1. Board Effectiveness in Contemporary Organizations: Integrating The Board Practitioner and Scholarly Literatures

当代组织中的董事会有效性：整合董事会从业者与学术文献

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Increasing shareholder and consumer activism, rapid technological developments, and broader social, geopolitical, and environmental discontinuities are reshaping understandings of board effectiveness in contemporary settings. Despite sustained interest in the topic, prescriptive practitioner-oriented writings and scholarly research provide insights that are incomplete and siloed. Scholarship on board effectiveness is extensive, yet it focuses narrowly on select dimensions of board effectiveness and often lags the contemporary challenges facing boards highlighted in practitioner-oriented literature. Conversely, easily accessible practitioner-oriented literature commonly used by boards and their advisors overlooks relevant scholarly research. Few efforts have been made to merge insights from both literatures to develop a more complete and shared understanding of board effectiveness. To address this gap, this review integrates empirical findings from board scholarship with prescriptions from practice to develop a unified conceptual model of board effectiveness. In doing so, it (1) reconceptualizes board effectiveness as a teleological process linking board attributes, processes, task actions, and outcomes, (2) clarifies the essential functions of boards in contemporary settings, and (3) foregrounds the importance of board micro-processes (i.e., internal practices, relational dynamics, and cognition). The review concludes by discussing the implications of our evidence-based conceptual model for board research and practice.

日益增长的股东和消费者激进主义、快速的技术发展，以及更广泛的社会、地缘政治和环境间断性，正在重塑当代环境下对董事会有效性的理解。尽管对该话题的兴趣持续不断，但规范性的从业者导向著作和学术研究提供的见解仍是不完整且孤立的。关于董事会有效性的学术研究非常广泛，但其狭隘地聚焦于董事会有效性的特定维度，且往往滞后于从业者导向文献中所强调的董事会面临的当代挑战。相反，董事会及其顾问常用的易于获取的从业者导向文献通常忽略了相关的学术研究。很少有努力尝试合并这两类文献的见解，以建立对董事会有效性更完整且共识性的理解。为了填补这一空白，本综述将董事会学术研究的实证结果与实务界的规范相结合，开发了一个统一的董事会有效性概念模型。在此过程中，本研究（1）将董事会有效性重新概念化为一个连接董事会属性、过程、任务行动和结果的目的论过程，（2）阐明了当代环境下董事会的核心职能，以及（3）突出了董事会微观过程（即内部实践、关系动态和认知）的重要性。本综述最后讨论了我们基于证据的概念模型对董事会研究和实践的启示。

2. Experimentation in Organizations: An Integrative Review

组织中的实验：一项综合性综述

Authors / 作者: Leonardo Corbo, Riitta Katila, Božidar Vlačić

Year / 时间: 2026

DOI: 10.5465/annals.2024.0287

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Organizations have long relied on experiments to guide decision-making. Yet, a comprehensive synthesis of this rich and timely empirical literature remains lacking. In this integrative review, we identify two primary streams of research (problem-solving-based experimentation and causal inference-based experimentation), which we organize using the classic variation–selection–retention framework. The problem-solving stream emphasizes iterative experimentation, learning from failure, and navigating organizational challenges, while the causal inference stream focuses on sharp identification, structured experimental designs, and bounded experiments, each rooted in distinct disciplinary traditions. Despite the differences, these perspectives offer complementary insights into how organizations experiment, learn, and adapt. By analyzing 177 empirical studies across several disciplines and integrating these parallel streams, we develop a unifying framework that highlights the key drivers, processes, and outcomes of organizational experimentation. We conclude by outlining promising avenues for future research, including deeper retention in shaping experimental effectiveness and organizational learning, overcoming cognitive biases, expanding the scope of experiments to strategy, organizational design, and people processes, and the possibility of the two streams to cross-feed: problem-solving to generate broad hypotheses that causal inference sharpens, and causal inference experiments to trigger reframing of the problem-solving experiments.

长期以来, 组织一直依靠实验来指导决策。然而, 目前仍缺乏对这一丰富且及时的实证文献的全面综合。在这项综合性综述中, 我们识别了两个主要的研究流派 (基于问题解决的实验和基于因果推断的实验), 并利用经典的“变异-选择-保留”框架对其进行了组织。问题解决流派强调迭代实验、从失败中学习以及应对组织挑战; 而因果推断流派则侧重于清晰的识别、结构化的实验设计和有界实验, 两者都植根于不同的学科传统。尽管存在差异, 但这些视角为组织如何实验、学习和适应提供了互补的见解。通过分析多个学科的 177 项实证研究并整合这些平行流派, 我们开发了一个统一的框架, 突出了组织实验的关键驱动因素、过程和结果。最后, 我们概述了未来研究的有前景的方向, 包括: 在塑造实验有效性和组织学习中更深层次的保留作用; 克服认知偏差; 将实验范围扩大到战略、组织设计和人员流程; 以及两个流派相互借鉴的可能性——即通过问题解决产生广泛的假设并由因果推断进行精炼, 以及通过因果推断实验触发对问题解决实验的重新构思。

4. Rule Breaking in Organizations: An Integrative Review

组织中的违规行为: 一项综合性综述

Authors / 作者: Michael J. Gill

Year / 时间: 2026 · Vol. 20, Issue 1 · pp. 285-314

DOI: 10.5465/annals.2023.0170

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Rule breaking is widespread in workplaces. Despite recognition that a range of reasons drive individuals to break rules in organizations, related research has become fragmented, with holistic accounts missing from the literature. To integrate studies across the social sciences, I develop a framework that conceptualizes four types of rule breaking explanations: self-interested, prosocial, corrupted, and edified. The framework highlights different literature's focus on single and fixed types of rule breaking. To foster integration across types, the review outlines future research directions that attend to mixed motives and multiple perspectives. A broader contribution of this article is to establish rule breaking as a distinctive stream of deviance scholarship, as well as to identify opportunities for mutual enrichment with two other prominent streams: unethical behavior at work and workplace deviance. The article also considers practical steps for managers, stressing that there is no universal solution to arrest rule breaking behavior. The effectiveness of different managerial responses, from punishment to compassion, is likely to depend on the type of rule breaking behavior. Managers should therefore seek to understand the drivers of individuals' rule breaking.

违规行为在职场中广泛存在。尽管人们认识到驱动个人在组织中违规的原因多种多样，但相关研究已变得碎片化，文献中缺乏整体性的描述。为了整合社会科学领域的研究，我开发了一个框架，将四种类型的违规解释概念化：自利的、亲社会的、腐败的和教化的。该框架强调了不同文献对单一且固定类型的违规行为的关注。为了促进跨类型的整合，本综述概述了关注混合动机和多重维度的未来研究方向。本文更广泛的贡献是将违规行为确立为偏离行为研究的一个独特流派，并确定了与另外两个重要流派（职场不道德行为和职场偏离行为）相互借鉴的机会。文章还考虑了管理者的实践步骤，强调没有万能的解决方案来遏制违规行为。从惩罚到同情，不同管理反应的有效性可能取决于违规行为的类型。因此，管理者应努力理解个人违规的驱动因素。

5. From Collective Dilemmas to Collective Solutions: An Integrative Framework and Research Agenda for Collective Action and Sustainability Research

从集体困境到集体方案：集体行动与可持续性研究的综合框架与研究议程

Year / 时间: 2026

DOI: 10.5465/annals.2024.0282

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Sustainability challenges require collective action (CA) among diverse stakeholders, yet current management scholarship on CA remains theoretically fragmented. Through a comprehensive review and inductive analysis of 140 peer-reviewed management articles at the intersection of CA and sustainability, we highlight three complementary lenses that management scholars have historically used to study CA and sustainability: (1) root dilemmas (i.e., how sustainability challenges emerge from CA problems); (2) response implementation (i.e., how individuals, organizations, and multistakeholder coalitions implement different types of collective responses); and (3) response effectiveness (i.e., the conditions under which certain CA responses prove more or less effective in addressing sustainability challenges). We develop an integrative theoretical model that synthesizes these previously disparate perspectives to help align and move research forward. Overall, our work shows that CA for addressing sustainability challenges is less about working toward a shared goal and more about creating the conditions in which diverse types of actors have the incentive to "get things done together." It takes a world to fix a world.

摘要 (中文):

可持续性挑战需要不同利益相关者之间的集体行动（CA），然而目前关于集体行动的管理学研究在理论上仍然是碎片化的。通过对集体行动与可持续性交汇领域的 140 篇同行评审管理学文章进行全面回顾和归纳分析，我们强调了管理学者历来用于研究集体行动与可持续性的三个互补视角：（1）根源困境（即可持续性挑战如何从集体行动问题中产生）；（2）响应实施（即个人、组织和多利益相关者联盟如何实施不同类型的集体响应）；以及（3）响应有效性（即某些集体行动响应在应对可持续性挑战时证明或多或少有效的条件）。我们开发了一个综合理论模型，综合了这些先前分散的观点，以帮助协调并推动研究向前发展。总的来说，我们的工作表明，应对可持续性挑战的集体行动与其说是为了实现一个共同目标，不如说是为了创造一种条件，使不同类型的行动者有动力“共同完成任务”。修复一个世界需要全世界的努力。

6. A Return to the Foundations of Social Information Processing Theory

回归社会信息处理理论的基础

Authors / 作者: Thomas K. Kelemen, Michael J. Matthews, Jacob M. Whitney, Samuel H. Matthews

DOI: 10.5465/annals.2024.0251

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Social information processing theory is a well-known perspective that is used across a variety of domains, including leadership, organizational behavior, entrepreneurship, and more. Despite being formulated nearly 50 years ago, this perspective has gained momentum of late and is being applied with greater frequency in the management domain. However, the question remains as to how current applications and knowledge align with the original tenets of social information processing theory. In this paper, we seek to answer this question. Via a close reading of seminal articles and a review of the extant literature, we document three troubling trends: a historical drift in how the theory has been applied, theoretical imprecision when using the theory, and forgotten elements of the original theory. In response, we present a simplified model of social information processing theory, which restores the central focus of job attitudes as the primary outcome and emphasizes that the social context and past behaviors are key predictors. We also document how the field can apply this theory more effectively and outline future directions.

7. Nationalism and Contemporary Organizations: An Integrative Theoretical Framework and Agenda for Future Research

民族主义与当代组织: 一个综合理论框架及未来研究议程

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Nationalism impacts contemporary organizations in diverse ways that extend beyond global politics, international relations, or economics. Based on an integrative theoretical review of nationalism in management and organization research, we identify six approaches across three level of analysis. At the micro level, nationalism is reflected in individuals' (1) cultural (dis)association with one or several nations and (2) identity construction and identity work. At the meso level, nationalism can be found in (3) intraorganizational practices and norms and in (4) interorganizational relations and strategies. At the macro level, nationalism can be seen as part of (5) economic policies and structures and of (6) political rhetoric and media discourses. On this basis, we develop an integrative theoretical framework that illuminates the multifaceted and dynamic nature of nationalism across levels of analysis. We also propose an agenda for future research that focuses on blank spots in prior research and zooms in on connections between different levels. This includes research on varieties and constructions of nationalism, new forms and implications of nationalism in global organizations, populism and mediatization of nationalism, and epistemological and ethico-political issues in studying nationalism and contemporary organizations.

以及(6)政治修辞和媒体话语的一部分。在此基础上,我们开发了一个综合理论框架,阐明了跨分析层面的民族主义的多维和动态特征。我们还提出了一个未来研究议程,重点关注先前研究中的空白点,并聚焦于不同层面之间的联系。这包括对民族主义的多样性和建构、全球组织中民族主义的新形式和影响、民粹主义和民族主义的媒介化,以及研究民族主义和当代组织中的认识论和伦理政治问题的研究。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Cultural entrepreneurship—that is, the cultural dynamics of entrepreneurship, innovation, and change—has attracted significant interest across business, sociology, and creative industries scholarship. However, these disciplines have evolved along separate trajectories, each establishing its own distinct research tradition. This fragmentation has hindered the development of an integrative understanding of how culture shapes, and is shaped by, entrepreneurial action. Drawing on 301 publications spanning over 40 years, we develop a framework that unites three distinct traditions of cultural entrepreneurship research focused on the mobilization, production, and expression of culture. We argue that these traditions, though developed separately, share a fundamental interest in the cultural means and processes that explain the becoming of new possibilities—that is, how novel ideas, products, and organizations come into being and gain recognition. By systematizing the outcomes that each tradition prioritizes and revealing their interconnections, we expose how entrepreneurial action draws on, transforms, and expresses culture. This integration offers a comprehensive understanding of culture as both the medium and outcome of entrepreneurial action, as actors work toward the realization of new possibilities.

