliminary evidence suggests that multiple identities shape important outcomes in organizations, such as individual stress and well-being, intergroup conflict, perfor-

By providing a way to investigate patterns of relationships among multiple identities, the identity network approach can help scholars deepen their understanding of the consequences of multiple identities in organizations and spark novel research questions in the organizational literature.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Labor market intermediaries (LMIs) are entities that stand between the individual worker and the organization that needs work done. They include well-known operations such as executive search firms that act as brokers to fill jobs and temp agencies that lease labor to clients but also less familiar entities such as professional employer organizations (PEOs) that take on the legal obligations of employment for clients. LMI's mediate between individual workers and the organizations that need work done, shaping how workers are matched to organizations, how tasks are performed, and how conflicts are resolved [Autor, D.H. (2009). Studies of labor market intermediation: Introduction. In D. Autor (Ed.), Studies of labor market intermediation (pp. 1–26). Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press]. They essentially disintermediate aspects of management that had been performed by employers. The growth and increasing prominence of LMI's is important for all research associated with the workplace because we can no longer do a study of “workers” in an organization and assume that they are all employees: Some may be temps under contract to an agency, some may be “employed” by a PEO, some may work for vendors. The reason that matters is because LMI's appear to alter attitudes and behaviors on all sides. For example, they change the bilateral, employee–employer relationship into a three-way “triangular” relationship. They may well create “dual allegiance” issues, where individuals feel ties to the search firm that placed them in their current job and their employer or the agency that employs them and the client on whose behalf they are currently working. Most fundamentally, they challenge the existing paradigms we have used to understand the workplace: Does “attraction–selection–attrition” have any relevance, for example, when employers hire temps placed by agencies into permanent jobs? What does career development mean when the person with the most influence over your next job is a search consultant? There is already an extensive literature on LMIs, but it is spread across disciplines and fields and mainly examines the labor market outcomes associated with the use of LMIs. The literature lacks a management voice. We know relatively little about the effects of LMIs on workplace attitudes and behaviors, the central focus of organizational behavior; about how LMIs and the associated rise of outside hiring change how we should think about topics such as recruiting and selection, a central concern of personnel psychology; we know even less about how LMIs change the way firms think about competencies and boundaries of the firm, central topics in strategy, when the firm's workforce is actually employed by another organization or when it can be reshuffled very quickly. We develop a taxonomy of LMIs and use it to classify the burgeoning but disjointed literature on LMIs across the social sciences. We classify LMIs in terms of three main attributes of human resource (HR) practices that they perform: Information Providers, Matchmakers, and Administrators. We describe first how LMI activities differ from HR management practices performed by employers in the traditional relationship. Second, we outline the existing research about how LMIs affect employment outcomes, such as access to employment, wages, work-related attitudes and behaviors, working conditions, and skill development. Finally, we highlight the implications of LMIs for management research, especially new, understudied research questions that need to be addressed.

劳动力市场中介 (LMIs) 是介于个体劳动者和需要完成工作的组织之间的实体。它们包括众所周知的运作方式, 如充当填补职位空缺经纪人的猎头公司, 以及向客户租赁劳动力的临时派遣机构, 但也包括一些不太熟悉的实体, 如承担客户雇佣法律义务的专业雇主组织 (PEOs)。劳动力市场中介在个体劳动者和需要完成工作的组织之间起调解作用, 塑造了劳动者如何与组织匹配、任务如何执行以及冲突如何解决 [Autor, D.H. (2009). Studies of labor market intermediation: Introduction. In D. Autor (Ed.), Studies of labor market intermediation (pp. 1–26). Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press]。它们本质上使原本由雇主执行的管理方面去中介化。劳动力市场中介的增长和日益突出的地位对所有与职场相关的研究都很重要, 因为我们不能再对组织中“劳动者”的研究中假设他们都是雇员: 有些人可能是根据机构合同工作的临时工, 有些人可能被专业雇主组织“雇佣”, 有些人可能为供应商工作。之所以重要, 是因为劳动力市场中介似乎改变了各方的态度和行为。例如, 它们将双边的雇员-雇主关系转变为三方的“三角形”关系。它们很可能产生“双重忠诚”问题, 即个人对将他们安置在当前职位的猎头公司及其雇主, 或者对雇用他们的机构及其目前代表工作的客户都感到有联系。最根本的是, 它们挑战了我们用来理解职场的现有范式: 例如, 当雇主将机构安置的临时工转为永久职位时, “吸引-选择-磨合”模型是否还有相关性? 当对你的下一份工作影响最大的人是猎头顾问时, 职业发展意味着什么? 关于劳动力市场中介已有大量文献, 但散布在各个学科和领域, 且主要考察与使用劳动力市场中介相关的劳动力市场结果。文献中缺乏管理学的声音。我们对劳动力市场中介对职场态度和

行为（组织行为学的核心关注点）的影响知之甚少；对于劳动力市场中介以及相关的外部招聘兴起如何改变我们对招聘和选拔（人事心理学的核心关注点）等话题的思考，我们也知之甚少；当企业的劳动力实际上被另一家组织雇用或可以被快速重新洗牌时，劳动力市场中介如何改变企业对能力和企业边界（战略的核心话题）的思考，我们所知甚至更少。我们开发了一个劳动力市场中介的分类法，并用它来对社会科学领域中蓬勃发展但零散的劳动力市场中介文献进行分类。我们根据人力资源（HR）的三个主要属性对劳动力市场中介进行分类。

Several streams of literature have examined the phenomenon of “markets for inventions”, that is, the trade of elements of knowledge which are “disembodied” from individuals, organizations, and products. The aims of this paper are to bring together the various streams of research in this area and discuss their major assumptions and limitations, in order to provide a comprehensive framework for understanding the phenomenon, and identify promising paths for future research. We start our review by identifying the object of market exchange—that is, an invention whose knowledge has been codified and disembodied from individuals, organizations, or artifacts. We then identify those factors that enable firms to trade inventions, distinguishing between institutional-, firm-, and industry-level factors. We close our analysis of the extant literature by discussing the implications of markets for inventions for □Corresponding author. Against this background, we highlight an important avenue for future research. A neglected implication of the development of invention markets is that firms are confronted with a wide variety of technological paths from which to choose, because the opportunity to acquire technologies on the market offers them a greater variety than their internal R&D departments. However, the streams of research on markets for inventions and on R&D allocation strategies have been surprisingly disconnected so far. Hence, in the final section, we start to establish and explore the link between these literatures, and to identify a research agenda in this domain.

Research on managerial cognition and on organizational capabilities has essentially developed in two parallel tracks. We know much from the resource-based view about the relationship between capabilities and organizational performance. Separately, managerial cognition scholars have shown how interpretations of the environment shape organizational responses. Only recently have scholars begun to link the two sets of insights. These new links suggest that routines and capabilities are based in particular understandings about how things should be done, that the value of these capabilities is subject to interpretation, and that even the presence of capabilities may be useless without managerial interpretations of their match to the environment. This review organizes these emerging insights in a multi-level cognitive model of capability development and deployment. The model focuses on the Innovation is often thought of as an outcome. In this chapter, we review the literatures on innovation processes pertaining to the invention, development, and implementation of ideas. In particular, we explore how these processes unfold within firms, across multi-party networks, and within communities. Moreover, we identify four different kinds of complexities associated with innovation processes that we label as evolutionary, relational, temporal, and cultural complexities. More recently, work has been devoted to studying the processes and content associated with identity formation. Given the amount of scholarly work done to date, it is an appropriate time to reflect on the perspectives, controversies and outcomes of this body of work. Because organizational identity change has received the preponderance of attention, we first review that extensive literature. We consider the conceptual and empirical work concerning the three putative “pillars” of identity (i.e. that which is ostensibly central, enduring, and distinctive). We devote particular attention to the most controversial of these pillars—the debate pitting a view that sees identity as stable over time (a position we term as the “enduring identity proposition”) and a contrasting stance that sees identity as more changeable (the “dynamic identity proposition”). Following our review of the identity change literature, we next take up a review of the notably smaller compendium of work on identity formation. We consider the conceptual and empirical work devoted to studying the external influences on, as well as the internal resources used, to fashion a nascent identity. Finally, we discuss in more depth the controversies associated with the pillars of identity, assess the four prevalent views on organizational identity (the social construction, social actor, institutionalist, and population ecologist views), assimilate the research on both identity formation and change, and consider the prospects for future work on both phenomena.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This paper has three overarching objectives. The first is to document the development of the body of work known as women's entrepreneurship research. The second is to assess the contributions of this work, specifically vis-à-vis the broader entrepreneurship literature. The third is to discuss how this broader literature poses challenges (both difficulties as well as opportunities) for scholarship on female entrepreneurs. We approach these objectives from the standpoint of informed pluralism, seeking to explore whether and how women's entrepreneurship research offers extensions to—and can be extended by—general research on entrepreneurs and their ventures.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

There is a widely shared consensus that charismatic—transformational leadership is a particularly effective form of leadership. In a critical assessment of the state-of-the-science in this area of research, we question the validity of that conclusion. We identify four problems with theory and research in charismatic—transformational leadership. First, a clear conceptual definition of charismatic—transformational leadership is lacking. Current theories advance multi-dimensional conceptualizations of charismatic—transformational leadership without specifying how these different dimensions combine to form charismatic—transformational leadership, or how dimensions are selected for inclusion or exclusion. Second, theories fail to sufficiently specify the causal model capturing how each dimension has a distinct influence on mediating processes and outcomes and how this is contingent on moderating influences. Third, conceptualization and operationalization confounds charismatic—

Fourth, the most frequently used measurement tools are invalid in that they fail to reproduce the dimensional structure specified by theory and fail to achieve empirical distinctiveness from other aspects of leadership. Given that these problems are fundamental and inherent in the approaches analyzed, it is recommended that current approaches be abandoned, and that the field forego the label of charismatic—transformational leadership in favor of the study of more clearly defined and empirically distinct aspects of leadership.