文化创业——即创业、创新和变革的文化动态——在商业、社会学和创意产业研究中引起了极大的兴趣。然而,这些学科沿着各自的轨迹演进,每个学科都建立了自己独特的研究传统。这种碎片化阻碍了对文化如何塑造创业行动以及如何被创业行动所塑造的综合理解。基于跨越40多年的301篇出版物,我们开发了一个框架,统一了关注文化动员、生产和表达的三个不同的文化创业研究传统。我们认为,尽管这些传统是独立发展的,但它们对解释新可能性生成的文化手段和过程有着共同的根本兴趣——即新颖的想法、产品和组织是如何产生并获得认可的。通过系统化每个传统优先考虑的结果并揭示它们的相互联系,我们揭示了创业行动如何利用、转化和表达文化。这种整合提供了对文化作为创业行动的媒介和结果的全面理解,因为行动者正致力于实现新的可能性。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Institutions are central components of organizational and managerial life, and powerfully influence how individuals think, feel, and act toward one another in society. Because of their recognized importance, management and organizational scholars continue to wrestle with understanding core institutional trust dynamics.

We review and extend past work on this issue by using a multi-disciplinary analysis of the institutional trust literature to focus on the important role that institutional logics play in institutional trust formation. Drawing on diverse disciplinary literatures, we identify four cognitive frames that stakeholders use to evaluate the trustworthiness of institutions. Building on this work, we distinguish three categories of mechanisms through which institutions engender trust. Following our review, we examine how the perspectives outlined here can be used to refine and extend research in this area by analyzing the impacts of contexts, multilevel influences, and competing logics on stakeholders' institutional trust evaluations.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Organizational structure is conceptualized as an enduring and persistent configuration of activities related to how work is divided and integrated within organizations. Yet, a growing body of research has investigated why and how organizational structures change. Initially, these questions were investigated using a macro-oriented approach and generated insights about organizational structure change in response to top-down initiatives designed to align the structure with changes in the environment or strategy. However, an increasing number of studies have investigated additional factors that prompt or inhibit structure change (e.g., founder imprinting, turnover) and the nuances of the change process (e.g., bottom-up effects of employee behavior). Thus, conversations about organizational structure change are shifting from alignment to adaptation, and from describing the nature of a change event to unpacking the change process. As these emergent insights expand and challenge understanding of why and how organizational structures change, it is necessary to take stock and construct a more comprehensive knowledge base for the domain. Accordingly, we synthesize the research on organizational structure change, uncover underlying and facilitating mechanisms, and advance a unifying framework. We also offer multiple avenues for future research to address unresolved areas and accelerate novel theoretical development by using a micro-oriented approach.

摘要 (中文):

组织结构被概念化为一种持久且稳定的活动配置，涉及组织内部工作如何划分和整合。然而，越来越多的研究调查了组织结构为何以及如何变化。最初，这些问题是使用宏观导向的方法进行调查的，并产生了关于组织结构变化以响应旨在使结构与环境或战略变化保持一致的自上而下举措的见解。然而，越来越多的研究调查了促使或抑制结构变化的其他因素（例如，创始人印记、人员流动）以及变化过程的细微差别（例如，员工行为的自下而上效应）。因此，关于组织结构变化的对话正在从对齐转向适应，从描述变化事件的性质转向拆解变化过程。随着这些新兴见解扩展并挑战了对组织结构为何以及如何变化的理解，有必要进行总结并为该领域构建更全面的知识库。因此，我们综合了关于组织结构变化的研究，揭示了潜在的和促进性的机制，并提出了一个统一的框架。我们还为未来的研究提供了多种途径，通过使用微观导向的方法来解决未解决的领域并加速新的理论发展。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Substances (e.g., alcohol, cannabis, illicit drugs) are an inevitable part of organizational life. Despite their prevalence in workplaces, the research on substances at work, while significant, generally adopts a narrow focus on the negative implications of substance use and remains fragmented, with limited integration across conceptual levels. Yet, substances can surface in the workplace—that is, become present, perceptible, and influential—in ways that go beyond substance use, and their implications are not always negative. Based on a multidisciplinary synthesis of 361 articles, we organize the ways in which substances surface in the workplace within three meta-categories. Each metacategory is situated on a different conceptual level: involvement with substances (i.e., experiential surfacing), informal norms around substances (i.e., contextual surfacing), and formalized official policies and practices (i.e., structural surfacing). Expanding the scholarly discourse on substances, within each meta-category our review identifies a spectrum of narratives around substances, from negative to somewhat positive. Building on these foundations, we propose an integrative framework that shifts attention from substance use to controlling substances in the workplace, which involves establishing, responding to, or escaping from substance-related control. Our framework provides theoretical and methodological recommendations to further advance research on substances in the workplace.

物质（如酒精、大麻、违禁药物）是组织生活中不可避免的一部分。尽管它们在职场中普遍存在，但关于职场物质的研究虽然数量可观，通常却狭隘地聚焦于物质使用的负面影响，且保持碎片化状态，跨概念层面的整合有限。然而，物质在职场中的显现方式——即变得存在、可感知且具有影响力——超出了物质使用的范畴，且其影响并不总是负面的。基于对 361 篇文章的多学科综合，我们将物质在职场中显现的方式组织为三个元类别。每个元类别位于不同的概念层面：物质参与（即经验性显现）、围绕物质的非正式规范（即情境性显现）以及正式化的官方政策和实践（即结构性显现）。通过扩展关于物质的学术讨论，我们的综述在每个元类别中识别出一系列关于物质的叙事，从负面到某种程度上的正面。在这些基础上，我们提出了一个整合框架，将注意力从物质使用转移到职场中的物质控制，这涉及建立、响应或逃避与物质相关的控制。我们的框架为进一步推进职场物质研究提供了理论和方法论建议。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We review the literature (n 5 184) on “socially oriented informal organizational communication” —informal, discretionary, social communication that occurs outside formal organizational channels and that does not convey information core to purposeful action—to synthesize existing work and present an agenda for future research. Although informal social communication makes up about two-thirds of conversations and is the “social glue” of the workplace, it is often treated as a disruptive or negative force and is a taken-for-granted part of most work activities. This “backstage” category of workplace communication is ripe for a review and synthesis: we have witnessed a proliferation of various forms of informal communication from a diverse set of disciplines; informal communication has demonstrated significant, yet inconsistent and even competing, impacts on employee outcomes; and some of the most significant workplace trends and disruptions are affecting employees’ “in between” interactions. This calls for taking stock of the conceptual landscape to differentiate forms, features, functions, and implications of informal communication for employees to help move the literature forward theoretically and methodologically. We discuss conceptualizations and dimensions of informal communication; present a framework to organize, unify, and advance the literature; and unpack how it influences interand intrapersonal mechanisms and production outcomes. We also extend this review and framework to guide directions for future research and practice.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Private capital decisions—across private equity and private credit—shape innovation, firm transformation, and capital allocation. Yet, how investors decide remains underintegrated across theories and methods. Scholarship has developed along three metatheoretical traditions—economic rationality, social embeddedness, and psychological boundedness—and has relied heavily on factor–outcome designs, making it difficult to distinguish durable mechanisms from behavioral bias or context-bound artifacts. We review 936 articles spanning more than 80 years. We synthesize them into a staged, multilevel framework that maps the three logics to core modules: investors’ strategies and characteristics; decisionmaking cues and approaches; mechanisms; decision focus (selection, structuring, portfolio management, and exit); performance and broader implications; and external contingencies. This integrative lens organizes what is known—clarifying which factors matter, through which mechanisms, and under what conditions—and specifies how the logics that jointly govern private capital decision-making might act as complements or substitutes. In doing so, it provides a common architecture for a more cumulative research program on private capital and a template for studying judgment under uncertainty more broadly.

私募资本决策——涵盖私募股权和私募信贷——塑造了创新、企业转型和资本配置。然而, 投资者如何决策在理论和方法上仍缺乏整合。学术研究沿着三个元理论传统发展——经济理性、社会嵌入性和心理有限性——并严重依赖于“因素-结果”设计, 这使得区分持久机制与行为偏差或受环境限制的人为产物变得困难。我们回顾了跨越 80 多年的 936 篇文章。我们将它们综合为一个阶段性的、多层次的框架, 将这三种逻辑映射到核心模块: 投资者的策略和特征; 决策线索和方法; 机制; 决策重点 (选择、结构化、投资组合管理和退出); 绩效及更广泛的影响; 以及外部权变因素。这一整合视角组织了已知知识——阐明了哪些因素通过哪些机制以及在什么条件下起作用——并具体说明了共同治理私募资本决策的逻辑如何作为补充或替代。通过这样做, 它为私募资本领域更具累积性的研究计划提供了一个通用架构, 并为更广泛地研究不确定性下的判断提供了模板。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We review recent research on how social movements and firms interact. Where previous research conceptualized movement–firm interactions as contentious, new research points to growing cooperative interactions. We detail how the boundaries between movements and firms are blurring by reviewing research on contentious targeting of firms by movements, firms’ participation in movements through their own activism, and firms’ partnering with movements through firm–activist collaborations. Our review surfaces both commonalities across the three domains and important points of divergence. We highlight how commonalities across the phenomena and their dynamics offer research opportunities at the intersection of the three domains. We also highlight how their points of divergence surface opportunities for research to address blind spots in each. As boundaries between firms and movements blur, we also consider how firms and corporate elites increasingly extend their influence into domains traditionally occupied by social movements. Our review suggests a need to better understand the agenda-setting and cultural-symbolic power processes that operate through corporate activism and firm–movement partnerships.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Economic and psychological paradigms conceptualize negotiations as time-bounded events set apart from our organizational relationships. These paradigms yield a deep understanding of how negotiators can maximize their dealmaking effectiveness. They also constrain our understanding by abstracting negotiations from the ongoing relationships within which they are embedded. Deeper insight into negotiation dynamics requires a broader view, one that locates negotiations within their relational context. By distilling constructs from disciplines that offer this broader perspective, I identify three insights that expand our conceptualization of negotiation. First, the interaction between broad relationship and domain-specific negotiation narratives shapes how individuals approach negotiations and how they craft settlements. Second, embedding negotiations within a relationship trajectory highlights a recursive dynamic: relationship quality determines at-the-table tactics, and this experience spills over to transform the ongoing relationship. Third, relational tone—the what and how of interpersonal interactions—resets the between-negotiation relationship trajectory. This maintenance work establishes relationship expectations and facilitates (or impedes) convergence to shared narratives, becoming a critical input into subsequent negotiations. In conclusion, I discuss the unifying constructs that broaden negotiation theory, identify the pedagogical implications of a relational perspective, and outline the methodological expansion needed to benefit from these insights.

经济学和心理学范式将谈判概念化为脱离组织关系的时间受限事件。这些范式使人们深入理解了谈判者如何最大限度地提高交易效率。但它们也通过将谈判从其嵌入的持续关系中抽象出来，限制了我们的理解。对谈判动态的更深入洞察需要更广阔的视野，即将其置于关系背景之中。通过提炼提供这种广阔视角的学科构建，我提出了扩展谈判概念化的三个见解。首先，广泛的关系与特定领域的谈判叙事之间的相互作用，塑造了个人处理谈判的方式以及他们达成协议的方式。其次，将谈判嵌入关系轨迹中凸显了一种递归动态：关系质量决定了谈判桌上的策略，而这种经历会溢出并转化持续的关系。第三，关系基调——人际互动的形式和内容——重置了谈判之间的关系轨迹。这种维护工作建立了关系预期，并促进（或阻碍）向共享叙事的收敛，成为后续谈判的关键投入。最后，我讨论了拓宽谈判理论的统一构建，确定了关系视角的教学意义，并概述了从这些见解中获益所需的实证方法扩展。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Contemporary organizational activities are increasingly intertwined with legal considerations. Research across multiple disciplines suggests that organizations do not merely comply with the law, but engage in “legal and regulatory entrepreneurship,” wherein they strategically exploit the law to secure advantages. Such organizational actions are significant because they impact not only firm-level outcomes but also the broader legal landscape by influencing legislation, legal precedents, or interpretations of compliance. Yet, existing research in this domain remains fragmented across diverse paradigms and disciplines, hindering systematic scholarly inquiry. In this review—drawing on 509 publications and working papers from management, sociology, law, economics, and political science—we identify 10 primary organizational tactics of legal and regulatory entrepreneurship. We then describe how organizations use each tactic, and present the key conditions that enable their use. Next, we place these tactics within a framework of intended targets—legislative, regulatory, and judicial authorities—and articulate the specific responses they elicit. This emergent framework demonstrates how organizational legal and regulatory entrepreneurship can affect the acting organizations and ultimately reshape the law itself, thereby generating broader economic and legal consequences.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Greed, one of the oldest social constructs, has been lauded for driving competition and economic ambition that stimulates economic growth and enables technological progress. It has also been ostracized as the root cause of economic inequality, global poverty, and climate change as it prioritizes short-term profits over sustainable, equitable development. While the concept of greed informs a wide range of disciplines, including organizational behavior, psychology, strategic management, marketing, political science, economics, and finance, it lacks construct clarity and a commonly accepted definition. Our bibliometric review of the greed literature reveals that it is characterized by 10 major, loosely connected communities that consider greed at varying levels of analysis. We propose a conceptual definition of greed incorporating acquisitiveness, excess, and harm, which appear across these communities. We categorize research communities based on level of analysis and critically review each community's core disciplines, treatment of greed, and focal economic, social, and psychological outcomes. Our multilevel framework integrates scholarly work on greed and serves as a basis for future research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Amid multiple crises on a planetary scale, alternative organizing offers plural possibilities for reconfiguring societal relations and bringing into being a more livable world. Despite growing interest, the literature on alternative organizing remains fragmented, marked by a narrow and selective integration of disciplinary and geographic knowledge communities. This fragmentation leads to ambiguities and contradictions in concepts and theory development. To address these issues, we review 50 years of research on alternative organizing, following three steps. First, we map the genealogy of research on alternative organizing, identify its relations with institutional orders, and distinguish key perspectives. Second, we develop an integrative framework that (a) identifies three constitutive dimensions of alternative organizing—imaginaries, alterity, and subjectivities—and (b) synthesizes the processes, frictions, and outcomes for societal transformation. Drawing on this framework, we suggest avenues to attune to the ways alternative organizing unsettles dominant orders and cultivates the present and future, other-wise.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Defensiveness is a pervasive challenge in organizational life. It emerges when leaders resist feedback, when teams deflect accountability, and when organizations develop routines that insulate them from change. Yet, research on defensiveness is fragmented, with four different perspectives that have developed in parallel: (1) psychodynamic research on defense mechanisms, (2) social cognitive studies on defensive reasoning, (3) behavioral research on observable defenses, and (4) organizational research on defensive routines and social defenses. In this integrative review of 523 peer-reviewed articles, we synthesize findings across the four perspectives to address the following questions: What is defensiveness? What triggers defensiveness? How does defensiveness unfold in organizations? What are effective ways to manage defensiveness? Across perspectives, we uncover a core paradox: defensiveness may offer short-term relief to individuals, but it creates dysfunction in the systems it aims to protect. Understanding this paradox is key to managing defensiveness and interrupting reinforcing defensive cycles in organizations.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