广泛的共识认为，魅力型-变革型领导是一种特别有效的领导形式。在对该研究领域的科学现状进行的批判性评估中，我们对这一结论的有效性提出了质疑。我们识别了魅力型-变革型领导理论和研究中存在的四个问题。首先，缺乏对魅力型-变革型领导的明确概念定义。目前的理论提出了魅力型-变革型领导的多维概念化，但没有说明这些不同维度如何组合形成魅力型-变革型领导，或者如何选择维度进行纳入或排除。其次，理论未能充分说明捕捉每个维度如何对中介过程和结果产生独特影响，以及这如何取决于调节影响的因果模型。第三，概念化和操作化将魅力型-变革型领导与其效果混为一谈。第四，最常用的测量工具是无效的，因为它们未能重现理论指定的维度结构，也未能实现与其他领导方面的经验区分。鉴于这些问题是所分析的方法中根本且固有的，建议放弃当前的方法，并且该领域应放弃魅力型-变革型领导的标签，转而研究定义更明确且在经验上具有区分度的领导方面。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The concept of imprinting has attracted considerable interest in numerous fields—including organizational ecology, institutional theory, network analysis, and career research—and has been applied at several levels of analysis, from the industry to the individual. This article offers a critical review of this rich yet disparate literature and guides research toward a multilevel theory of imprinting. We start with a definition that captures the general features of imprinting across levels of analysis but is precise enough to remain distinct from seemingly similar concepts, such as path dependence and cohort effects. We then provide a framework to order and unite the splintered field of imprinting research at different levels of analysis. In doing so, we identify economic, technological, institutional, and individual influences that lead to imprints at the level of (a) organizational collectives, (b) single □Corresponding author. Building primarily on insights from the phenomenological tradition in organization theory and from social semiotics, this article sets out to consolidate previous scholarly efforts and to sketch a fertile future research agenda. After briefly exploring the workings of visuals, we introduce the methodological and

We then continue by extensively reviewing work in the field of organization and management studies: More specifically, we present five distinct approaches to feature visuals in research designs and to include the visual dimension in scholarly inquiry. Subsequently, we outline, in some detail, promising avenues for future research, and close with a reflection on the impact of visualization on scientific practice itself.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This paper encourages scholars of management to pay attention to the mutually constitutive nature of accounting, organizing, and economizing. This means viewing accounting as much more than an instrumental and purely technical activity. We identify four key roles of accounting: first, territorializing, the recursive construction of the calculable spaces that actors inhabit within organizations and society; second, mediating, that much of what accounting instruments and ideas do is to link up distinct actors, aspirations, and arenas; third, adjudicating, that accounting plays a decisive role in evaluating the performance of individuals and organizations, and also in determining failings and failures; and fourth, that accounting is a subjectivizing practice par excellence, that it both subjects individuals to control or regulation by another, while entailing the presumption of an individual free to choose. □Corresponding author. We examine these issues through a selective review of the accounting literature based on the construction of two intellectual histories. One deals with the growth of scholarly interest in organizations which created the conditions for a behavioral turn in accounting research and the embedding of accounting within management scholarship. The other schematic history deals with the emergence of normative accounting pedagogy and theory from practice. This was challenged by an empirical “revolution” drawing on the methods of analytical economics which was broadly market-based, facing away from management. We argue for a third body of work which reacts to the reductionism of both and which focuses on the processes by which accounting representations and metrics are simultaneously powerful interventions which shape people, practices, and organizations. We suggest that accounting is a mechanism by which the economization of organizational life becomes elaborated and institutionalized.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We propose a behavioral theory of corporate governance based on an ontological foundation of socially situated and socially constituted agency. More specifically, we advance a multi-level, mechanism-based, theory of governance that is socially informed yet actor-centric, and thus offers a distinct alternative to under-socialized governance theories, such as agency theory. We highlight the contributions of recent governance research in providing the foundation for such a behavioral theory, with particular emphasis on our prior work that demonstrated the relevance of social structural relationships, institutional processes, and social cognition. We conclude with a discussion of the central themes that emerge from our perspective.

A systematic analysis of RD's uses in the management literature lends some credence to this assessment. However, our analysis also shows a perspective that has been broadly influential and well-supported in applications that cross multiple empirical domains. Moreover, this impact has been achieved despite the widespread neglect of what is arguably RD's most distinctive insight; namely that an organization's external environment is composed of other organizations with diverse agendas and interests. The complexity that arises from these competing demands represents an important challenge for contemporary organizations. As scholars begin to crystalize a research agenda around this theme using an institutional logics perspective, we suggest that RD's unique insights on the topic are the keys to unlocking its contemporary relevance.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We provide a critical retrospective of the competitive dynamics perspective before proposing an integrative research platform for the future. We argue that competitive dynamics can serve as a synthesizing framework for linking strategy content and process, resource-based and market perspectives, strategy development and implementation, and macro-competitive and micro-actor viewpoints. We first present the core distinguishing elements and purposes of competitive dynamics. Then, we identify and relate the most prominent research themes in the field: a focus on action/response dyads, strategic competitive behaviors, competitive repertoires, corporate-level competitive and resource analyses, and competitive perceptions. Characteristic methodological concerns are also discussed. Recent trends in each of these areas are highlighted; these include an increased emphasis on context-specific research, cross-border investigations, and behavioral interdependencies. We conclude by identifying gaps in the literature and proposing a general model and research agenda that integrates micro-behavioral and macro-organizational aspects of strategy and connects competitive dynamics to previously unexplored domains in the literature. There is some repetition in the presentation so that most sections can be read independently.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This paper reviews the literature on forms of leadership that in one way or other imply plurality: that is, the combined influence of multiple leaders in specific organizational situations. We identify four streams of scholarship on plural leadership, each focusing on somewhat different phenomena and adopting different epistemological and methodological assumptions. Specifically, these streams focus on sharing leadership in teams, on pooling leadership at the top of organizations, on spreading leadership across boundaries over time, and on producing leadership through interaction. The streams of research vary according to their representations of plural leadership as structured or emergent and as mutual or coalitional. We note tensions between perspectives that advocate pluralizing leadership in settings of concentrated authority and those concerned with channeling the forms of plurality naturally found in diffuse power settings such as professional organizations or inter-organizational partnerships. It is suggested that future research might pay more attention to social network perspectives, to the dynamics of plural leadership, to the role of power, and to critical perspectives on leadership discourse.

及通过互动产生的领导。这些研究流派根据其多元领导的表征（结构化的或涌现的，以及相互的或联盟的）而有所不同。我们注意到，在权力集中的背景下倡导多元化领导的观点，与在专业组织或组织间伙伴关系等权力分散的背景下关注引导自然发现的多元化形式的观点之间存在张力。建议未来的研究可以更多地关注社会网络视角、多元领导的动态、权力的作用以及对领导话语的批判性视角。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The Behavioral Theory of the Firm has had an enormous influence on organizational theory, strategic management, and neighboring fields of socio- scientific inquiry. Its central concepts have become foundational to any theoretical and empirical work focussed on organizational phenomena. Unlike past reviews of this work, we start by focusing less on reviewing these concepts than we do on discussing the new agenda they created for students □Corresponding author. We then explain the theoretical commitments implied by its agenda before we trace and evaluate progress on a set of research issues inspired by its agenda: cognition, performance feedback, politics, attention, learning, and adaptation. Finally, we offer a broader assessment of the theory by looking both at original ideas that have seen less developments and at modern developments in the field that deserve to be incorporated into the Behavioral Theory of the Firm. In the open-system spirit of the Behavioral Theory of the Firm, we conclude that its agenda will continue to benefit from work both by its closest adherents and by work in related research traditions.

This paper unpacks two underspecified facets of collaboration: cooperation and coordination. Prior research has emphasized cooperation, specifically partners' commitment and alignment of interests, as the key determinant of collaborative success. Scholars have paid less attention to the critical role of coordination—the effective alignment and adjustment of partners' actions. To redress this imbalance, we conceptually disentangle cooperation and coordination in the context of inter-organizational collaboration, and examine how the two phenomena play out in the partner selection, design, and post-formation stages of an alliance' s life cycle. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Interest in the analysis of organizational discourse has expanded rapidly over the last two decades. In this article, we reflect critically on organizational discourse analysis as an approach to the study of organizations and management, highlighting both its strengths and areas of challenge. We begin with an explanation of the nature of organizational discourse analysis and outline some of the more significant contributions made to date. We then discuss existing classifications of approaches to the study of organizational discourse and suggest that they fall into two main categories: classifications by level of analysis and classifications by type of method. We argue that both of these approaches are inherently problematic and present an alternative way to understand the varieties of approaches to the analysis of organizational discourse based on within domain and across domain characterizations. We conclude with a discussion of the challenges that remain in the development of organizational discourse as an area of study and point to some of the opportunities for important and unique contributions to our understanding of organizations and management that this family of methods brings.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Given the profound role that religion continues to play in contemporary societies, it is surprising that management researchers have not explored the intersection between religion and organization in a more meaningful and determined way. This may be because religion is considered too far removed from the commercial organizations that form the empirical focus of much work in the discipline, or simply because it is deemed too sensitive. Whatever the reason, the upshot is that we know relatively little about the dynamics of religious organizational forms or the influence of these forms (and the values and practices that underpin them) on broader social processes and other kinds of organization. This paper is designed to highlight the potential of religion as a domain of study in management and to provide concrete suggestions for taking forward research in this area. This article reviews research in Strategy-as-Practice (SAP) and suggests directions for its development. The power of this perspective lies in its ability to explain how strategy-making is enabled and constrained by prevailing organizational and societal practices. Our review shows how SAP research has helped to advance social theories in strategic management, offered alternatives to performance-dominated analyses, broadened the scope in terms of organizations studied and promoted new methodologies. In particular, it has provided important insights into the tools and methods of strategy-making (practices), how strategy work takes place (praxis), and the role and identity of the actors involved (practitioners). Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