How to make markets more inclusive is an important grand challenge of our times. The rapidly growing literature on inclusive markets has increasingly focused on the interplay between intermediaries seeking to build more inclusive markets and established institutions that reinforce discriminatory practices but has remained segregated with a focus on either constraining institutional effects or liberating intermediary potential. Overlooked is the dynamic, temporal, and power-laden nature of their relationship. Our review offers a systematic overview and synthesis of this disparate literature, paving the way for future research. Using a combination of bibliometric and qualitative analyses, we reveal the intellectual structures, present trends, and overarching perspectives that illustrate how research at the intersection of intermediaries and institutions has evolved over the past 30 years. The review emphasizes the need to move beyond contemporary ideational boundaries and proposes an integrative model that contributes to a deeper understanding of the underlying dynamics of intermediary-institutions interactions. Our review consequently provides novel insights into the interplay and helps invigorate this deeply consequential area of scholarship.

如何使市场更具包容性是当今时代的一个重要重大挑战。关于包容性市场的文献增长迅速，且日益关注寻求建立更具包容性市场的中介机构与强化歧视性做法的既有制度之间的相互作用，但这些研究仍然处于割裂状态，要么侧重于约束性的制度影响，要么侧重于释放中介机构的潜力。两者关系中动态的、时间性的和充满权力色彩的本质被忽视了。我们的综述对这些分散的文献进行了系统的回顾和综合，为未来的研究铺平了道路。通过结合文献计量学和定性分析，我们揭示了知识结构、当前趋势和总体视角，阐明了中介机构与制度交汇领域的研究在过去 30 年中是如何演变的。本综述强调需要超越当代的思想界限，并提出了一个整合模型，有助于更深入地理解中介机构与制度互动的底层动态。因此，我们的综述为这种相互作用提供了新的见解，并有助于振兴这一具有深远影响的学术领域。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

How nascent industries evolve and contribute to economic growth and societal advancement has long been a central topic for research and practice. In this review, we focus on the generative role of the heterogeneous actors who contribute to industry creation. Integrating robust literature streams spanning management, economics, marketing, and sociology, we highlight how industries emerge from the purposeful action and interplay of firm and nonfirm actors. Our synthesis provides an overarching framework wherein we situate individual research articles based on their examination of actor attributes (endowments; identities; inducements) and actions (when to engage; capability development and reconfiguration; modes of interactions). The engagement and attributes of heterogeneous actors and feedback loops across various actions are critical for outcomes at both industry and actor levels. Our article also reveals opportunities for future research: these include a deeper focus on actor attributes to address the imbalance in studies of firm and non-firm actors, expand attention to a broader set of markets, and examine emerging contexts.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Personal growth has interested management scholars for nearly a century, yet research on personal growth has not cohered into a substantive research domain. Nevertheless, various bodies of literature have made important strides in understanding specific elements of personal growth, such as the mindsets that foster such growth (e.g., growth mindset), growth following extreme challenges (e.g., post-traumatic growth), and personal growth within specific roles (e.g., leadership development). While these and other literature streams offer valuable insights about growth, they lack integration, resulting in an incomplete understanding of how employees achieve personal growth at work. To further research on personal growth in organizations, we review 292 articles from six streams of organizational and psychology literature that explore various aspects of personal growth. We provide an integration of the existing literature by developing a clear definition of personal growth, offering an integrative process model of personal growth, identifying opportunities for cross-pollination across growth literatures, and providing a clear agenda for future research on this topic. Our integrative framework responds to the expanding scholarly interest in personal growth and the increasing emphasis that individuals place on it as a crucial element of their working lives.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Researchers have long been intrigued by the actions and consequences of power in interorganizational relationships. However, power is fundamentally about a partner's potential to influence its counterparty. To examine power as potentiality in interorganizational relationships, we develop a framework linking their organizational features with various facets of power, which we call power regimes. Our review of the literature highlights how the development and displacement of conceptual ideas have contributed to a partial understanding of power and the neglect of power regimes in interorganizational relationships. We identify research opportunities to study the fundamentals of potentiality (variety of interorganizational arrangements, cognition), the dynamics of power regimes (domination, resistance, regime trajectories), and contextual factors (industry networks, algorithmic interfaces).

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

"Disorganization" also referred to as "mess," "deviation," or "disorder" is a concept that is embedded in the view of organizations as complex human systems. The word denotes organizational phenomena that deviate from organizational schema and procedures in an unplanned and unstructured manner. This concept is yet to be given full attention by management scholars, despite its continuous appearance, partially under different labels, throughout the history of the discipline for over five decades. Currently, there is a need for contributions that synthesize these scattered conversations into a coherent narrative. In addressing this gap, this article integrates these various strands of literature on disorganization. Thus, we systematically gather, review, organize, and integrate the extant literature (n = 192) on disorganization to map its evolution. Accordingly, we lay out a foundational body of literature that highlights the importance of enhancing our understanding of management through the integration of disorganization into our conversations about modern business. Accordingly, we present the theoretical infrastructure for the definition, analysis, and treatment of disorganization management. Through this review, we propose new conceptualizations while mapping out the development of the concept over time, followed by exploring the implications these developments present to both management theory and practice.

“无序”(也称为“混乱”、“偏差”或“失序”)是一个植根于将组织视为复杂人类系统观点的概念。该词表示以计划外且非结构化的方式偏离组织图式和程序的组织现象。尽管这一概念在超过五十年的学科历史中不断出现(部分使用了不同的标签), 但尚未得到管理学者的充分关注。目前, 需要通过贡献将这些零散的对话综合成一个连贯的叙述。为了填补这一空白, 本文整合了关于无序的各种文献流。因此, 我们系统地收集、回顾、组织并整合了现有的关于无序的文献(n = 192), 以描绘其演变过程。据此, 我们奠定了一个基础性的文献体系, 强调了通过将无序整合到我们关于现代商业的对话中来增强我们对管理理解的重要性。相应地, 我们为无序管理的定义、分析和处理提出了理论基础设施。通过这篇综述, 我们提出了新的概念化, 同时描绘了该概念随时间的发展, 随后探讨了这些发展对管理理论和实践的影响。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Managing with artificial intelligence (AI) refers to humans' interaction with algorithms performing managerial tasks in organizations. Two literatures exploring this interaction—human-AI collaboration (HAIC) and algorithmic management (AM)—have focused on distinct managerial tasks: while HAIC examines executive decision-making, AM focuses on managerial control. This article presents a review of both literatures to identify opportunities for integration and advancement. We observe that HAIC's and AM's micro-level emphases on different managerial tasks have resulted in diverging conceptualizations of context, agency, interaction, and outcome. Adopting a more encompassing systems lens, we unveil previously concealed linkages between HAIC and AM, suggesting that the two literatures have analyzed two sides of the same phenomenon: while HAIC explores how humans use AI to manage, AM describes how humans are managed by AI. We develop an integrative framework that elevates the viewpoint from tasks to the organizational context, from individual to collective agency, from local to systemic interaction, and from microlevel to multilevel outcomes. By employing this framework, we lay the foundations for an organizational perspective on managing with AI.

利用人工智能（AI）进行管理是指人类与在组织中执行管理任务的算法之间的互动。探索这种互动的两类文献——人机协作（HAIC）和算法管理（AM）——关注于不同的管理任务：HAIC 研究高管决策，而 AM 关注管理控制。本文对这两类文献进行了综述，以确定整合和改进的机会。我们观察到，HAIC 和 AM 对不同管理任务的微观层面侧重导致了背景、能动性、互动和结果的不同概念化。通过采用更具包容性的系统视角，我们揭示了 HAIC 和 AM 之间此前被隐藏的联系，表明这两类文献分析了同一现象的两个方面：HAIC 探索人类如何利用 AI 进行管理，而 AM 描述了人类如何被 AI 管理。我们开发了一个整合框架，将视角从任务提升到组织背景，从个人能动性提升到集体能动性，从局部互动提升到系统互动，以及从微观层面结果提升到多层面结果。By employing this framework, we lay the foundations for an organizational perspective on managing with AI.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The ubiquity of digital platforms is undeniable, as is their transactional efficiency and world-flattening possibilities. Yet, these platforms are contested battlegrounds where stakeholder power struggles reflect and influence broader societal turbulence. In the emerging era, alongside the blinding speed and global reach of the gig economy are looming specters of rentier capitalism, digi-serfdom, misinformation, data exploitation, digital addiction, and near-ungovernable algorithmic agents. To date, scholarly focus on digital platforms has been on their transactional features and impacts, dimensionalizing governance mechanisms as emanating from old economy conceptions of bottom-up or top-down checks and balances, or incentives and efficiencies. These emphases, while useful for understanding managerial control of digital platforms, largely ignore the extent to which digital platforms are contested organizational spaces, shaped by complex power dynamics. Foucault (1998: 63) asserted that power is everywhere, and that those who hold power are rarely well-understood by those who are subject to it. In seeking to rebalance and reorient digital platform research, we analyze and integrate existing research along four dimensions that shape platform power dynamics: actors, relations, faces, and struggle. We establish a future research agenda—including six testable propositions—that more thoroughly engages the critical, yet untapped, expertise of management scholars concerning platform power.