After nearly 30 years as a subject of inquiry, mentoring remains a mainstay in the organizational literature, as relationships are arguably more important than ever to employees' personal and career growth. In this paper, we take an ecological perspective to situate and review topical areas of the literature with the intention of enhancing our understanding of how mentoring outcomes for protégés and mentors are determined not only by individual differences (e.g., personality) and dyadic factors (e.g., the quality of a relationship)—both of which represent the most frequently examined levels □Corresponding author. Our review examines multi-level influences that shape mentoring outcomes, and brings into focus how the study of mentoring can be advanced by research at the network, organizational, and macrosystem levels. To help guide future research efforts, we assert that adult development and relational schema theories, Positive Organizational Scholarship, a social network perspective, signaling theory, and institutional theories can help to address emerging and unanswered questions at each ecological level.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The growing interest in impact-driven research invites organization and strategy scholars to not merely study, but actively help address grand challenges. This essay explores how action research might offer a robust methodology to impact and study grand challenges by developing theory through action. Action research is introduced, and its contributions, strengths, and limitations are discussed in view of the current conversation about impact-driven scholarly work. Some practical guidance is given to bring action research within reach as a viable approach. The essay concludes with an exploration of how a fuller embrace of action research might help transform academic practice in the interest of urgent planetary change.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We know that groups are dynamic entities, and yet we rarely study them as such. Previously hamstrung by limited theory, a decade of advances in understanding the fundamental nature of groups and change promised a revolution in group research. Our goal here is to review those theoretical developments and then examine their impact on our empirical understanding of group dynamics. Examining work done and not done, we will take stock of this work, identify the obstacles that seem to keep us focused more on group statics than dynamics, and then close by offering suggestions about not only what approaches to take. □Corresponding author. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Economic activity taking place within the informal sector—traditionally defined as activity unregulated by law but governed by custom or personal ties—represents an emerging frontier for management researchers with interests from alleviating poverty at the bottom of the economic pyramid to entrepreneurship, innovation, or organizational functioning in advanced knowledge economies. A substantial portion of the world's economic activity takes place informally, with many developing nations having more than one half of their output derived from the informal sector and the advanced economies witnessing an increase in informal economic activity. I review the literature in economics, sociology, political science and public policy, and management and show that defining the informal economy proves problematic; current definitions of the informal economy fail to converge around a unitary construct. I then use these disparities in the literature to generate a model of the informal economy clear enough to foster a distinct research agenda.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Written for the ‘Crisis Management Keystone’ special issue by the guest editorial team, this editorial piece provides the background and aim of the special issue and synthesizes the keystone themes emerged from the published articles. It further points out new directions for practitioners and scholars to jointly optimize the crisis management architecture and advance crisis communication leadership globally. In April 2023, as a celebration remark of the successful Crisis Communication Think Tank (CCTT) annual gathering, Dick Yarbrough, one of the leading crisis communication practitioners in the history of contemporary public relations, wrote to CCTT members: ‘Ben Franklin said only two things are certain: Death and taxes. To that, I would add crises’. Given the certainty of crisis occurrences and the uncertainty, as well as complexity, of how to manage them, effective crisis communication is essential (Jin 2023). Crisis communication leadership is at the core of tackling recurrent and severe ‘sticky crisis’ challenges (Coombs, Holladay, and White 2021; Reber et al. 2021). Sticky crises, a concept originated at the 2019 CCTT gathering, ‘demand not only a near-instant response, but they may require crisis communicators to see possibilities, understand the potential breadth and scope of an emerging crisis, and be ready to change strategy and tactics quickly’ (7, Reber et al. 2021). Organizations and industries across sectors and geographical market boundaries need to collaborate to rethink, rebuild and innovate together to devise an interdisciplinary, interconnected and international crisis management system, to be ready for issues, risks, conflicts, crises and sticky crises. This urgent need was debated and deliberated among practitioners and scholars at the 2023 CCTT gathering. The collective quest for the crisis management keystone led to the development of the ‘Crisis Management Keystone’ special issue in collaboration with the Journal of Contingencies and Crisis Management (JCCM). 1 | The Quest for Crisis Management Keystone Built upon ‘“The Best of Both Worlds” : The CCTT Approach to The Quest for Crisis Management Keystone’, an insight piece written for the JCCM (Jin 2023), the notion of a keystone draws a parallel to the central brick that keeps the arch from collapsing, thus providing core stability in the backbone of crisis management (Crisis Communication Think Tank 2023). Confronted by challenging and complex sticky crisis issues, it is essential for crisis management scholars and practitioners to identify and carve the ‘Crisis Management Keystone’ together to build a new architecture for crisis management. The CCTT’s call for the collective quest for the crisis management keystone, positing the essential questions, including ‘Have AI, VR and the metaverse changed our inherited blueprint for crisis management?’ and ‘How do organizations and stakeholders perceive these newly constructed realities?’, among others. The CCTT also advocates for the state of the crisis management field to be routinely examined as practitioners and This is an open access article under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs License, which permits use and distribution in any medium, provided the original work is properly cited, the use is non-commercial and no modifications or adaptations are made.

While it occupies a minority position in the study of organization and management, discovery- oriented research practice has a long tradition of giving insight into new, unap- preciated and misappreciated processes that are important to how work is accomplished. I argue that while methods discourse has long emphasized that particularizing data and an emergent research design are productive for discovery, little to no attention has been paid to the conjectural processes necessary to imaginatively interpret these observations. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Within organizations, employees continually confront situations that put them face to face with the decision of whether to speak up (i.e., voice) or remain silent when they have potentially useful information or ideas. In recent years, there has been a rapidly growing body of conceptual and empirical research focused on better understanding the motives underlying voice, individual, and situational factors that increase employee voice behavior, and the implications of voice and silence for employees, work groups, and organizations. Yet this literature has notable gaps and unresolved issues, and it is not entirely clear where future scholarship should be directed. This article, therefore, is an attempt to review and integrate the existing literature on employee voice and also to provide some direction for future research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Organizational routines, repetitive patterns of interdependent organizational actions, have been investigated through the lens of capabilities, rooted in organizational economics, and the lens of practice, grounded in organization theory. The former approach emphasizes the "what" or "why," while the latter emphasizes the "how." In this review, we summarize both of these literatures and explore recent empirical studies in each stream, identifying common themes. In particular, we compare and contrast how each perspective incorporates the effects of individual actors, tacit knowledge, ambidexterity, and context specificity. We find that the two streams of work have distinct trajectories and strengths, but elements of each can be complementary to developing a more holistic understanding of organizational routines.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

A wealth of literature documents how the common failure to think about the self-interests of others contributes to suboptimal outcomes. Yet sometimes, an excess of cynicism appears to lead us to over-think the actions of others and make negative attributions about their motivations without sufficient cause. In the process, we may miss opportunities that greater trust might capture. We review the research on when people expect too little or too much self-interest in the intentions of others, as contrasted with rational behavior. We also discuss the antecedents and consequences of these naïve and cynical errors, as well as some potential strategies to buffer against their effects and achieve better outcomes in competitive contexts.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The recent financial crisis, and repeated corporate scandals, raise serious questions about whether a business school education contributes to what some have described as a culture of greed. The dominance of economic-related courses in MBA curricula led us to assess the effects of economics education on greed in three studies using multiple methods. Study 1 found that economics majors and students who had taken multiple economics courses kept more money in a money allocation task (the Dictator Game). Study 2 found that economics education was associated with more positive attitudes toward greed and toward one's own greedy behavior. Study 3 found that a short statement on the societal benefits of self-interest led to more positive ratings of greed's moral acceptability, even for noneconomics students. These effects suggest that economics education may have serious, albeit unintended consequences on our students' attitudes toward greed.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

A central role of the entrepreneur-manager is assembling a strategic bundle of complementary assets and activities, either existing or foreseen, which when combined create value for the firm. This process of creating value, however, requires managers to assess which activities should be handled by the market and which should be handled within hierarchy. Indeed, for more than 40 years, economists, sociologists and organizational scholars have extensively examined the theory of the firm's central question: what determines the boundaries of the firm? Many alternative theories have emerged and are frequently positioned as competing explanations, often with no shortage of critique for one another. In this paper, we review these theories and suggest that the core theories that have emerged to explain the boundary of the firm commonly address distinctly different directional forces on the firm boundary—forces that are tightly interrelated. We specifically address these divergent, directional forces—as they relate to □Corresponding author. In this article, we examine the state of the art in comparative and international corporate governance by identifying the key research questions, main concepts, and paradigms of explanations of cross-country diversity in corporate governance. First, we discuss the multiple definitions of corporate governance across disciplines and explore how this multi-dimensional nature of corporate governance poses challenges when making cross-national comparisons. Second, we review existing comparative research on corporate governance and highlight some of the main characteristics of comparative analysis. Third, we analyze how comparative corporate governance has been understood from four different scholarly perspectives: economics and management, culture and sociology, legal, and political paradigms. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Two approaches to studying opportunities have emerged in the entrepreneurship literature. This paper shows that the first of these approaches—which focuses on how alert entrepreneurs discover objective opportunities formed by exogenous shocks in an existing market—adopts a critical realist perspective. The second approach—which focuses on opportunities that are endogenously enacted by the actions of entrepreneurs themselves and do not have an existence independent of those human actions—adopts an evolutionary realist perspective. Differences between these epistemological assumptions have an important impact on opportunity research in the field of entrepreneurship, and thus are likely to have an important impact on the evolution of research, practice, and teaching in the field of entrepreneurship as a whole.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Despite the centrality of products in many strategic and managerial theoretical frameworks, little is known systematically about how and why specific products come and go from markets. We argue that narrowing this gap will likely enhance management theory, and we propose that research on product demography—the social lives of products—is a promising way to proceed. For organizing various theoretical ideas used in prior studies, we offer a classification framework. It defines four broad theoretical perspectives on product demography: market rationality, firm rationality, organizational bounded rationality, and institutional rationality. We also outline an approach to product demography that studies empirically the rates of product launch, growth, and withdrawal using stochastic models and data on all products ever appearing in bounded industrial domains. Finally, we discuss the challenges presented by such a fragmented approach to research on product demography and propose a generic research program intended to avoid stagnation.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Norms determine regular patterns of behavior and influence members' identification with a group. They are also a proximate way to predict and understand behavior in diverse work groups but, surprisingly, have not been extensively examined in this context. After reviewing research on group norms and the psychology of prejudice, I suggest that reaping the benefits of the increased range of available task relevant resources in demographically diverse work groups may depend on the strength and content of the norms it adopts, but that diverse groups face distinct obstacles in developing strong norms that create satisfying interpersonal interaction and effective work performance. I consider the difficulties diverse work groups have in forming strong norms and then focus on how anti-bias norms, which are directed toward preventing behaviors associated with prejudice and discrimination and address members' security concerns, and openness norms, which promote people's ability to individuate those whom they might otherwise stereotype as well as address nurturance concerns, may increase a work group's ability to optimize social interaction and performance amidst diversity. I suggest that reorienting psychological and organizational research on prejudice to focus on group norm strength and content may be a way of both understanding and solving the greater challenges of discrimination.

A long-standing debate in organization studies has centered on the tension between paradigmatic consensus and theoretical pluralism in an academic field, but little attention has been paid to the underlying processes of field development that account for this. Using a mechanisms-based approach, we examined the field of leadership over the last 50 years (1957–2007) focusing on: scholarly consensus on theory and methods; models and variables; and examinations of the state of the field. In spite of considerable advances in research, we find a general lack of commensuration or standards by which theories can be compared or synthesized; an emphasis on leaders' effects on performance rather than meaning-making or value infusion; and sparse instances of taking stock of the overall field. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Content to conceive of inequity distress as a hypothetical construct instead of an intervening variable, a half century of research inspired by equity theory has paid little attention to measuring inequity distress. At the turn of the twenty- first century, however, European epidemiologists, interested in determinants of ill health, found that injustice is a source of adverse emotional reactions that put people at risk for mental and physical morbidity (e.g., depression and coronary heart disease). This research is reviewed here, along with studies identifying pathways accounting for these connections. Specifically, perceived injustices lead to negative emotional reactions and to unhealthy behaviors (e.g., being sedentary, smoking, and drinking excessively), both of which trigger various negative bodily reactions (e.g., elevated serum lipids). These, in turn, subsequently put people at risk of illness. Research has found that such effects are mitigated by organizational interventions that promote perceptions of justice. Three limitations warranting consideration in future research are discussed: (a) the need to address methodological concerns (e.g., reducing common method variance, improving efforts to determine causality), (b) the *Email: jgreenbe@rand.org 206 • The Academy of Management Annals need to assess the cultural generalizability of research findings, and (c) the need to supplement the existing attention to disease with a new focus on health and well-being.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Given the growing popularity of the social network perspective across diverse organizational subject areas, this review examines the coherence of the research tradition (in terms of leading ideas from which the diversity of new research derives) and appraises current directions and controversies. The leading ideas at the heart of the organizational social network research program include: an emphasis on relations between actors; the embeddedness of exchange in social relations; the assumption that dyadic relationships do not occur in isolation, but rather form a complex structural pattern of connectivity and cleavage beyond the dyad; and the belief that social network connections matter in terms of outcomes to both actors and groups of actors across a range of indicators. These leading ideas are articulated in current debates that center on issues of actor characteristics, agency, cognition, cooperation versus competition, and boundary specification. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Organizational scholars have long touted the myriad benefits of trust for organizational functioning and performance. Recent surveys, however, document pervasive deficits in such trust. This article addresses the important topic of reducing these deficits. Our attack on this problem is two pronged. First, we examine approaches to repairing damaged trust within organizational settings. Specifically, we assess the state of organizational theory and knowledge regarding effective approaches to trust repair after internal or external events have weakened or damaged trust in an organization. We define what is meant by trust repair, review the most common ways that trust is broken, and then explore the three major approaches that have received the most attention in trust-repair research. We then address the question of how trust, once repaired, can be enhanced and made more durable and stable. Specifically, we examine theory and evidence regarding the antecedent conditions that support the development and maintenance of what we term presumptive trust among organizational members. We conclude the article with some recommendations of fruitful directions for future research.

Jim March's framework of exploration and exploitation has drawn substantial interest from scholars studying phenomena such as organizational learning, knowledge management, innovation, organizational design, and strategic alliances. This framework has become an essential lens for interpreting various behaviors and outcomes within and across organizations. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Over the past two decades, organizational scholars have increasingly argued that technology's affects on organizations are socially constructed. Constructivists who study implementation generally hold that organizational change emerges from an ongoing stream of social action in which people respond to a technology's constraints and affordances, as well as to each other. Although most students of technology and organizing generally agree on the ontology of constructivism, there are considerable differences in what scholars mean when they say that a technology's affects are socially constructed. We show that research on the social construction of implementation clusters into five coherent perspectives, which we call perception, interpretation, appropriation, enactment, and alignment. The perspectives differ with regard to the social phenomena they study and the processes by which they claim that construction occurs. The perspectives also focus on different phases of the implementation process and operate at different levels of analysis. After elucidating each perspective, we argue that students of technology and organizing could more directly engage issues central to organizational theory if they grappled with materiality and power, which they have heretofore downplayed in an attempt to counteract the field's earlier tendency toward technological determinism.

在过去的二十年里，组织学者越来越多地认为技术对组织的影响是社会建构的。研究实施过程的建构主义者通常认为，组织变革源于持续不断的社会行动流，在这一过程中，人们对技术的约束和可供性以及彼此之间做出反应。尽管大多数研究技术与组织的学者在建构主义的本体论上基本达成一致，但学者们在谈论技术的影响是社会建构的时，其含义存在显著差异。我们展示了关于实施的社会建构研究聚集为五个连贯的视角，我们称之为感知、解释、拨用、搬演和对齐。这些视角在它们所研究的社会现象以及它们声称建构发生的过程方面有所不同。这些视角还关注实施过程的不同阶段，并在不同的分析层面上运作。在阐明每个视角之后，我们认为，如果研究技术与组织的学者能够更直接地参与组织理论的核心议题，他们就能更直接地处理物质性和权力问题，而此前为了抵消该领域早期向技术决定论倾斜的趋势，他们一直淡化了这些问题。

Organizations invest millions of dollars in workplace learning programs to develop human capital for competitive advantage. The effectiveness of work- place learning programs is directly linked to learner motivation. However, we contend that our current understanding of learner motivation and workplace learning is limited by the tendency to conduct research based on the traditional instructional system design model and the limited adoption of organizational behavior theories to guide such research. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

For the last 30 years a growing number of scholars and practitioners have been experimenting with concepts and models that facilitate our understanding of the complexities of today's business challenges. Among these, "stakeholder theory" or "stakeholder thinking" has emerged as a new narrative to understand and remedy three interconnected business problems—the problem of understanding how value is created and traded, the problem of connecting ethics and capitalism, and the problem of helping managers think about management such that the first two problems are addressed. In this article, we review the major uses and adaptations of stakeholder theory across a broad array of disciplines such as business ethics, corporate strategy, finance, accounting, management, and marketing. We also evaluate and suggest future directions in which research on stakeholder theory can continue to provide useful insights into the practice of sustainable and ethical value creation.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This essay aims to “materialize” organizational communication in three senses. First, we seek to make the field of study bearing this name more tangible for North American management scholars, such that recognition and engagement become common. To do so, we trace the development of the field’s major contribution thus far: the communication-as-constitutive principle, which highlights how communication generates defining realities of organizational life, such as culture, power, networks, and the structure–agency relation. Second, we argue that this promising contribution cannot easily find traction in management studies until it becomes “materialized” in another sense: that is, accountable to the materiality evident in organizational objects, sites, and bodies. By synthesizing current moves in this direction, we establish the basis for sustained exchange between management studies and the communication-as-constitutive model. Third, we demonstrate how these conceptual developments can “materialize” in empirical study, proposing three streams of research designed to examine communication as a central organizing process that manages the intersection of symbolic and material worlds.