数字平台的普遍性是不言而喻的，其交易效率和抹平世界的可能性也是如此。然而，这些平台是充满争议的战场，利益相关者的权力斗争反映并影响着更广泛的社会动荡。在这一新兴时代，伴随着零工经济的惊人速度和全球影响力，食利资本主义、数字农奴制、虚假信息、数据剥削、数字成瘾以及近乎无法治理的算法代理的阴影也随之笼罩。迄今为止，学术界对数字平台的关注主要集中在其交易特征和影响上，将治理机制维度化为源自旧经济观念的自下而上或自上而下的制衡，或是激励与效率。这些重点虽然有助于理解对数字平台的管理控制，但在很大程度上忽视了数字平台作为受复杂权力动态塑造的争议性组织空间的程度。福柯 (Foucault, 1998: 63) 断言，权力无处不在，而那些掌握权力的人很少被受其支配的人所理解。为了重新平衡和重新定位数字平台研究，我们沿着塑造平台权力动态的四个维度——行动者、关系、面孔和斗争——对现有研究进行了分析和整合。我们确立了未来的研究议程，包括六个可测试的命题，以更深入地利用管理学者在平台权力方面至关重要但尚未开发的专业知识。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Job insecurity is a lasting and pervasive issue in the modern workplace. Given the extensive body of research highlighting the detrimental effects of job insecurity, it is imperative to explore factors that may either buffer against or amplify these negative outcomes. This review identifies and discusses five primary theoretical perspectives commonly used in existing research to explain the moderating effects of job insecurity: resource-threatening, appraisal, social-exchange, identity-threatening, and uncertainty reduction. Additionally, I categorize a wide array of moderators across three levels—individual, organizational, and societal—each with three subcategories. I summarize research findings within each category based on the theoretical perspectives, explore competing predictions from different perspectives, and highlight how quantitative job insecurity and qualitative job insecurity may activate the same or different moderators with varying effects. The review concludes with a comprehensive summary of overall findings, addressing the issues of research saturation and redundancy, the lack of replication studies, the jangle fallacy, and research gaps and future research directions.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The nexus between technology and workplace inequality has been a long-standing topic of scholarly interest, now heightened by the rapid evolution of artificial intelligence (AI). Our review moves beyond dystopian or utopian views of AI by identifying four perspectives—normative, cognitive, structural, and relational—espoused by scholars examining the impact of AI on workplace inequality specifically, and the structure and organization of work more broadly. We discuss the respective strengths, limitations, and underlying assumptions of these perspectives and highlight how each perspective speaks to a particular facet of workplace inequality: either encoded, evaluative, wage, or relational inequality. Integrating these perspectives enables a deeper understanding of the mechanisms, processes, and trajectories through which AI influences workplace inequality, as well as the role that organizational managers, workers, and policymakers could play in the process. Toward this end, we introduce a framework on the “inequality cascades” of AI that traces how and when inequality emerges and amplifies cumulatively as AI systems progress through the phases of development, implementation, and use in organizations. In turn, we articulate a research agenda for management and organizational scholars to better understand AI and its multifaceted impact on workplace inequality, and we examine potential mechanisms to mitigate its adverse consequences.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Systems perspectives portray social phenomena as dynamic wholes in which emergent outcomes arise from interdependent interactions among varied types of elements that span multiple levels of analysis. In doing so, they offer an alternative paradigm for understanding and studying core themes in organization and management research that challenges the linear approaches that have dominated our field. Our integrative review distinguishes three main types of systems perspectives (foundational, structural, and substantive) and shows how they can be used to conceptualize phenomena, empirically investigate or simulate them, and develop theoretical explanations for their dynamics and outcomes. To help organization and management research harness the full potential of systems perspectives, we highlight the value of shifting from ceremonial to meaningful use, identify phenomena for which systems perspectives are most relevant and needed, offer suggestions for navigating challenges in meaningful use of systems perspectives, and call for scholars to incorporate insights from other academic disciplines and outside Western science.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

There is a long tradition of literature review articles in management. Despite attempts to establish consensus around what constitutes a high-quality literature review, there remains significant dissensus. To explore conflicting views empirically, we draw on a mixture of topic modeling and abductive qualitative analysis to conduct an extensive meta-level review of literature reviews. We find 10 different kinds of literature reviews in practice, each of which has a different purpose. This makes management different from other disciplines that have been subject to more standardization. Further, we note that our findings largely do not overlap with existing classifications of literature reviews. The key distinction we propose is identifying a review article's purpose, as determined by differences in reflexivity and substantive focus. We use these two dimensions to develop a directional space that will help authors fit their articles to the status of the field they are reviewing, instead of blindly following a single idealized model or procedure. Looking into the future, we argue that as advances in artificial intelligence will likely make some review purposes redundant, scholars should develop new reviewing practices. Technologically infused and collective ways of reviewing the literature could help make researchers' engagement more reflexive, dynamic, and impactful.

管理学领域有着悠久的文献综述传统。尽管人们试图就高质量文献综述的构成达成共识，但仍存在显著的分歧。为了从经验层面探索相互冲突的观点，我们结合主题建模和溯因定性分析，对文献综述进行了广泛的元级审查。我们发现实践中存在 10 种不同类型的文献综述，每种都有不同的目的。这使得管理学不同于其他标准化程度更高的学科。此外，我们注意到我们的发现与现有的文献综述分类在很大程度上并不重叠。我们提出的关键区别在于识别综述文章的目的，这由反思性和实质性焦点的差异决定。我们利用这两个维度开发了一个方向性空间，旨在帮助作者使他们的文章适应所评论领域的现状，而不是盲目遵循单一的理想化模型或程序。展望未来，我们认为随着人工智能的进步可能会使某些综述目的变得多余，学者们应该开发新的综述实践。融入技术且集体化的文献综述方式有助于使研究者的参与更具反思性、动态性和影响力。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Temporal patterns—recurring sequences of events, activities, and behaviors in organizations that shape how time is organized and experienced—are fundamental to understanding organizational dynamics. Yet, their conceptualization in management studies remains fragmented, with diverse terminology and theoretical approaches hindering the integration of research findings. This review synthesizes the literature by identifying four distinct perspectives on temporal patterns: dictating, entraining, enacting, and reconceiving. Each perspective offers unique insights into how temporal patterns influence organizational dynamics. We unpack implicit theoretical tensions around agency, axiology, innovation, and ontology through what we term “temporal reflection.” Consequently, we uncover three themes that bridge perspectives: temporal conflict, temporal competence, and temporal (un)bridging. These convergent themes offer opportunities for theoretical integration and future research. Our review provides a holistic framework for understanding temporal patterns in management studies while identifying promising directions for cross-disciplinary dialogue and investigation.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Many researchers have drawn on the term “cognitive flexibility” to denote the explanatory mechanism underlying a broad array of organizational theories. However, conceptualization (and operationalization) of this construct is inconsistent, and sometimes conflates with that of other constructs, thereby weakening our understanding of cognitive flexibility and muddling the theories that rest on it. To bring clarity, we conduct a comprehensive search of cognitive flexibility constructs, strip away their labels, and use text analysis and manual coding of their descriptions to distinguish among five fluid thought processes: (1) elaborating, (2) dimensionalizing, (3) integrating, (4) juxtaposing, and (5) matching. We further group these processes into three higher-order categories involving the reshaping, contending, and shifting of cognitive structures—and conduct a literature review of their consequences and antecedents. Our surveying demonstrates that these processes’ substance and implications differ markedly. As such, we argue that cognitive flexibility may be more appropriately viewed as a multifaceted, rather than monolithic, construct. We discuss how a multifaceted approach helps bring clarity to implicated organizational theories—and opens up exciting questions about the transferability, antagonism, and trainability of cognitive flexibility’s distinct facets.

许多研究者利用“认知灵活性”一词来表示广泛组织理论背后的解释机制。然而，这一构念的概念化（和操作化）并不一致，有时会与其他构念混淆，从而削弱了我们对认知灵活性的理解，并使基于它的理论变得混乱。为了理清思路，我们对认知灵活性构念进行了全面搜索，剥离了它们的标签，并使用文本分析和对其描述的人工编码来区分五种流体思维过程：(1) 阐述、(2) 维度化、(3) 整合、(4) 并置和(5) 匹配。我们进一步将

这些过程分为三个涉及认知结构重塑、竞争和转换的高阶类别，并对其后果和前因进行了文献综述。我们的调查表明，这些过程的实质和影响显著不同。因此，我们认为将认知灵活性视为一个多维度的而非单一的构念可能更为恰当。我们讨论了多维度方法如何帮助理清相关的组织理论，并就认知灵活性不同维度的可迁移性、对抗性和可训练性提出了令人兴奋的问题。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

In the field of management, scholars from various communities of practice, including strategy, organizational behavior, business ethics, entrepreneurship, organization theory, and international business, have drawn on the cognitive psychology and behavioral decision research to explore how the cognitive biases of executives impact their strategic decision-making. While this proliferation of research highlights the importance of executive biases, it has also created a highly fragmented body of knowledge. We synthesize this diverse and fragmented research into an integrative framework on executive biases. This framework connects the negative and positive aspects of executives' reliance on heuristics, and also classifies various types of biases and the benefits of heuristic decision-making. It further connects executive biases to strategic decision-making processes and outcomes while also highlighting links to executives' roles and characteristics, the contextual environment, and potential debiasing approaches. A general insight from our review is that scholars may themselves have exhibited bias in the study of executive biases by focusing on executive biases and strategic decisions that are convenient to study and using the theoretical and empirical approaches commonly applied within their specific communities. To systematically address this scholarly convenience bias, we employ our integrative framework to develop a novel research agenda on executive biases.

在管理学领域，来自战略、组织行为、商业伦理、创业、组织理论和国际商务等不同实践共同体的学者，借鉴认知心理学和行为决策研究，探讨了高管的认知偏差如何影响其战略决策。虽然这类研究的激增凸显了高管偏差的重要性，但也造成了知识体系的高度碎片化。我们将这些多样且碎片化的研究综合成一个关于高管偏差的整合框架。该框架连接了高管依赖启发式方法的负面和正面影响，并对各种类型的偏差以及启发式决策的益处进行了分类。它进一步将高管偏差与战略决策过程和结果联系起来，同时也强调了与高管角色和特征、情境环境以及潜在去偏差方法的联系。我们综述的一个普遍见解是，学者们在研究高管偏差时，可能通过关注便于研究的高管偏差和战略决策，并使用其特定共同体中常用的理论和实证方法，从而表现出偏差。为了系统地解决这种学术便利性偏差，我们利用我们的整合框架制定了一个关于高管偏差的新颖研究议程。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Concerns about imprecise concepts and incoherent theories have long plagued management studies. Though systematic categorizing was once proposed as a remedy for those concerns, as it had resolved similar ones in other scientific disciplines, conversation about that potential ceased decades ago. This integrative review revives and refocuses that conversation by systematically categorizing how management scholars categorize concepts and phenomena, in four phases. Phases 1 and 2 (conceptual-mapping and etymological reviews, respectively) together yield a framework encompassing three general approaches—classical, commonsense, and contemporary—scholars across all scientific disciplines, including management studies, historically have taken to categorize concepts and phenomena. Phase 3 (a qualitative review) determines that management scholars seldom use formal methods to categorize. Finally, Phase 4 (another qualitative review) yields a second framework that more meaningfully differentiates the ways management scholars currently categorize. The results indicate that categorizing in management studies remains unsystematic due to scholars predominantly relying on intuitive methods and introducing idiosyncratic categorial schemes instead of rigorous methods to improve extant ones. Unexpected findings from each phase provide insights into the changes scholars must make to categorize systematically as well as how doing so would foster more precise conceptualizing and coherent theorizing in the field.

长期以来, 概念不精确和理论不连贯的问题一直困扰着管理学研究。虽然系统分类曾被提议作为解决这些问题的补救措施 (因为它已解决了其他科学学科中的类似问题), 但关于这一潜力的讨论在几十年前就停止了。本综述通过四个阶段系统地管理学者如何对概念和现象进行分类进行分类, 从而复兴并重新聚焦了这一讨论。第 1 阶段和第 2 阶段 (分别为概念映射和词源学综述) 共同产生了一个包含三种通用方法 (古典、常识和当代) 的框架, 这些方法是包括管理学在内的所有科学学科的学者在历史上对概念和现象进行分类时所采用的。第 3 阶段 (定性综述) 确定管理学者很少使用正式方法进行分类。最后, 第 4 阶段 (另一项定性综述) 产生了第二个框架, 该框架更有效地地区分了管理学者目前的分类方式。结果表明, 由于学者主要依赖直觉方法并引入特质性的分类方案, 而不是采用严谨的方法来改进现有方案, 管理学研究中的分类仍然是不系统的。每个阶段的意外发现都为学者们必须做出的改变提供了见解, 以便进行系统分类, 并说明了这样做将如何促进该领域更精确的概念化和更连贯的理论化。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

As societal loneliness has reached epidemic proportions, the concept of community is receiving more attention as a possible antidote. However, to date, no systematic reviews have been conducted in organizational studies, and consensus is lacking on what defines community and how to create it. In our review of 839 articles, we found that the concept of community has been evoked to refer to various phenomena at the micro or macro level—in terms of neighborhood, profession or occupation, community of practice, or in a psychological sense. Scholars have examined community within the organization or outside the organization, but rarely within one study. We offer an integrative definition of community as a group of people who are defined by particular boundaries—geographic, physical, or relational—have a sense of membership that is within and distinct from others, share a connection or attachment, and have a sense of caring for or obligation to one another. We also identify in the literature common means of cultivating communities and outcomes of doing so, finding far more research addressing community benefits. We suggest ways of advancing our understanding of community by bringing together distinct perspectives on community inside the organization with community outside the organization.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Given the complex environments in which most organizations operate today, work teams are confronted with adversity more frequently. Accordingly, it is important to understand how these teams are impacted by adversity and how they strive to overcome the challenges they face. As a result, substantial research attention has been given to the topic of teamwork under adversity. However, this research has emerged across multiple disciplines and various communities of practice, leading to a lack of shared understanding of what team adversity is and a proliferation of adversity-related concepts. To synthesize the existing literature, we leverage bibliographic coupling and qualitative content analysis approaches to examine a sample of 1,743 articles. Based on our integration of this literature, we present an inclusive definition of team adversity and introduce a nomological network that addresses the relationships among team adversity triggers, consequences, management approaches, as well as adversity-related resources and interventions that shape how teams experience and respond to adversity. We conclude by proposing several directions for future research that build upon the foundation provided by our review and synthesis of the team adversity literature.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Our integrative review of anger in organizational life uncovered four organizing dimensions to understanding and productively managing the life cycle of anger: roles in an anger episode (i.e., angry person, target, and observer), phases of an episode (i.e., stimulus, experience, and response), time (i.e., within and beyond the episode), and level of control. Although much existing work has focused on freeze frames of specific aspects of anger, integrating these dimensions spurred development of the intensity-direction framework, which encapsulates two unifying underlying themes: the intensity (which can be amplified or dampened) and direction (which can be focused or redirected) of anger. Much like the flow of water through a garden hose, scholarship on anger needs to understand when, where, why, and how the intensity and direction of the flow of anger varies. Based on this integrative framework, we identify directions for future research that are ripe for continued exploration.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Along with the explosive growth in decentralization of organizations and in research that studies them, skepticism has emerged regarding the possibility that decentralization is a “mirage.” Specifically, the real-world effectiveness of decentralized forms of organizing has been both praised and challenged. In other words, is decentralization a revolution or a mirage? We address this question by first examining the “ideal” form of centralized organization—bureaucracy—introduced in the 1920s. We then identify key temporal pivot points that launched new trajectories of decentralization with increasingly distributed decision-making, disrupting the ideal. We identify four pivots (multidivisional, organic, community, and platform), discuss how each challenged bureaucracy’s core assumptions of an ideal form of organizing, and highlight both the advantages and the potential limitations of each. We conclude that recent decentralization trends represent neither a revolution nor a mirage. Rather, we uncover a resurgence of evolving decentralization concepts, developed across these four historical waves of disruption. We end our review with an integrative theoretical framework that offers a fresh perspective on decentralization. It suggests opportunities to develop and validate novel theoretical claims and directs scholarly efforts toward overlooked areas such as temporal dynamics, feedback loops, measurement, and the reversal of decentralization efforts.