本文旨在从三个意义上“物质化”组织沟通。首先，我们力求使以此命名的研究领域对北美管理学者而言更加具体，从而使认可和参与变得普遍。为此，我们追溯了该领域迄今为止主要贡献的发展：沟通即构成（communication-as-constitutive）原则，该原则强调了沟通如何产生组织生活的定义性现实，如文化、权力、网络以及结构与代理关系。其次，我们认为，除非这一极具前景的贡献在另一种意义上变得“物质化”——即对组织对象、场所和身体中明显的物质性负责，否则它很难在管理研究中获得动力。通过综合这一方向的当前动向，我们为管理研究与“沟通即构成”模型之间的持续交流奠定了基础。第三，我们展示了这些概念发展如何能在实证研究中“物质化”，提出了三支研究流派，旨在将沟通视为管理象征世界与物质世界交汇的核心组织过程。

As well as review the literature on the notion of institutional entrepreneurship introduced by Paul DiMaggio in 1988, we propose a model of the process of institutional entrepreneurship. We first present theoretical and definitional issues associated with the concept and propose a conceptual account of institutional entrepreneurship that helps to accommodate them. We then present the different phases of the process of institutional entrepreneurship from the emergence of institutional entrepreneurs to their implementation of change. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The purpose of this paper is to review the existing empirical evidence and provide an integrative framework for the growing body of literature that is situated at the intersection of two highly debated topics: merger and acquisition (M&A) activities and executive compensation. The proposed framework structures the literature along two dimensions, such as M&A phases and firm's role in a M&A deal, allowing us to identify three main streams of research and five different conceptualizations of causal relationships between M&A transactions and executive compensation. Making a comprehensive review of empirical studies conducted to date we aim at shedding more light on the current and emerging knowledge in this field of investigation, discussing the inconsistencies encountered within each stream of research and suggesting promising directions for further exploration.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Process fairness refers to people's perceptions of how fairly they are treated in the course of interacting with another party. Conceptually distinct from outcome fairness, it subsumes procedural fairness, interpersonal fairness, and the like. As recipients of decisions, we generally want to be treated with more rather than with less process fairness. As agents of decisions, we often would rather plan and implement them with more rather than with less process fairness. Whereas the organizational justice literature generally extols the virtues of high process fairness, recent theory and research suggest that when it comes to process fairness, more is not always better than less. We discuss why, when, and how people's general tendency to desire higher process fairness over lower process fairness may be attenuated, eliminated, or even reversed. Our analysis is organized by the notion that under some conditions, receiving or acting with high process fairness prevents people from satisfying some of their basic psychological motives, such as their needs to feel good about themselves or to maintain a sense of control. Future research directions also are considered.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Cross-cultural research has achieved a front-and-center role in management and social psychology. In this chapter, we attempt to address the fundamental issue of what makes cross-cultural research valuable. In doing so, we first summarize major methodological and conceptual themes across recent reviews. We then raise the question about the criticality of cross-cultural differences, i.e., whether cross-cultural differences are required for research in this domain to matter. Most efforts exerted by cross-cultural researchers have been directed toward uncovering and explaining cross-cultural differences, or finding better ways to do so. However, differences per se do not necessarily make an important difference in advancing knowledge. Instead, we argue that a more fundamental value of cross-cultural research is the diverse perspectives it offers for theoretical innovation. Using Wagner and Berger's (1985) typology, we examine how the inclusion of "other cultural" perspectives has contributed to knowledge growth in social psychology and organizational behavior. We conclude with suggestions for how the field can further realize the inherent benefits of diverse cultural perspectives in future research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

In this chapter, we address three pay for performance (PFP) questions. First, what are the conceptual mechanisms by which PFP influences performance? Second, what programs do organizations use to implement PFP and what is the empirical evidence on their effectiveness? Third, what perils and pitfalls arise on the way from PFP theory to its execution in organizations? We address these questions in general terms, but also highlight unique issues that arise in PFP for teams and for executives. We highlight the fact that research and practice in the area of PFP requires one to deal with a number of trade-offs. For example, strengthening PFP links can generate powerful motivation *Corresponding author. Email: bgerhart@bus.wisc.edu 252

• The Academy of Management Annals effects, but sometimes these are in unintended and unanticipated directions, resulting in undesirable effects. In addition, there are also trade-offs in deciding the degree of emphasis to give to individual versus team performance and to results versus behaviors in PFP plans. What all this means is that, as in other areas of management, “one best way” advice (e.g., do or do not use individual PFP plans) or “sound-bite” conclusions (e.g., PFP does not exist; PFP does or does not motivate) are rarely valid, but rather depend on the circumstances and the organization. In the realm of executive pay, we question the current conventional wisdom in the management literature that there is little or no PFP. We close the chapter with a discussion of our key conclusions and suggestions for what we think would be the most interesting and useful future research areas. We encourage the management literature, which has increasingly become interested in the concept of evidence-based management, to execute this concept more effectively in its research and when talking or writing about pay.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Many scholars assume that the fundamental questions about work design have been answered. However, a global shift from manufacturing economies to service and knowledge economies has dramatically altered the nature of work in organizations. To keep pace with these important and rapid changes, work design theory and research is undergoing a transformation. We trace the highlights of two emerging viewpoints on work design: relational perspectives and proactive perspectives. Relational perspectives focus on how jobs, roles, and tasks are more socially embedded than ever before, based on increases in interdependence and interactions with coworkers and service recipients. Proactive perspectives capture the growing importance of employees taking initiative to anticipate and create changes in how work is performed, based on increases in uncertainty and dynamism. Together, these two perspectives challenge the widely held belief that new developments in work design theory and research are no longer needed. Our review charts the central contributions and unanswered questions from these relational and proactive perspectives with the goal of inspiring renewed interest in advancing theory, research, and practice on work design.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

China's economic transition and its integration into the global economy have been widely recognized as among the most important social changes in the past three decades. This transformation has attracted scholarly attention from multiple disciplines, and sociologists have made particularly important contributions to literature emphasizing theories of organizations, organizational change, and management practice. In this article, we present a critical review of the state of sociological literature on organization and management issues in the transition process. We focus on studies that explore how organizations shaped the trajectory of China's economic transition, how organizations affect important social and economic outcomes during transition, and the unique challenges that managers face in China's transition context. We conclude with suggestions for resolving central debates and future research directions. *Corresponding author. Email: Lkeister@soc.duke.edu 378 • The Academy of Management Annals Organizations and Management in China Dramatic changes in the global political and economic landscape have produced a large number of transition economies in recent decades. China's transition and concurrent entry into the international economy have been among the most widely studied of these transitions. Not only has China become a natural laboratory for studying organizations and their behavior, but it has also become a place where an increasing number of innovations in management practice are born. In this article, we take stock of the current state of research on organization and management in China. We focus on three questions that have formed the foundation of the study of organizations and management in China: (1) what role do organizations play in shaping the trajectory of China's economic transition? (2) what role do organizations play in shaping important social and economic outcomes during transition? and (3) what unique challenges do managers face in China's rapidly changing economic and political context? Given that research on market transition has grown dramatically across the social sciences, the full corpus of transition research is far too extensive to address adequately in a single article. Therefore, we narrow the topic in several ways. First, we focus on research from sociology. Most of the work that we discuss is interdisciplinary to some extent, and we necessarily address ideas that originate in other disciplines or that have influenced research outside of sociology. However, because research on transition is so extensive and debates about the transition process are centered in sociology, we concentrate our discussion on research and ideas originating from sociology. Second, we concentrate on research that bears some relevance to organizations or management of organizations. We do not exclude work that does not specifically address organizations or management, but we focus on work that is related in some way to these subjects. Third, we focus on ideas rather than empirical tests of those ideas. We do not omit discussions of empirical results entirely, but we are unable to deal completely with all the nuanced empirical discussions and debates related to market transition. Nee and Oppen (in press) provide an excellent summary of the empirical literature.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Tests and assessments are used in organizations for a wide range of purposes, and it is the uses of tests, not the tests themselves, that are validated. As a result, the critical question is often not "Is this test valid?", but rather "Valid for what?". Tests normally have multiple uses and purposes in organizations, which may be defined and understood differently by different stakeholders, and tests might have as many validities as they have uses. The strengths and weaknesses of existing validation strategies are examined and compared in the light of the ways tests are used in organizations. Content validation often seems unconnected with the ways tests are used and interpreted in organizations, and is not always useful a strategy for validating tests. Criterion-oriented validation methods (including sophisticated variants, such as the validity generalization model) are often deficient because they apply a univariate strategy for evaluating what is clearly a multivariate phenomenon—i.e., use of test scores to make high-stakes decisions in organization. Multivariate models of validation provide an opportunity to integrate qualitatively different criteria (e.g., efficiency and equity) in evaluating the validity of a test as it is used in an organization.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Coordination, the process of interaction that integrates a collective set of interdependent tasks, is a central purpose of organizations. In this review we begin by discussing the origins of interest in coordination, tracing some of the classic perspectives. We present a review of recent literature on coordination in organizations arranged according to the mechanisms that help achieve it. We then go beyond this review to provide a framework to understand what different coordination mechanisms and activities accomplish. We propose that coordination mechanisms (such as routines, meetings, plans, and schedules) impact the work of organizations by creating three integrative conditions for coordinated activity: accountability, predictability, and common understanding. We end by examining the implications of such a perspective for future research on coordination in organizations.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We review and integrate existing research from organization theory, strategy, organizational behavior, economics, sociology and political science on the effects of governments on organization and management, with a focus on how governing ideology and government capability influence independent organizations' forms, strategies, and their participants' behavior. When brought together these works suggest significant research opportunities in the fields of management and organization, as well as new perspectives on public policy challenges. Several avenues of potentially profitable empirical research include more attention to the influence of government on corporate strategies, more research on the strategies of pursuing corruption and government capture for competitive advantage, the role of government in fostering innovation and the growth of entrepreneurial organizations, and extra-organizational contextual effects on managerial and employee organizational behavior. Possible public policy implications are illustrated with an application to the role of organizations in national wealth generation and dispersion.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