随着组织分权以及研究这些组织的学术成果的爆炸式增长，关于分权可能只是“海市蜃楼”的怀疑也随之产生。具体而言，分权化组织形式在现实世界中的有效性既受到了赞誉，也面临着挑战。换言之，分权究竟是一场革命还是海市蜃楼？我们首先通过考察 20 世纪 20 年代引入的集权组织“理想”形式——官僚制——来探讨这一问题。随后，我们识别了启动新分权轨迹的关键时间转折点，这些轨迹伴随着日益分布式的决策，打破了理想状态。我们识别了四个转折点（多部门制、有机式、社群和平台），讨论了每一个转折点如何挑战官僚制关于理想组织形式的核心假设，并强调了每种形式的优势和潜在局限。我们的结论是，近期的分权趋势既不代表一场革命，也不是海市蜃楼。相反，我们发现是在这四波历史性变革浪潮中演变的分权概念的复兴。在综述的最后，我们提出了一个综合理论框架，为分权提供了全新的视角。该框架为开发和验证新的理论主张提供了机会，并将学术努力导向被忽视的领域，如时间动态、反馈回路、测量以及分权努力的逆转。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Creativity and affect (moods and emotions) are inherently and intimately connected, and management research has broadly acknowledged that affective states influence creative outcomes. Despite increasing research attention, the field lacks a systematic understanding of the affect-creativity link. Moreover, although the literature increasingly views both affect and creativity as dynamic social processes, this view is not reflected in our current understanding of their relationship. Disciplinary research silos further complicate this issue. We aim to address these concerns and provide an integrative and multidisciplinary review of the affectcreativity link, moving scholarship toward a dynamic social process view of the link. We critically examine 294 empirical studies published since 2008 across various disciplines, including organizational behavior, entrepreneurship, marketing, and psychology. We review this work along four quadrants of a 2 3 2 framework (outcome-oriented vs. process-oriented research 3 within-creator vs. socially oriented research) to uncover the dynamic relations between affective states and creativity, along with their profoundly social nature. We subsequently integrate this work to propose our overarching dynamic social process framework of the affect-creativity link, the creativity and affect as social processes (CASP) framework. The CASP framework emphasizes that the influence of affect on creative outcomes is mediated by three complementary pathways and best understood as a function of both affective states and creative processes under consideration. Additionally, it highlights that social factors are critical in fully understanding the reciprocal and dynamic relationship between affect and creativity.

创造力和情感（心境和情绪）有着内在且密切的联系，管理学研究已广泛承认情感状态会影响创造性成果。尽管研究关注度日益增加，但该领域仍缺乏对情感与创造力联系的系统性理解。此外，尽管文献越来越多地将情感和创造力都视为动态的社会过程，但这一观点并未反映在我们目前对其关系的理解中。学科研究的孤岛化进一步使这一问题复杂化。我们旨在解决这些问题，并对情感与创造力的联系提供一份综合性的多学科综述，推动学术研究迈向该联系的动态社会过程视角。我们批判性地审查了 2008 年以来在组织行为学、创业学、市场营销和心理学等各个学科发表的 294 项实证研究。我们沿着 2 × 2 框架的四个象限（结果导向型 vs. 过程导向型研究 × 创作者内部 vs. 社会导向型研究）对这些工作进行了综述，以揭示情感状态与创造力之间的动态关系及其深刻的社会本质。随后，我们整合了这些工作，提出了情感与创造力联系的总体动态社会过程框架，即“创造力与情感作为社会过程”（CASP）框架。CASP 框架强调，情感对创造性成果的影响由三个互补路径中介，并且最好被理解为所考虑的情感状态和创造性过程的函数。此外，它强调社会因素对于全面理解情感与创造力之间的互惠和动态关系至关重要。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

In global supply chains, subpar working conditions are a critical issue affecting organizations, workers, civil society, and policymakers alike. Our objective is to evaluate the approaches to improve working conditions within global supply chains and their implications. Through a comprehensive review that integrates insights from various social science disciplines, we offer a fresh perspective on this challenge. We begin by identifying factors at multiple levels—supply chain, workplace, individual, and institutional—that contribute to poor working conditions, and explore how these factors, in some configuration, contribute to poor working conditions in different sample archetypes of global supply chains. We then present the factors driving lead organizations to improve working conditions in their global supply chains. Next, we dissect the transactional and relational approaches commonly implemented by lead organizations, assessing their mechanisms and effectiveness. Our review indicates that these approaches have limited success. As an alternative, we synthesize diverse insights to introduce a systemic approach grounded in three pivotal mechanisms: cooperation, recognition, and evolution. This approach aims to tackle the multifaceted factors affecting working conditions. To advance the systemic approach, we propose critical research questions that pave the way for future studies.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Psychological trauma has been recognized in psychology and medicine for nearly four decades, yet it remains underexplored in the management literature. Further, the fragmentation of research across disciplines limits the development of a comprehensive understanding relevant to organizational contexts. Through an interdisciplinary synthesis of 1,517 articles across management and business, health sciences, and behavioral and social sciences, this paper develops a grounded working definition of “work-related psychological trauma” and differentiates it from related workplace concepts. The review identifies four central categories of trauma studies—etiological, phenomenological, pathogenic, and teleological—that reflect key aspects of the trauma process and organize the research landscape. These categories converge in the development of the Integrated Trauma Response and Adaptation Model (ITRAM), which conceptualizes trauma as a dynamic, individualized process triggered by exposure to potentially traumatic events and shaped by individuals’ unique etiology. The model unfolds across five distinct but interconnected stages: subjective perception, immediate peritraumatic distress, physiological regulation and initial adaptation, long-term recovery, and subsequent exposure reactivity. Over time, adaptation is theorized to manifest as inoculation, protection, amplification, or sensitization. Overall, this integrative synthesis accounts for different responses to similar exposures and advances our understanding of work-related psychological trauma, offering theoretical and practical insights.

心理创伤在心理学和医学领域已被认可近四十年，但在管理学文献中仍未得到充分探索。此外，跨学科研究的碎片化限制了对组织背景相关内容的全面理解。通过对管理与商业、健康科学以及行为和社会科学领域的1,517篇文章进行跨学科综合，本文提出了“工作相关的心理创伤”的扎根工作定义，并将其与相关的职场概念区分开来。该综述确定了创伤研究的四个核心类别——病因学、现象学、致病性和目的论——这些类别反映了创伤过程的关键方面并组织了研究版图。这些类别汇聚在整合创伤反应与适应模型（ITRAM）的开发中，该模型将创伤概念化为一个动态的、个体化的过程，由暴露于潜在创伤事件触发，并由个体独特的病因塑造。该模型在五个截然不同但相互关联的阶段展开：主观感知、即时创伤期痛苦、生理调节与初步适应、长期恢复以及随后的暴露反应性。随着时间的推移，适应被理论化为表现为接种、保护、放大或敏化。总的来说，这种整合性综合解释了对相似暴露的不同反应，并推进了我们对工作相关心理创伤的理解，提供了理论和实践见解。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

In light of recent recognition of the timeliness, relevance, and need for more research on the impostor phenomenon, we conducted an integrative review of organizational research and the relevant work from nearby disciplines. We engaged in co-citation mapping to identify silos and fragmentation within and across disciplines, and we leveraged text analysis tools to trace the construct's evolution. Next, we identified issues of construct clarity and surfaced foundational assumptions that, upon review of the evidence, appeared ill founded or inadequate. The challenges and assumptions we identified form the bedrock for three emergent insights. First, following from the lack of construct clarity, we suggest recentering the phenomenon's defining cognitive feature—the belief that others overestimate one's abilities—as an important course correction. Second, stemming from the questionable assumptions, we outline opportunities for future theoretical development and empirical exploration. Third, to inspire the next wave of research by organizational scholars, we bridge lines of inquiry at the intersection of the impostor phenomenon and the organizational domains alongside which it is often mentioned (i.e., leadership, diversity, and identity).

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The scholarly community has witnessed an explosion of interest in large language models (LLMs)—that is, AI systems trained on vast corpora of text that can generate, interpret, and analyze text in response to human prompts. In this editorial, we examine the potential of LLMs to augment management scholars' ability to review literature—to characterize how fields grow, where they shift, and which contributions stand out as influential turning points. Integrative reviews aim to synthesize diverse literatures. They surface conceptual tensions, identify overarching patterns, and offer conceptual clarity in fields marked by fragmentation (Cronin & George, 2023). Yet, doing this well is hard. Scholars are limited by bounded attention spans, partial recall, and limited interdisciplinary fluency. Our manual coding techniques struggle to keep pace with the rapid expansion of literature across increasingly interconnected fields. Here, LLMs offer something genuinely new. They

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

I review four decades of research on narrative, or story, integrating theoretical and empirical approaches that influence management, strategy, and organization theory. I conceptualize narrative as a tool of thinking and communicating that offers particular possibilities for action, or affordances. Narrative affordances derive from narrative's formal structure and the social norms that affect its use. I inductively identify four actions or affordances that individuals and organizations advance with narrative: making meaning, persuading, sharing, and coordinating. Together, the interdependent affordances articulate a programmatic theory of narrative. Clustering by action reveals how narrative research programs fit or clash as a function of the affordances they emphasize. I also highlight how narrative can be compared to and combined with other conceptual and linguistic tools, like quantification. Overall, this review highlights canonical and cutting-edge work, finds common cause across strands of research, and concludes with promising paths forward from the knowledge frontier for both management and narrative research.

我回顾了四十年来关于叙事（或故事）的研究，整合了影响管理学、战略学和组织理论的理论 with 实证方法。我将叙事概念化为一种思维和沟通工具，它为行动提供了特定的可能性，即“可得性” (affordances)。叙事可得性源于叙事的正式结构以及影响其使用的社会规范。我归纳性地识别了个人和组织利用叙事推进的四种行动或可得性：赋予意义、说服、分享和协调。这些相互依赖的可得性共同构成了一个叙事的纲领性理论。按行动进行聚类揭示了叙事研究计划如何根据其强调的可得性而相互契合或冲突。我还强调了叙事如何与其他概念和语言工具（如量化）进行比较和结合。总的来说，本综述重点介绍了经典和前沿的研究工作，在不同的研究分支中寻找共同点，并从知识前沿出发，为管理学和叙事研究总结了极具前景的未来发展路径。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Even though management research on caste is growing, it is not yet on a clear trajectory to realize its vast potential due to varying terminology and framing of caste, the limited incorporation of directly relevant work from proximate disciplines, and the narrow and selective usage of the attributes of caste. To remove these obstacles, we review 259 scholarly works on caste (216 articles and 43 books and research reports) and develop an integrative framework to (a) clarify the contemporary manifestations of caste as being a graded hierarchy, an inherited membership, and a set of socially enforced practices; and (b) summarize the outcomes of caste at individual, occupational, organizational, and societal levels, while also consolidating the mechanisms through which caste influences these outcomes. Additionally, to position management scholarship on this topic for greater impact, we develop a research agenda that reflects contemporary interests in management research and the world at large about inclusion in organizations and societies. The caste system has practical significance for a large portion of the global population.