A large segment of management research in recent years has used structural equation modeling (SEM) as an analytical approach that simultaneously combines factor analysis and linear regression models for theory testing. With this approach, latent variables (factors) represent the concepts of a theory, and data from measures (indicators) are used as input for statistical analyses that provide evidence about the relationships among latent variables. This chapter *Corresponding author. Email: ljwilli1@vcu.edu 544 • The Academy of Management Annals first provides a brief introduction to SEM and its concepts and terminology. We then discuss four issues related to the measurement component of such models, including how indicators are developed, types of relationships between indicators and latent variables, approaches for multidimensional constructs, and analyses needed when data from multiple time points or multiple groups are examined. In our second major section, we focus on six issues related to the structural component of structural equation models, including how to examine mediation and moderation, dealing with longitudinal and multilevel data, issues related to the use of control variables, and judging the adequacy of models and latent variable relationships. We conclude with a set of recommendations for how future applications of SEM in management research can be improved.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Schumpeter's conjecture that large monopolistic firms were the key source of innovation in modern industrial economies has been the underpinning for much work on the topic of innovation. In this review paper we consciously move beyond the Schumpeterian tradition of focusing on firm size and market structure as the primary determinants of innovation to identify a broader set of innovation determinants that have been investigated by the management literature. We make a distinction between innovative efforts and innovative output and for each of these outcomes we group the determinants *Corresponding author. Email: gahuja@umich.edu 2 • The Academy of Management Annals of innovation into four broad headings—industry structure, firm characteristics, intra-organizational attributes, and institutional influences. We examine four aspects of the industrial structure and how they influence innovation: the horizontal market structure which reflects the influence of competition and collaboration, as well as the role of buyers, suppliers and complementors. Under the rubric of firm characteristics, we consider the many externally observable attributes of a firm such as its size, scope, access to external sources of knowledge such as through alliances, and performance. Under the heading of intra-organizational attributes we look at the inside of the firm, the firm's organizational structure and processes, corporate governance arrangements including compensation and incentive structures, the backgrounds of managers, and organizational search processes. Finally, we consider two significant sets of institutional influences, the supply of science (wherein we also examine the nature and degree of science–industry relationships), and the appropriability regime. In each setting we try to structure the existing literature to identify the core theoretical mechanisms as well as empirical support for those mechanisms. We explicitly focus on the management literature in this area recognizing that the work of economists is being summarized in other such reviews. However, we have consciously tried to use terminology and organizing structures that should be familiar to both economists and management scholars and hope to encourage greater conversation and cross-fertilization between these two groups. To facilitate this outcome we especially emphasize some areas where management literature has developed the most (e.g., alliances and networks) but then integrate the literature in these areas within the broader rubric of work in the economics tradition.

熊彼特的猜想——即大型垄断企业是现代工业经济中创新的关键来源——一直是许多关于创新主题研究的基础。在这篇综述论文中，我们有意识地超越了关注企业规模和市场结构作为创新主要决定因素的熊彼特传统，以识别管理学文献中所研究的一组更广泛的创新决定因素。我们对创新努力和创新产出进行了区分，并针对每种结果将创新的决定因素分为四个大类：行业结构、企业特征、组织内部属性和制度影响。我们考察了行业结构的四个方面及其如何影响创新：反映竞争与合作影响的横向市场结构，以及购买者、供应商和互补者的角色。在企业特征的范畴下，我们考虑了企业的许多外部可观察属性，如其规模、范围、通过联盟等方式获取外部知识来源的途径以及绩效。在组织内部属性的标题下，我们审视了企业内部、企业的组织结构和流程、包括薪酬和激励结构在内的公司治理安排、管理者的背景以及组织搜索过程。最后，我们考虑了两组重要的制度影响：科学供应（其中我们也考察了科学与工业关系的性质和程度）以及获利制度。在每种情境下，我们都试图构建现有文献，以识别核心理论机制以及对这些机制的实证支持。我们明确关注该领域的管理学文献，并意识到经济学家的工作正在其他此类综述中进行总结。然而，我们有意识地尝试使用经济学家和管理学者都应该熟悉的术语和组织结构，并希望鼓励这两个群体之间进行更多的对话和交叉融合。为了促进这一结果，我们特别强调了管理学文献发展最充分的一些领域（例如，联盟和网络），然后将这些领域的文献整合到经济学传统研究的更广泛范畴内。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Negotiation is a process that creates, reinforces, and reduces gender inequality in organizations, yet the study of gender in negotiation has little connection to the study of gender in organizations. We review the literature on gender in job negotiations from psychology and organizational behavior, and propose ways in which this literature could speak more directly to gender inequality in organizations by incorporating insights from research on gender in intra-household and collective bargaining. Taken together, these literatures illuminate how negotiations at the individual, household, and collective levels may contribute to the construction and deconstruction of gender inequality in organizations.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We highlight important differences between twenty-first-century organizations as compared with those of the previous century, and offer a critical review of the basic principles, typical applications, general effectiveness, and limitations of the current staffing model. That model focuses on identifying and measuring job-related individual characteristics to predict individual-level job performance. We conclude that the current staffing model has reached a ceiling or plateau in terms of its ability to make accurate predictions about future performance. Evidence accumulated over more than 80 years of staffing research suggests that general mental abilities and other traditional staffing tools do a modest job of predicting performance across settings and jobs considering that, even when combined and corrected for methodological and statistical artifacts, they rarely predict more than 50% of the variance in performance. Accordingly, we argue for a change in direction in staffing research and propose an expanded view of the staffing process, including the introduction of a new construct, in situ performance, and an expanded view of staffing tools to be used to predict future in situ performance that take into account time and context. Our critical review offers a novel perspective and research agenda with the goal of guiding future research that will result in more useful, applicable, relevant, and effective knowledge for practitioners to use in organizational settings.

我们强调了 21 世纪组织与上世纪组织之间的重要差异，并对当前人员配置模型的基本原则、典型应用、总体有效性和局限性进行了批判性回顾。该模型侧重于识别和测量与工作相关的个人特征，以预测个人层面的工作绩效。我们的结论是，当前的人员配置模型在准确预测未来绩效的能力方面已达到上限或平台期。积累了 80 多年的配置研究证据表明，一般心理能力和其他传统配置工具在预测跨环境和跨工作的绩效方面表现平平，考虑到即使在结合并修正了方法论和统计偏差后，它们也很少能预测超过 50% 的绩效方差。因此，我们主张改变人员配置研究的方向，并提出了人员配置过程的扩展视角，包括引入一个新构念——原位绩效 (in situ performance)，以及用于预测未来原位绩效的配置工具的扩展视角，这些工具考虑了时间和情境。我们的批判性回顾提供了一个新颖的视角和研究议程，旨在指导未来的研究，从而为从业者在组织环境中使用提供更有用、更适用、更相关且更有效的知识。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Person–environment (P–E) fit is a central concept in organizational behavior research. Historically, reviews of P–E fit research have summarized empirical studies but said little about whether P–E fit research has made theoretical progress. This chapter applies criteria for evaluating theory to review and assess the theoretical status and progress of P–E fit research. The review encompasses P–E fit theories that span nearly a century and cover research on job satisfaction, job stress, vocational choice, recruitment and selection, and organizational climate and culture. This review indicates that most theories in P–E fit research fall well short of criteria for developing strong theory, and theories presented in recent years are no stronger than those developed decades earlier. Reasons for theoretical stagnation in P–E fit research are identified, and ways to promote theoretical progress are discussed.

Some of the major trends of the past decade include: (1) new individual difference predictions of turnover (e.g., personality, motivating forces); (2) increased emphasis on contextual variables with an emphasis on interpersonal relationships (e.g., leader-member exchange, interpersonal citizenship behaviors); (3) enhanced focus on factors looking specifically at staying (e.g., organizational commitment and job embeddedness); and (4) dynamic modeling of turnover processes with the consideration of time (e.g., changes in job satisfaction). We believe these trends point to a number of important issues to consider in the next decade, including the influence of social networks, differences across cultures, temporal aspects (e.g., early vs. late turnover), consequences of turnover, multi-level investigations of turnover and other types of withdrawal (e.g., retirement).