尽管关于种姓的管理研究正在增长，但由于种姓术语和界定的差异、对邻近学科直接相关工作的整合有限，以及对种姓属性的使用狭隘且具有选择性，该领域尚未走上实现其巨大潜力的清晰轨道。为了消除这些障碍，我们回顾了 259 部关于种姓的学术著作（216 篇文章以及 43 本书籍和研究报告），并开发了一个整合框架，以（a）阐明种姓在当代的表现形式，即等级森严的阶层、继承的成员身份和一套社会强制执行的惯例；以及（b）总结种姓在个人、职业、组织和社会层面的结果，同时巩固种姓影响这些结果的机制。此外，为了使该课题的管理学研究产生更大的影响，我们制定了一个研究议程，反映了当代管理研究以及整个世界对组织和社会包容性的关注。种姓制度对全球很大一部分人口具有实际意义。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Managerial authority is a fundamental concept within organizational and management research, often understood as a defining feature of organizations. However, far-reaching questions have been raised about its legitimacy as well as its effectiveness as a mechanism of coordination under modern productive conditions. Moreover, there are substantial disagreements concerning its function, characteristic activities, and basis of legitimacy, yet no comprehensive review of this notion exists. We perform such a review, focusing especially on issues of legitimacy and function and how they are related to the moral dimension of managerial authority. In our review, we identified two distinct approaches to managerial authority, namely bureaucratic theories and efficiency-based theories, each involving several variations (five and three, respectively). Drawing together themes from our review, we argue further that, given the many challenges facing managerial authority in a contemporary context, there is a need for an integrative theory of authority that both identifies complementarities between the differing dimensions of authority and attributes a fundamental role to the moral dimension. We outline such a theory and a related research agenda.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

When a person expresses an emotion at work, the way others respond can influence the work-related outcomes of the expresser, the responder, and their surrounding team and organization. Growing literature has generated insights into how, when, and why different emotion-response strategies influence work outcomes. However, this area of research is fragmented, with variance in labels, conceptualizations, and operationalizations, as well as a piecemeal treatment of context, leading to mixed findings. To provide coherence to this area of inquiry, we offer an integrative review of 220 articles, which form the basis for our inductive point of view. We develop a theoretical framework to show that the influence of emotion-response strategies on work outcomes depends on (a) the relative placement of the strategy within our two-dimensional landscape (characterized by the relative tendency of the strategy to get involved with and to change the expressed emotion) and (b) the specific nature of the context (including nexuses of contextual factors). Our framework yields several insights for future research, including the need to study discrete emotion-response strategies within a common theoretical landscape; to address “change bias,” as lower change-oriented strategies often positively affect outcomes yet remain understudied; and to provide more nuanced integrations of context.

当一个人在工作中表达情绪时，他人的反应方式会影响表达者、反应者及其周围团队和组织的工作相关结果。越来越多的文献对不同情绪反应策略如何、何时以及为何影响工作结果产生了见解。然而，这一研究领域是碎片化的，在标签、概念化和操作化方面存在差异，且对情境的处理较为零散，导致了矛盾的研究结果。为了给这一探究领域提供连贯性，我们对 220 篇文章进行了综合综述，这些文章构成了我们归纳观点的基础。我们开发了一个理论框架，以展示情绪反应策略对工作结果的影响取决于：(a) 该策略在我们二维版图中的相对位置（其特征是该策略参与并改变所表达情绪的相对倾向），以及 (b) 情境的具体性质（包括情境因素的交汇点）。我们的框架为未来的研究提供了几点见解，包括需要在共同的理论版图中研究离散的情绪反应策略；解决“改变偏见”，因为低改变导向的策略通常会对结果产生积极影响，但仍未得到充分研究；以及提供更细致的情境整合。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Management research on “purpose” is dispersed. This is because scholars apply different perspectives on purpose, each associated with distinct approaches to its study. We find that one perspective views purpose as embedded in the business–society context or as embodied within organizations. A second perspective looks at the purpose of the organization and its purpose to specific stakeholders. We reviewed management literature on purpose conducted over the past two decades to unearth this fragmentation further and uncover possibilities for integration. We identify four themes that anchor the disjointed literature: identity, performance, objectives, and change. In addition, we organize the literature across six dimensions of purpose as a concept. Each dimension surfaces existing dichotomies in research: property, scope, stability, materiality, motive, and rationality. Both the anchoring themes and conceptual dimensions establish the groundwork for a programmatic agenda for future research, aimed to support purpose research as a distinct area of study in management.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Shareholder activism is an important driver of corporate change. Yet, the phenomenon has primarily been studied within disciplinary silos, providing only a partial understanding of the overarching process, the actors involved, the engagement approaches used, and the tangible outcomes of activism. Noting these limitations, the purpose of this review is threefold. First, we present an integrated account of the current state of cross-disciplinary knowledge on shareholder activism to identify what we know about different aspects of activist-firm engagements. Second, we use that account to develop a detailed map of the shareholder activism process, including how activists identify target firms, the engagement approaches used, the role of stakeholders' varied reactions, and outcomes of activism campaigns. Third, after mapping this process, we propose that the cumulative interdependencies identified by shareholder activism researchers can be more fully understood as a complex, dynamic, and adaptive system. This system accounts for activists' interdependence on other stakeholders, dynamic feedback loops whereby current campaigns affect future engagements, and strategic adaptive behaviors by firms and stakeholders over time. We use our system-level view of activism to identify a roadmap for future research that can more fully unpack the implications of shareholder activism on organizational and societal outcomes.

股东积极主义是企业变革的重要驱动力。然而,这一现象主要在各自的学科孤岛内被研究,仅提供了对整体过程、涉及的行动者、使用的参与方式以及积极主义切实结果的部分理解。注意到这些局限性,本综述的目的有三。首先,我们呈现了关于股东积极主义跨学科知识现状的综合说明,以识别我们对积极主义者与公司参与不同方面的了解。其次,我们利用该说明制定了股东积极主义过程的详细地图,包括积极主义者如何识别目标公司、使用的参与方式、利益相关者多样化反应的作用以及积极主义活动的结果。第三,在绘制这一过程后,我们提出,股东积极主义研究人员所识别的累积相互依赖关系可以更充分地被理解为一个复杂、动态且具有适应性的系统。该系统考虑了积极主义者对其他利益相关者的相互依赖、当前活动影响未来参与的动态反馈回路,以及公司和利益相关者随时间推移采取的战略适应行为。我们利用积极主义的系统层面视角,为未来的研究确定了路线图,以更充分地揭示股东积极主义对组织和社会结果的影响。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Research in management and organizational studies has emphasized the importance and the double-edged nature of (a)typicality. Organizational objects that are atypical within a context - in terms of features, characteristics, or behavior tend to generate skepticism and encourage rejection by eliciting confusion among relevant audiences, including investors, employees, customers, and partners. However, atypicality is also often cited as a vital source of competitive advantage, as atypical actors and products can attract significant attention, innovate, and even promote structural change in a field. While research aimed at reconciling this inconsistency has accumulated rapidly, this literature has remained fragmentary and scattered across several disciplines, resulting in mixed views, conceptualizations, and perspectives. In this article, we systematically reviewed 129 papers to advance a conceptual model that helps to establish a comprehensive organizational perspective on atypicality. We a) identify three perspectives on atypicality: cognitive, normative, and innovative, b) develop an integrative framework that elaborates on the sources, consequences, and boundary conditions of atypicality, and c) highlight avenues for future studies on this topic. We hope that this review on atypicality will encourage and inform future scholarship in this fascinating domain and elucidate novel opportunities for unleashing the generative potential of this important construct.

管理和组织研究强调了（非）典型性的重要性及其双刃剑性质。在特定背景下具有非典型性的组织对象——在特征、特性或行为方面——往往会引起相关受众（包括投资者、员工、客户和合作伙伴）的困惑，从而产生怀疑并促使拒绝。然而，非典型性也经常被引用为竞争优势的重要来源，因为非典型行动者和产品可以吸引显著关注、进行创新，甚至促进领域的结构性变革。虽然旨在调和这种不一致性的研究迅速积累，但此类文献仍然零散且分布在多个学科中，导致了混合的观点、概念化和视角。在本文中，我们系统地回顾了 129 篇论文，以提出一个有助于建立全面组织非典型性视角的概念模型。我们：a) 识别了非典型性的三个视角：认知、规范和创新；b) 开发了一个综合框架，阐述了非典型性的来源、后果和边界条件；c) 强调了该主题未来研究的途径。我们希望这篇关于非典型性的综述将鼓励并启发这一迷人领域的未来学术研究，并阐明释放这一重要构念生成潜力的创新机会。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Based on 259 articles published in the entrepreneurship, management, and finance literatures during 1990–2022, we provide an integrative review and synthesis of governance in new ventures. We structure our review around the formal contract between the new venture and its investors, and discuss the governance approaches of various pre-initial public offering investors across the three stages of the investment cycle: precontractual, contract design, and post-contractual. Pre-contractual governance and contract formation are explained using a signaling theory lens. To capture the intricacies of post-contractual governance, particularly for late-stage investors such as venture capitalists and private equity firms that have conflicting interests, multiple identities, and overlapping governance roles, we relax the core tenets of agency theory to direct academic inquiry toward a more sophisticated framework—multiple agency theory—that better reflects the complexities of post-contractual governance. Given the limitations of formal contracting in resolving the ambiguities of start-up governance, we integrate our narrative by using a complementary social embeddedness theory lens that highlights the importance of informal governance embedded in personal and social ties in creating implicit obligations based on trust, reciprocity, and reputation. Finally, we discuss how governance breakdowns can cause start-ups to fail, especially in their later stages.

性方面的局限性，我们利用互补的社会嵌入理论视角整合了我们的叙述，该视角强调了嵌入在个人和社会关系中的非正式治理在建立基于信任、互惠和声誉的隐性义务方面的重要性。最后，我们讨论了治理崩溃如何导致初创企业失败，特别是在其后期阶段。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Standards are ubiquitous in contemporary society and play a clear role in technological development, organizational functioning, and business success. Standards are very diverse and often boundary crossing in terms of stakeholders and impact, but are such diversity and range reflected by academic studies? We take stock of standardization research over the past decade, considering the full interdisciplinary breadth of this growing field. We use bibliometrics and network analysis to map emergent trends, and conduct an in-depth review of the literature. In doing so, we find that management science, along with economics, is at the core of work on standardization, bridging academic disciplines, and leading theoretical development. Technical disciplines, such as engineering and computer science, supply the largest body of literature, but rarely cross disciplinary boundaries and remain rather isolated. Building on our review, we discuss current debates and controversies and distill four interpretative perspectives on the recent and current developments of standardization research. Finally, we propose a research agenda for standardization research and practice for the years to come.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Crowdfunding, or soliciting small contributions from large and dispersed crowds through online platforms, is an increasingly indispensable strategy for established firms, young ventures, and aspiring entrepreneurs alike. Synthesizing research in the fields of management, entrepreneurship, innovation, operations, information systems, and marketing, we conduct an integrative review of the crowdfunding research accumulated over the past decade. We aim to break down disciplinary silos to develop a framework that integrates insights across research communities. We identify three underlying dimensions that differentiate extant research: the goal of the campaigner, the role of the crowd, and the boundary of the crowdfunding event. Scholars have brought two perspectives to bear on these questions: an elemental perspective and a processual perspective. We outline an integrative model that takes account of crowdfunding as a process involving heterogeneous participants with idiosyncratic monetary and nonmonetary goals at different stages. Our multidisciplinary review of this expanding body of literature not only integrates dispersed insights but also, more importantly, stimulates a future research agenda that goes beyond the traditional boundaries of crowdfunding research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Management scholars and practitioners have a longstanding interest in expertise and its benefits for individuals, organizations, and markets. However, today, experts and expertise also face a significant and broad crisis of credibility, authority, and trust in society. In order to better examine, understand, and realize the potential of expertise in and around organizations, our field is overdue for a comprehensive review of recent work on the concept. With an integrative review of the past two decades of management research on expertise, we map out this fragmented field and outline three perspectives on the concept. A “realist perspective” sees expertise as a substantive ability of individuals, a “constructivist perspective” sees expertise as socially constructed quality of collective actors, and a “situationist perspective” sees expertise as a situated enactment involving human and nonhuman actors. These perspectives make different assumptions about the nature of expertise and therefore reach different conclusions about its benefits and problems. By teasing out similarities and differences across the perspectives, we work toward greater construct clarity and develop six integrative opportunities for future research. We conclude with suggestions about how each of the three perspectives can help us better understand the crisis of expertise.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Urgent societal issues require corporations to make changes and contribute solutions. Insider social change agents are uniquely poised to propel this work. Operating from within their workplaces, they can advance changes that are linked to external social concerns but have purposes distinct from the organization's core strategies and operations. They undertake mobilization activities, making local moves that aim toward more broadly impactful changes. These efforts form the micro-foundations of organizational approaches to positive social change. We review and integrate five streams in which such insider social change agents have increasingly appeared: employee activism, issue selling, tempered radicalism, micro-corporate social responsibility, and social intrapreneurship. Our framework maps the features of change efforts, with elements of persons, issues, places, activities, and outcomes. With a shared framework, researchers can better characterize the multiplicity of insider change efforts and ascertain how they compare, collaborate, or compete. Research will benefit from taking a more integrative view, especially toward the aim of understanding how local efforts aggregate to broader social impacts. To understand how change is inhibited or supported, future research can theorize blockers of societal change alongside insider social change agents and look to the ecosystem level for reciprocal and amplifying processes.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Over the past three decades, research on entrepreneurial pitching has grown significantly, with an increasing number of scholars in management, entrepreneurship, and other social science disciplines studying the communication and decision-making processes that surround a pitch. Despite the considerable progress made, research remains scattered across different literatures with little integration so far to explain the pitching process, its key determinants and mechanisms, and its effects. To address this lack of integration, we reviewed 252 papers published on entrepreneurial pitching since 1986, synthesizing the work to date. We found the existing literature bifurcated across two distinct vantage points—one that conceptualizes pitching as driven by the entrepreneur, and the other as primarily shaped by the actions and decisions of the investor. This focus on different actors as causal agents has led pitching scholarship to become largely restricted to one-sided studies and to a proliferation of separate theories focused on isolated processes and effects. As a result, the broader communicative process of pitching, and the mechanisms through which it is constituted, remains undertheorized and underexamined. To aid future research, we integrate existing research into a comprehensive communicative framework and elaborate on the implications of this framework for future research. We conclude the paper by discussing the ways in which theory and research on pitching can better inform pedagogy and practice.