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Competing organizations are often defined by their niche overlap or structural equivalence in resource dependence, but the very structure that defines competitors can also identify cooperators. There is a fine line between competition and cooperation, but current theories give insufficient guidance as to which will take place and also contribute to the belief that cooperation between competitors is illegitimate. We show that the legitimacy of these practices, as well the evaluation of their welfare implications, are context bound. Individuals and societies that have been influenced by different theories of competition could reasonably (and have) reach different conclusions as to the legitimacy of competitor cooperation. We then critique extant ideas as to when competitors will cooperate, which rely on industry structure, and suggest instead that perception and social identity are more important in tipping the cooperate–compete balance. We conclude by showing how our arguments inform an important current stream of management research, on the process of institutional change.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Many employing organizations have adopted work–family policies, programs, and benefits. Yet managers in employing organizations simply do not know what organizational initiatives actually reduce work–family conflict and how these changes are likely to impact employees and the organization. We examine scholarship that addresses two broad questions: first, do work–family initiatives reduce employees’ work–family conflict and/or improve work–family enrichment? Second, does reduced work–family conflict improve employees’ work outcomes and, especially, business outcomes at the organizational level? We review over 150 peer-reviewed studies from a number of disciplines in order to summarize this rich literature and identify promising avenues for research and conceptualization. We propose a research agenda based on four primary conclusions: the need for more multi-level research, the necessity of an interdisciplinary approach, the benefits of longitudinal studies that employ quasi-experimental or experimental designs and the challenges of translating research into practice in effective ways.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Hierarchy is such a defining and pervasive feature of organizations that its forms and basic functions are often taken for granted in organizational research. In this review, we revisit some basic psychological and sociological elements of hierarchy and argue that status and power are two important yet distinct bases of hierarchical differentiation. We first define power and status and distinguish our definitions from previous conceptualizations. We then integrate a number of different literatures to explain why status and power hierarchies tend to be self-reinforcing. Power, related to one's control over valued resources, transforms individual psychology such that the powerful think and act in ways that lead to the retention and acquisition of power. Status, related to the respect one has in the eyes of others, generates expectations for behavior. *Corresponding author. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We begin by juxtaposing the pervasive presence of technology in organizational work with its absence from the organization studies literature. Our analysis of four leading journals in the field confirms that over 95% of the articles published in top management research outlets do not take into account the role of technology in organizational life. We then examine the research that has been done on technology, and categorize this literature into two research streams according to their view of technology: discrete entities or mutually dependent ensembles. For each stream, we discuss three existing reviews spanning the last three decades of scholarship to highlight that while there have been many studies and approaches to studying organizational interactions and implications of technology, empirical research has produced mixed and often-conflicting results. Going forward, we suggest that further work is needed to theorize the fusion of technology and work in organizations, and that additional perspectives are needed to add to the palette of concepts in use. To this end, we identify a promising emerging genre of research that we refer to under the umbrella term: sociomateriality. Research framed according to the tenets of a sociomaterial approach challenges the deeply taken-for-granted assumption that technology, work, and organizations should be conceptualized separately, and advances the view that there is an inherent inseparability between the technical and the social. We discuss the intellectual motivation for proposing a sociomaterial research approach and point to some common themes evident in recent studies. We conclude by suggesting that a reconsideration of conventional views of technology may help us more effectively study and understand the multiple, emergent, and dynamic sociomaterial configurations that constitute contemporary organizational practices.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This chapter advocates the good scientific practice of systematic research syntheses in Management and Organizational Science (MOS). A research synthesis is the systematic accumulation, analysis and reflective interpretation of the full body of relevant empirical evidence related to a question. It is the critical first step in effective use of scientific evidence. Synthesis is not a conventional literature review. Literature reviews are often position papers, cherry-picking studies to advocate a point of view. Instead, syntheses systematically identify where research findings are clear (and where they aren't), a key first step to establishing the conclusions science supports. Syntheses are also important for identifying contested findings and productive lines for future research. Uses of MOS evidence, that is, the motives for undertaking a research synthesis include scientific discovery and explanation, improved management practice guidelines, and formulating public policy. We identify six criteria for establishing the evidentiary value of a body of primary studies in MOS. We then pinpoint the stumbling blocks currently keeping the field from making effective use of its ever-expanding base of empirical studies. Finally, this chapter outlines (a) an approach to research synthesis suitable to the domain of MOS; and (b) supporting practices to make synthesis a collective MOS project.

本章倡导在管理与组织科学 (MOS) 中采用系统化研究综合的良好科学实践。研究综合是对与某一问题相关的全部相关实证证据进行的系统积累、分析和反思性解释。它是有效利用科学证据的关键第一步。综合并非传统的文献综述。文献综述通常是立场文件, 通过择优挑选研究来支持某种观点。相反, 综合系统地识别了哪些研究结果是明确的 (以及哪些是不明确的), 这是确立科学支持的结论的关键第一步。综合对于识别有争议的发现和未来研究的产出方向也具有重要意义。利用管理与组织科学证据 (即进行研究综合的动机) 包括科学发现与解释、改进管理实践指南以及制定公共政策。我们确定了确立管理与组织科学中一系列初级研究证据价值的六项标准。随后, 我们指出了目前阻碍该领域有效利用其不断扩大的实证研究基础的障碍。最后, 本章概述了: (a) 一种适用于管理与组织科学领域的研究综合方法; 以及 (b) 使综合成为管理与组织科学集体项目的支持性实践。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This paper has two objectives. We begin by contrasting two potential paths for future research in entrepreneurship. One is the establishment of an independent field of research with a clear jurisdiction, a common theoretical canon, and autonomy from related fields. The second is a phenomena-based approach, in which scholars congregate around common interests in empirical phenomena but approach them with distinct disciplinary lenses. After discussing these alternatives and lobbying for the phenomena-based approach, we then review some of the recent, discipline-based research in economic and organizational sociology relevant to entrepreneurship, and identify significant gaps in that literature.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Research on ethical decision making, or behavioral ethics, in organizations has developed from a small niche area to a burgeoning stand-alone field, one that has gained not only in number of articles written but in the legitimacy of the topic and the field. Our review motivated us to first try and summarize the field, not by comparing it to existing theoretical paradigms, but rather by observing what the data were telling us. We present our summary in the form of a model of ethical decision making and a typology that distinguishes intentionality of actions from ethicality of actions. After presenting this summary of the data, we critically review the research in this area, noting those areas which offer substantial insight and those that do not. In looking to the future and how the field can enhance the former and mitigate the latter, we identify several *Corresponding author. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Critical management studies (CMS) offers a range of alternatives to main- stream management theory with a view to radically transforming management practice. The common core is deep skepticism regarding the moral defensibil- ity and the social and ecological sustainability of prevailing conceptions and forms of management and organization, CMS's motivating concern is neither the personal failures of individual managers nor the poor management of spe- cific firms, but the social injustice and environmental destructiveness of the broader social and economic systems that these managers and firms serve and reproduce. This chapter reviews CMS's progress, main themes, theoretical and epistemological premises, and main projects; we also identify some problems and make some proposals. Our aim is to provide an accessible overview of a growing movement in management studies.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We review the literature on nonstandard work with three aims: to portray the breadth and nature of the research and theorizing to date, to document the challenges and opportunities this domain poses to both practice and theory, and to bring the study of nonstandard work more to the center stage of micro-OB. After defining nonstandard work and documenting scholarly interest in it, we discuss the literature on the experience of nonstandard workers, on managing the nonstandard workforce, as well as that on managing the interface between standard and nonstandard workers. We analyze the themes that are raised in these literatures and point to new research questions that need to be addressed. Research on nonstandard work can enhance our understanding of the nature of work, the relationship between individuals and organizations, and how organizations and individuals can undertake these new work forms.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

A central tenet of agency theory is that there is potential for mischief when the interests of owners and managers diverge. In those circumstances, and for a variety of reasons, managers may be able to exact higher rents than are reasonable or than the owners of the firm would otherwise accord them. While that foundational element of agency theory is secure, other elements derived directly from agency theory are far less settled. Indeed, even after some 75 years of conceptualization and empirical research, the three principal approaches that have long been proposed to mitigate the fundamental agency problem remain contentious. Accordingly, we provide a review of the fundamental agency problem and its mitigation through independence, equity, and the market for corporate control.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The emergence of a research literature on team learning has been driven by at least two factors. First, longstanding interest in what makes organizational work teams effective leads naturally to questions about how members of newly formed teams learn to work together and how existing teams improve or adapt. Second, some have argued that teams play a crucial role in organizational learning. These interests have produced a growing and heterogeneous literature. Empirical studies of learning by small groups or teams present a variety of terms, concepts, and methods. This heterogeneity is both generative and occasionally confusing. We identify three distinct areas of research that provide insight into how teams learn to stimulate cross-area discussion and future research. We find that scholars have made progress in understanding how teams in general learn, and propose that future work should develop more precise and context-specific theories to help guide research and practice in disparate task and industry domains.

DOI: 10.5465/078559812

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Emotion has become one of the most popular—and popularized—areas within organizational scholarship. This chapter attempts to review and bring together within a single framework the wide and often disjointed literature on emotion in organizations. The integrated framework includes processes detailed by previous theorists who have defined emotion as a sequence that unfolds chronologically. The emotion process begins with a focal individual who is exposed to an eliciting stimulus, registers the stimulus for its meaning, and experiences a feeling state and physiological changes, with downstream consequences for attitudes, behaviors, and cognitions, as well as facial expressions and other emotionally expressive cues. These downstream consequences can result in externally visible behaviors and cues that become, in turn, eliciting stimuli for interaction partners. For each stage of the emotion process, there are distinct emotion regulation processes that incorporate individual differences and group norms and that can become automatic with practice. Although research often examines these stages in relative isolation from each other, I argue that each matters largely due to its interconnectedness with the other stages. Incorporating intraindividual, individual, interpersonal, and organizational levels of analysis, this framework can be a starting point to situate, theorize, and test explicit mechanisms for the influence of emotion on organizational life. We keep coming back to feelings, I'll have time for feelings after I'm dead. Right now we're busy. (NASA Administrator Michael Griffin, speaking about the historic Independence Day 2006 launch of the space shuttle Discovery, after discussing the horror and sadness at losing the Columbia space shuttle in 2003, the worry leading up to the launch of Discovery, and the relief and pleasure at watching Discovery succeed; Boyce, 2006)

摘要 (中文):

情绪已成为组织研究中最受欢迎且最普及的领域之一。本章试图回顾并将关于组织中情绪的广泛且往往脱节的文献整合到一个单一的框架中。该整合框架包含了先前理论家详细阐述的过程，他们将情绪定义为一个按时间顺序展开的序列。情绪过程始于一个暴露在诱发刺激下的核心个体，该个体登记刺激的含义，并经历感受状态和生理变化，进而对态度、行为和认知以及面部表情和其他情绪表达线索产生下游后果。这些下游后果可能导致外部可见的行为和线索，而这些行为和线索反过来又成为互动伙伴的诱发刺激。对于情绪过程的每个阶段，都有独特的情绪调节过程，这些过程结合了个体差异和群体规范，并可以通过练习变得自动化。尽管研究通常将这些阶段彼此相对孤立地进行考察，但我认为每个阶段的重要性在很大程度上源于它与其他阶段的相互关联。该框架结合了个体内、个体、人际和组织层面的分析，可以作为定位、理论化和测试情绪对组织生活影响的具体机制的起点。我们总是回到感受上，“等我死后，我会有时间去感受。现在我们很忙。”（美国国家航空航天局局长迈克尔·格里芬在讨论了2003年失去“哥伦比亚号”航天飞机的恐怖与悲伤、导致“发现号”发射的担忧，以及观看“发现号”成功后的宽慰与喜悦之后，谈到2006年具有历史意义的独立日“发现号”航天飞机发射时如是说；Boyce, 2006）

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We review empirical research on the physical environment in professional, organizational work settings (i.e., offices, meeting rooms, and design work spaces) from the past several decades. This research reveals no common elements of the physical environment (e.g., enclosures and barriers in work spaces, adjustable work arrangements, personalized work spaces, and ambient surroundings) that are consistently and exclusively associated with desired outcomes in these work settings. Instead, these elements are routinely associated with both desired and undesired outcomes. Based on these findings, we suggest that understanding the role of physical environments in organizations requires an understanding of common trade-offs in organizational life. Further, we suggest that the prevalence of such trade-offs is grounded in tensions that are inherent to the functions that physical environments serve (i.e., aesthetic, instrumental, and symbolic functions). We provide an outline of these tensions and trade-offs in relation to common elements of the physical environment, and suggest that researchers consider these tensions and trade-offs in their future research.