摘要 (中文):

在过去的三十年里，关于创业路演的研究显著增长，越来越多的管理学、创业学和其他社会科学学科的学者开始研究围绕路演的沟通和决策过程。尽管取得了长足进步，但研究仍然散布在不同的文献中，迄今为止很少有整合来解释路演过程、其关键决定因素和机制及其影响。为了解决这种整合缺乏的问题，我们回顾了自1986年以来发表的252篇关于创业路演的论文，综合了迄今为止的工作。我们发现现有文献分为两个不同的视角——一个将路演概念化为由创业者驱动，另一个则认为其主要由投资者的行动和决策塑造。这种将不同行动者视为因果代理人的关注，导致路演学术研究在很大程度上局限于单方面的研究，并导致了专注于孤立过程和影响的独立理论的激增。因此，路演更广泛的沟通过程及其构成的机制仍缺乏理论化和深入研究。为了辅助未来的研究，我们将现有研究整合到一个全面的沟通框架中，并阐述了该框架对未来研究的意义。最后，我们讨论了路演理论和研究如何更好地指导教学和实践。

59. Theories of Performance: A Review and Integration

绩效理论：综述与整合

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Performance is a critical construct across micro and macro management subfields (e.g., organizational behavior, entrepreneurship, strategic management). However, there is little consensus on how performance should be conceptualized. There are parallel and siloed research streams addressing firm- and individual-level performance, and a never-ending search for seemingly novel theories without satisfactory progress toward integrating them. To address these challenges, we systematically integrated performance-related theories. We reviewed 15,535 journal articles published in 44 journals from 1946 to 2022 and uncovered 239 unique performance-related theories that we integrated through six meta-theoretical constructs: firm-level (1) capabilities, (2) structures, and (3) transactions; and individual-level (4) knowledge, skills, abilities, and other characteristics, (5) roles, and (6) relationships. Moreover, we discovered that these meta-theoretical constructs are isomorphic across levels, which resulted in the CORE model of performance applicable at both levels of analysis: Performance (P) = Capacity (C) + Opportunity (O) + Relevant Exchanges (RE). We describe how the CORE performance model will enable researchers to stop working in theoretical silos, aiming for illusory theoretical contributions and thinking dichotomously about performance as processes or outcomes, and to start considering “the big picture” of performance, exploring the performance system, and considering how performance processes affect performance outcomes (and vice versa).

绩效是微观和宏观管理子领域（如组织行为学、创业学、战略管理）中的一个关键构念。然而，关于绩效应该如何概念化，目前尚未达成共识。针对公司层面和个人层面绩效的研究流派是平行且孤立的，并且学者们在不断寻找看似新颖的理论，但在整合这些理论方面却没有取得令人满意的进展。为了应对这些挑战，我们系统地整合了与绩效相关的理论。我们回顾了 1946 年至 2022 年间发表在 44 本期刊上的 15,535 篇期刊文章，发现了 239 个独特的绩效相关理论，并将其整合为六个元理论构念：公司层面的（1）能力、（2）结构和（3）交易；以及个人层面的（4）知识、技能、能力和其他特征、（5）角色和（6）关系。此外，我们发现这些元理论构念在不同层面上是同构的，从而产生了适用于两个分析层面的绩效 CORE 模型：绩效 (P) = 能力 (C) + 机会 (O) + 相关交换 (RE)。我们描述了 CORE 绩效模型将如何使研究人员停止在理论孤岛中工作，不再追求虚幻的理论贡献，不再将绩效二元地视为过程或结果，并开始考虑绩效的“大局”，探索绩效系统，并考虑绩效过程如何影响绩效结果（反之亦然）。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Slack is a prominent construct in management research, and has been shown to be relevant for a wide range of phenomena. Yet, despite slack's prominence and breadth of application, our review reveals a lack of clarity and consistency in the categorization, theorizing, and measurement of various types and forms of slack. This has led to differences in the characterization and treatment of seemingly identical kinds of slack, which prevents full exploitation of the conceptual depth of the slack construct and thus the creation of robust knowledge about slack resources. Based on a review of 229 studies that explicitly theorized about slack, we identify two fundamental dimensions of the slack construct—availability and fungibility—that allow us to: (a) systematize and integrate past research about slack and its implications for organizations, (b) enrich and expand theorizing on slack by advancing a novel typology for understanding slack resourcing decisions and orchestration in organizations, and (c) reinvigorate and open new directions for future research on slack.

冗余 (Slack) 是管理研究中的一个重要构念，并已被证明与广泛的现象相关。然而，尽管冗余具有显著性和应用广度，我们的综述揭示了在各种类型和形式的冗余的分类、理论化和测量方面缺乏清晰度和一致性。这导致了对看似相同的冗余种类的描述和处理存在差异，从而阻碍了对冗余构念概念深度的充分挖掘，进而阻碍了关于冗余资源的稳健知识的创造。基于对 229 项明确对冗余进行理论化研究的综述，我们确定了冗余构念的两个基本维度——可用性 (availability) 和通用性 (fungibility)——这使我们能够：(a) 系统化并整合过去关于冗余及其对组织影响的研究，(b) 通过提出一种理解组织中冗余资源决策和编排的新颖分类法，丰富并扩展冗余的理论化，以及 (c) 为未来关于冗余的研究注入活力并开启新方向。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Over the past two decades, necessity entrepreneurs—those who engage in entrepreneurship because of a belief that decent or desirable livelihood alternatives do not exist for them—have become increasingly visible in the entrepreneurship literature. During this time, however, necessity entrepreneurship—both the phenomenon and the theoretical construct—has acquired something of a bad name. As a phenomenon, necessity entrepreneurship is widely associated with capital constraints, marginal profits, and limited economic impact. As a theoretical construct, it is often seen as a crude and pejorative classification device. In this article, we take stock of this emerging body of research, providing an integrative account of extant research and a focused analysis of the main areas of discord within this literature. We set out specific pathways aimed at remediating incongruity between, on the one hand, how necessity entrepreneurship is defined and conceptualized and, on the other, how it manifests across the diverse array of real-world contexts that feature in this literature. We use these reflections to foreground an agenda for future research which is sensitized to the main concerns and critiques that have surfaced in this literature in recent years and to key shifts in the conceptual approach to which they have given rise.

在过去的二十年里，生存型创业者——即那些因为相信自己没有体面或理想的生计替代方案而从事创业的人——在创业文献中变得越来越引人注目。然而，在此期间，生存型创业——无论是作为一种现象还是一个理论构念——都背负了一定的负面名声。作为一种现象，生存型创业被广泛地与资本约束、边际利润和有限的经济影响联系在一起。作为一个理论构念，它通常被视为一种粗糙且带有贬义色彩的分类手段。在本文中，我们对这一新兴的研究群体进行了总结，提供了对现有研究的综合性说明，并对该文献中主要的分歧领域进行了重点分析。我们提出了具体的路径，旨在修复一方面是生存型创业的定义和概念化方式，另一方面是它在该文献中所涉及的各种现实背景下的表现形式之间的不一致性。我们利用这些思考来突出未来研究的议程，这些议程对近年来该文献中出现的各种主要关注点和批评，以及它们所引发的概念方法的关键转变具有敏感性。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

In contrast to the prevailing interindividual and interactionist perspectives on (un)ethical behavior, recent research has demonstrated that employees can dynamically transition between ethical and unethical behavior as part of an intraindividual moral self-regulation process. We review over 300 empirical studies that examined within-person processes (e.g., moral licensing, moral cleansing, and slippery slope) as explanations for a variety of organizationally relevant behaviors (e.g., [un]ethical behavior, organizational citizenship behaviors, and counterproductive work behaviors). From our review, we develop a multistage model that integrates the influences of individual traits and contextual factors with intraindividual moral self-regulation processes. Combining findings from diverse research domains (e.g., management, psychology, marketing, and economics), we emphasize the importance of these factors in understanding the evaluation of initial and compensatory (un)ethical behavior, the selection of targets for compensatory behavior, and shifts in moral reference points. In doing so, we highlight conceptual, empirical, and methods-related contributions to this literature, and we identify paths for future research that integrates different perspectives on behavioral ethics.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Technology use for nonwork-related purposes at work—defined as technology-facilitated behaviors primarily unrelated to job tasks that occur during working hours—is a prevalent phenomenon. However, the study of these behaviors is fragmented across three communities: counterproductive work behaviors (i.e., “cyber-slacking”); recovery (i.e., “microbreaks”); and a descriptive category that equates behaviors with constructs (e.g., “social media use”). Our review of 135 studies reveals the same behaviors are studied across all three communities but with critical shortcomings: distinctive areas of focus within each community, including theoretical divides; overlapping conceptualizations with ambiguous measurements; insufficient consideration of nuances in use behaviors; and an underexplained parity of positive and negative effects on key work and nonwork outcomes. Given these shortcomings, we identify five review-driven themes centered around the emergence of a 23 2 framework that pinpoints concrete behaviors as ranging from passive to active (i.e., how much effort is associated with use) and intrapersonal to relational (i.e., how much interpersonal interaction is involved). Our framework provides guidance for future research and practice on how best to identify precise patterns and situations regarding when specific use behaviors occur and whether they result in positive or negative outcomes.

工作场所中出于非工作相关目的的技术使用——定义为在工作时间内发生的、主要与工作任务无关的技术辅助行为——是一种普遍现象。然而，对这些行为的研究分散在三个群体中：反生产工作行为（即“网络摸鱼”）；恢复（即“微休息”）；以及一个将行为等同于构念的描述性类别（例如“社交媒体使用”）。我们对 135 项研究的回顾显示，这三个群体都在研究相同的行为，但存在关键缺陷：每个群体内部关注的领域各不相同，包括理论分歧；概念化重叠且测量模糊；对使用行为的细微差别考虑不足；以及对关键工作和非工作结果的正负效应对等现象解释不足。针对这些缺陷，我们确定了五个由综述驱动的主题，这些主题围绕着一个 23 2 框架的出现，该框架精准地将具体行为界定为从被动到主动（即与使用相关的努力程度）以及从个人内部到关系型（即涉及的人际互动程度）。我们的框架为未来的研究和实践提供了指导，即如何最好地识别关于特定使用行为何时发生以及它们是否会导致积极或消极结果的精确模式和情境。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Research on multisided platforms has emphasized how platform owners accumulate significant power over other platform actors, such as producers and customers, arguing for the need to balance such power with accountability. We review two perspectives on platform accountability: (a) a bottom-up, emergent perspective that focuses on the collective action taken by lower-powered platform actors such as producers (e.g., gig workers, app developers) to enhance rule adequacy and push back against platform owners’ power; and (b) a top-down, institutional perspective that emphasizes preventing extractive opportunism and maintaining a level playing field among different platform actors by enabling legal, regulatory, and governance changes.

The bottom-up perspective's overarching focus is on procedural (rule-focused) fairness, while the top-down perspective's focus is largely on distributive (outcome-focused) fairness. While both perspectives are important, they have limitations regarding platform accountability, especially given the power and informational asymmetries inherent among platform actors. Therefore, synthesizing across literatures, we provide a framework for platform accountability that accounts for both procedural and distributive fairness, and is based on a fundamental premise: multisided platforms require multisided accountability systems. Thus, our review proposes an approach for enforcing platform accountability that has the potential to rebalance the power between high-powered and low-powered platform actors.