我们回顾了过去几十年关于专业、组织工作环境（即办公室、会议室和设计工作空间）中物理环境的实证研究。这项研究显示，物理环境中的任何共同要素（例如，工作空间中的封闭物和屏障、可调节的工作安排、个性化的工作空间以及周围环境）都与这些工作环境中的预期结果没有持续且排他的关联。相反，这些要素通常与预期和非预期的结果都有关联。基于这些发现，我们建议理解物理环境在组织中的作用需要理解组织生活中的常见权衡。此外，我们建议这种权衡的普遍性源于物理环境所承担的功能（即审美、工具和象征功能）中固有的张力。我们提供了这些张力和权衡与物理环境常见要素相关的概述，并建议研究人员在未来的研究中考虑这些张力和权衡。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

In this chapter, I review contemporary theories and research on creativity in organizations. After discussing key definitional issues in this domain, I review the contemporary scholarly literature proceeding from the most molecular of perspectives focusing on within-individual processes to the more molar perspective of the collective creativity that can take place in work groups. While the within-individual process featured most prominently in the extant literature is intrinsic motivation, after a treatment of some fundamental issues surrounding the intrinsic motivation construct, I review research on conscious and unconscious thinking and positive and negative affect as key internal processes relevant to understanding creativity. Next, I focus on contextual influences on creativity including safety signals, creativity prompts, supervisors, leadership, and networks. Lastly, I focus on creativity in groups (from both an input and a process perspective). In closing, I reiterate a recurrent theme throughout the review. This is an exciting era for research on creativity in organizations with many intriguing questions awaiting future scholarly inquiry.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This chapter's purpose is to advance leadership research in the healthcare field in particular and in organizational studies more broadly. Based on a review of 60 empirical papers, we conclude that leadership is positively and significantly associated with individual work satisfaction, turnover, and performance. Despite these important results, however, we argue that researchers are missing opportunities to develop general leadership theory in the health sector, for example, by (a) examining the role of professionals as leaders and (b) developing understanding of the role of gender in leadership. Nonetheless, we also argue that we are not likely to advance leadership research until we address barriers to collaborative, multidisciplinary studies that develop conceptual models of leadership that makes it neither heroic nor impotent.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Various researchers have suggested that an important explanatory factor for the growth in strategic alliances is that alliances provide a platform for organizational learning, giving firms access to the knowledge of their partners. The notion that alliances are a vehicle for learning is the basis for an important and cross-disciplinary stream of research. This chapter examines theoretical and empirical research in the alliance learning area. We have two central objectives. The first is to integrate a large body of research by examining the key research questions addressed. The second objective is to critically examine the existing research as the basis for establishing a research agenda. Although the alliance learning area has generated a substantial amount of research interest and spawned wide-ranging types of inquiry, many important and substantive managerial issues remain underexplored.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The study of public organizations has withered over time in mainstream organization studies research, as scholars in the field have migrated to business schools. This is so even though government organizations are an important part of the universe of organizations—the largest organizations in the world are agencies of the U.S. government. At the same time, the study of public administration, once in the mainstream of organization studies, has moved into a ghetto, separate and unequal. Centered in business schools, mainstream organization research became isomorphic to its environment—coming to focus on performance issues, which are what firms care about. Since separation, the dominant current in public administration has become isomorphic with its environment. In this case, however, this meant the field moved backward from the central reformist concern of its founders with improving government performance, and developed instead a focus on managing constraints (i.e., avoiding bad things, such as corruption or misuse of power, from occurring) in a public organization environment. Insufficient concern about performance among public administration scholars is particularly unfortunate because over the past 15 years, there has occurred a significant growth of interest among practitioners in improving government performance. The origins and consequences of these developments are discussed, and a research agenda for organization studies research that takes the public sector seriously is proposed.

随着该领域的学者向商学院迁移,对公共组织的研究在主流组织研究中逐渐萎缩。尽管政府组织是组织领域的重要组成部分——世界上规模最大的组织即美国政府机构,但情况依然如此。与此同时,曾经处于组织研究主流地位的公共行政研究已陷入一种孤立且不平等的“贫民窟”状态。以商学院为中心的主流组织研究与其环境变得同构——开始关注企业所关心的绩效问题。自分离以来,公共行政学的主流趋势也与其环境变得同构。然而,在这种情况下,这意味着该领域从其创始人改善政府绩效的核心改革关切中倒退,转而关注公共组织环境中的约束管理(即避免腐败或权力滥用等坏事的发生)。公共行政学者对绩效的关注不足尤为令人遗憾,因为在过去的15年里,从业者对提高政府绩效的兴趣显著增长。本文讨论了这些发展的起源和后果,并提出了一个认真对待公共部门的组织研究议程。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The phenomenon of managing work that is distributed over geographical distance is not new but is increasing in both frequency and intentionality as a function of globalization and knowledge-centric strategies. I review the literature on geographically distributed work, both that which highlights liabilities of loss of proximity and more recent research that emphasizes “virtual teams” as an intentional organizing device. I explore the adaptations, remedies, and countervailing strategies deployed to support such teams, contrasting those that minimize distance with those that increase individual and group capacity for coping with distance. I also emphasize that other dimensions of distance—cultural, administrative, and economic—affect the organization of work, the experiences of those doing the work, and individual and organizational outcomes. Here I highlight the “blended workforce” in which standard (traditional employees) and nonstandard (temporary and contract) workers are organized to accomplish interdependent tasks—and again contrast problems of distance with emergent adaptations. Finally, I explore the implications for human resource management (HRM), first considering which HR systems are best suited to work distributed over different types of distance, and then reviewing literature on specific HR practices—selection, training, task/job design, compensation, and performance appraisal. I close by arguing that HRM research must reach beyond its past focus on managing employees within a single firm over a prolonged career under collocated conditions. As the world generates countless new distance-related phenomena, our research must tackle the challenges of managing both standard and non-standard workers engaged in interdependent tasks of limited duration across multiple employers/clients and involving multiple dimensions of distance.

摘要 (中文):

管理跨越地理距离分布的工作这一现象并不新鲜,但随着全球化和以知识为中心战略的发展,其发生的频率和意向性都在增加。我回顾了关于地理分布式工作的文献,包括强调失去邻近性劣势的文献,以及强调将“虚拟团队”作为一种有意组织手段的较新研究。我探讨了为支持此类团队而部署的适应措施、补救办法和抵消策略,并将那些尽量减少距离的策略与那些增加个人和群体应对距离能力的策略进行了对比。我还强调,距离的其他维度——文化、行政和经济——会影响工作的组织方式、工作者的体验以及个人和组织的结果。在这里,我重点介绍了“混合劳动力”,即标准(传统雇员)和非标准(临时和合同制)员工被组织起来完成相互依赖的任务——并再次对比了距离问题与突现的适应措施。最后,我探讨了对人力资源管理(HRM)的影响,首先考虑哪些人力资源系统最适合分布在不同类型距离上的工作,然后回顾关于具体人力资源实践的文献——选拔、培训、任务/工作设计、薪酬和绩效考核。最后我指出,人力资源管理研究必须达到并超越其过去关注在单一公司内、在共同办公条件下管理长期职业生涯员工的局限。随着世界产生无数新的与距离相关的现象,我们的研究必须应对管理跨越多个雇主/客户、涉及多个距离维度、且从事有限期限相互依赖任务的标准和非标准员工的挑战。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Performance appraisals are a critical part of organizational life, and bias in appraisals is consistently mentioned as a barrier to advancement for diverse workers. This chapter reviews the literature on rater bias in performance appraisals, defined as effects on performance ratings due to ratee category membership. We focus on the major theoretical frameworks (e.g., stereotype fit and relational demography) used in the study of bias, organizing the research findings by the four most commonly studied demographic categories: gender, race, age, and disability. The review allows better understanding of the gaps in our knowledge and identifies needed future research directions in this literature stream. We conclude the chapter with several concerns including a lack of empirical research testing propositions concerning the effect of organizational variables on bias.

绩效评估是组织生活的重要组成部分，而评估中的偏见一直被认为是多元化员工晋升的障碍。本章回顾了关于绩效评估中评分者偏见的文献，偏见被定义为由于被评分者的类别身份而对绩效评分产生的影响。我们重点关注研究偏见的主要理论框架（例如，刻板印象匹配和关系人口统计学），并按照四个最常研究的人口统计类别（性别、种族、年龄和残疾）组织研究结果。该综述有助于更好地理解我们知识中的空白，并确定了该文献流中未来需要的研究方向。我们在本章结尾提出了一些担忧，包括缺乏对有关组织变量对偏见影响的命题进行测试的实证研究。