关于多边平台的研究强调了平台所有者如何对生产者和客户等其他平台参与者积累巨大的权力，并主张需要用问责制来平衡这种权力。我们回顾了关于平台问责制的两种视角：(a) 自下而上的突现视角，侧重于由生产者（如零工工人、应用开发人员）等低权力平台参与者采取的集体行动，以增强规则的充分性并抵制平台所有者的权力；以及 (b) 自上而下的制度视角，强调通过法律、监管和治理变革来防止榨取性机会主义，并维持不同平台参与者之间的公平竞争环境。自下而上视角的核心关注点是程序公平（关注规则），而自上而下视角的核心关注点主要是分配公平（关注结果）。虽然这两种视角都很重要，但它们在平台问责方面都存在局限性，特别是考虑到平台参与者之间固有的权力和信息不对称。因此，通过综合各领域文献，我们提出了一个平台问责框架，该框架兼顾了程序公平和分配公平，并基于一个基本前提：多边平台需要多边问责体系。因此，我们的综述提出了一种实施平台问责的方法，该方法具有重新平衡高权力平台参与者与低权力平台参与者之间权力的潜力。

As part of the Academy of Management publication family, Academy of Management Annals (AMA) was created to provide integrative reviews of empirical research on critical issues and problems in management and organizations. This editorial describes how such reviews are themselves a form of research, using systematic methods to reduce bias and create trustworthy knowledge regarding a research domain and its trajectory, often with new discoveries. I am pleased to have the opportunity to write about reviews as research, because they advance our science and are part of my career journey. I treasure the clarity and fresh thinking well-specified review methods generate—and want to help other researchers have this experience. Systematic review methods are new in management research. So, it is no surprise that review proposals submitted to AMA often display problematic review methods. One common weakness is failing to thoroughly

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Judgment is an important concept in business and management research and related to several subfields, ranging from staff appraisal and entrepreneurship to strategic decision-making and business ethics. The popularity of the concept has given rise to a diversity of understandings, which, in some instances, lack theoretical precision or conceptual clarity. Our review offers a comprehensive overview and consolidates existing research on judgment in business and management research by identifying three perspectives: variance, prediction, and wisdom. We show how these perspectives converge by highlighting shared characteristics of judgment, such as it being evaluative, personal, and key to coping with uncertainty. In addition, our theoretical synthesis demonstrates how the three perspectives diverge along four central characteristics—theoretical inspiration, purpose, onto-epistemological orientation, and mode of reasoning—that shape how judgment is conceptualized and operationalized in business and management research. By developing a theoretical platform that configures judgment research into three distinct perspectives, our review opens up pathways for assessing the conceptual coherence and methodological implications of each perspective. Building on the latter, we explore how the three perspectives can complement each other and conclude by proposing future directions for the advancement of judgment research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Heuristics play an important role in organizational decision-making. Although management and organizational scholars have contributed significantly to our understanding of heuristics in organizations over the past seven decades, the literature has become fragmented over time. Three parallel streams of research—(1) heuristics and biases, (2) fast-and-frugal heuristics, and (3) simple rule heuristics—have emerged with somewhat conflicting views on the origins, use, and implications of heuristics. Despite their shared focus, these research streams tend to ignore or decry one another and operate in isolated camps. The purpose of our review is to integrate three largely disconnected streams to provide a more holistic view of heuristics in organizations. To do so, we review and synthesize the literature and put forward an integrative process model of heuristics in organizations. The model suggests that management and organizational researchers should pay closer attention to (a) the emergence of individual-level heuristics, (b) the conversion of individual-level heuristics to the organizational level, and (c) the evolution of an organization's portfolio of heuristics. Based on this novel process model, we set forth a fresh agenda for future research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Change is ubiquitous in people's daily work and life experiences. While a sizable body of research has examined individuals' reactions to change, different literatures have remained largely siloed. In this review, we integrate research on people's reaction to change in seven research clusters (marketing, macro-organizational change, microorganizational change, creativity, technological innovation adoption, voice, individual adaptation), through a domain of uncertainty (DOU) framework. We identify that the uncertainties associated with change fit into four domains, reflected in the questions people ask about change: conceptual uncertainty (What is the change?), functional value uncertainty (What is the value of the change?), process uncertainty (How will the change come about?), and impact uncertainty (What is the broader impact of the change?). The DOU framework integrates the existing research through the common lens of uncertainty, thus allowing specific communities of practice studying individuals' reactions to change to better engage in a dialogue with other nonoverlapping communities. By identifying two central levers—people's goals and the change features of novelty and ambiguity—that impact the relevance of the uncertainty domains and the ways people reduce uncertainties within those domains, the DOU framework further helps scholars better determine the factors that are important to an individual's reaction to change.

变革在人们的日常工作和生活经历中无处不在。虽然已有大量研究探讨了个体对变革的反应,但不同的文献在很大程度上仍处于孤立状态。在本综述中,我们通过不确定性领域(DOU)框架,整合了七个研究集群(营销、宏观组织变革、微观组织变革、创造力、技术创新采纳、建言、个体适应)中关于人们对变革反应的研究。我们发现,与变革相关的不确定性可以归入四个领域,这反映在人们询问关于变革的问题中:概念不确定性(变革是什么?)、功能价值不确定性(变革的价值是什么?)、过程不确定性(变革将如何发生?)以及影响不确定性(变革的更广泛影响是什么?)。DOU框架通过不确定性的共同视角整合了现有研究,从而使研究个体对变革反应的特定实践群体能够更好地与其他非重叠群体进行对话。通过确定两个核心杠杆——人们的目标以及变革的新颖性和模糊性特征——这些杠杆影响着不确定性领域的相关性以及人们在这些领域内减少不确定性的方式,DOU框架进一步帮助学者更好地确定对个体变革反应至关重要的因素。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We present an integrative approach to social innovation research to build a unified understanding of this emerging field. Based on a systematic literature review of articles about social innovation published in top-tier journals from 2003 to 2021, we argue that a “social innovation trap,” resulting from disciplinary silos, has limited our inquiries thus far. We contend that the social innovation trap has led the field to overlook three key insights. First, fragmentation across disciplines obscures the particular advantages of different sectors to social innovation. Second, the dominance of management within the social innovation field has led us to ignore the extent to which social innovation is embedded in space and place, which makes scale a fundamental dimension in need of exploration. Third, the management bent within social innovation scholarship has favored market perspectives over more democratic approaches. We call attention to two competing schools of thought—the instrumental and democratic perspectives—that open the field to broader inquiries into the role of innovation, knowledge, participation, and outcomes in social innovation. We conclude by delineating a research agenda that incorporates these three insights, to build the foundation for a more comprehensive social innovation field.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Entrepreneurship research, as with most organizational research, almost always adopts a race neutral lens through which racial inequality is understood as exogenous to organizational theories. This approach is problematic because entrepreneurship is an embedded process and cannot be understood independent of its contexts, and the contexts in which it unfolds are often marked by racial inequality despite the apparent absence of overt racial antipathy. We examine more than 100 articles that address entrepreneurship and race, with a focus on underrepresented minorities in the United States: African, Hispanic, and Native Americans. From these articles, we not only derive why minority entrepreneurs continue to be disadvantaged despite widespread support for their entrepreneurship, but we also elevate themes of racial agency endemic to entrepreneurship from marginalized racial positions. We argue that entrepreneurship research needs to consider race; that is, scholars need to incorporate racialized structures into their theorizing. Doing so not only will highlight the structural underpinnings of racial disadvantage for underrepresented minority entrepreneurs, but it also casts entrepreneurship as an essential mechanism for racial agency.

摘要 (中文):

创业研究与大多数组织研究一样，几乎总是采用种族中立的视角，将种族不平等理解为组织理论的外部因素。这种方法是有问题的，因为创业是一个嵌入式的过程，不能脱离其背景来理解，而创业展开的背景往往带有种族不平等的烙印，尽管表面上缺乏明显的种族敌意。我们审查了 100 多篇涉及创业与种族的文章，重点关注美国代表性不足的少数族裔：非裔、拉丁裔和美洲原住民。通过这些文章，我们不仅推导出为什么尽管创业得到了广泛支持，少数族裔创业者仍继续处于劣势，而且还提升了边缘化种族地位所特有的创业种族能动性。

性主题。我们认为，创业研究需要考虑种族；也就是说，学者们需要将种族化结构纳入其理论化过程。这样做不仅将凸显代表性不足的少数族裔创业者遭受种族劣势的结构性基础，还将创业塑造为种族能动性的一种重要机制。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

While many management studies have documented the rise of alternative, nonemployment working arrangements like the “gig” economy and electronic platforms, the application of contracting practices to actual employees is far more common in traditional employment, but understudied in the management literature. These practices include requiring employees to sign legal contracts such as noncompete agreements that limit their ability to quit, or mandatory arbitration clauses. We begin by describing the unique nature of traditional employment and of contracting. We then document the various contracting arrangements now imposed on employees, their prevalence, their effects, and what happens when these two systems operate at the same time. We also discuss the implications for the practice of management and provide a guide to research questions raised by this development.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

While people across the world value honesty, it is undeniable that it can sometimes pay to be dishonest. This tension leads people to engage in complex behaviors that stretch the boundaries of honesty. Such behaviors include strategically avoiding information, dodging questions, omitting information, and making true but misleading statements. Though not lies per se, these are nonetheless deviations from honesty that have serious interpersonal, organizational, and societal costs. Based on a systematic review of 169 empirical research articles in the fields of management, organizational behavior, applied psychology, and business ethics, we develop a new multidimensional framework of honesty that highlights how honesty encompasses more than the absence of lies—it has relational elements (e.g., fostering an accurate understanding in others through what we disclose and how we communicate) and intellectual elements (e.g., evaluating information for accuracy, searching for accurate information, and updating our beliefs accordingly). By acknowledging that honesty is not limited to the moment when a person utters a clear lie or a full truth, and that there are multiple stages to enacting honesty, we emphasize the shared responsibility that all parties involved in communication have for seeking out and communicating truthful information.

虽然世界各地的人们都珍视诚实，但不可否认的是，有时不诚实会带来利益。这种张力导致人们从事复杂的行为，从而扩展了诚实的边界。这些行为包括策略性地回避信息、回避问题、遗漏信息以及做出真实但具有误导性的陈述。虽然这些行为本身不是谎言，但它们仍然是偏离诚实的行为，具有严重的个人、组织和社会成本。基于对管理学、组织行为学、应用心理学和商业伦理领域的 169 篇实证研究文章的系统综述，我们开发了一个新的诚实多维框架，强调诚实不仅包含不撒谎——它还具有关系要素（例如，通过我们披露的内容和沟通方式促进他人在他人心中建立准确的理解）和智力要素（例如，评估信息的准确性、寻找准确信息并相应地更新我们的信念）。通过承认诚实并不局限于一个人说出明确的谎言或完全的真相的那一刻，并且践行诚实有多个阶段，我们强调了沟通中涉及的所有各方在寻求和传达真实信息方面负有的共同责任。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

In this paper, we review and synthesize the growing sociology-informed literature on organizational memory studies, which focuses on collective memory as a social construction of the past. To organize this literature, we present an ecological view of collective memory. Organizations, from this perspective, are conceived of as both constituted by a variety of mnemonic communities and, simultaneously, part of a broader ecology of mnemonic communities. We use this framework to guide our review of the various forms of memory work within and between mnemonic communities. Our review shows that much of the sociologically informed research has focused on memory work within communities. We also identify an emerging interest in the study of memory work between communities. In conclusion, we discuss possible future directions and outline a three-point agenda for future research that calls for a better understanding of the relational dynamics of memory with a focus on the organizing of memory, the embeddedness of memory work, and the construction of experiences of the past.

74. Theorizing about the Implications of Multiplexity: An Integrative Typology

关于多重性影响的理论化：一个整合型分类法

Authors / 作者: Gokhan Ertug, Julia Brennecke, Stefano Tasselli

Year / 时间: 2023 · Vol. 17, Issue 2 · pp. 626-654

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Multiplexity, the coexistence of more than one type of relationship between two actors, is a prevalent phenomenon with clear relevance for a wide range of management settings and phenomena. While there is a substantial body of work on multiplexity, the absence of a shared terminology and a typology for the mechanisms and arguments that are used in theorizing about its implications nevertheless hamper its appeal to organizational network scholars and slow its progress. Based on content analysis of 103 studies, we propose “relational harmony,” “task complementarity,” and “relational scope” as three categories to integrate the mechanisms and arguments used in the literature to theorize about the implications of multiplexity. We then survey the literature in light of this typology to show how it is also useful in revealing patterns of theorizing; for example, with respect to the types of relationships that are studied in relation to multiplexity. We conclude with suggestions for future research directions, focusing on how these can be pursued based on our integrative typology. We hope that the common ground we provide for theorizing about the implications of multiplexity will make it an even more engaging topic for organizational network and management scholars, and place it in the company of more prominently used relational constructs in management research, as aligned with its prevalence and relevance.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We systematically review eight positive (authentic, charismatic, consideration and initiating structure, empowering, ethical, instrumental, servant, and transformational leadership) and two negative leadership styles (abusive supervision and destructive leadership) and identify valence-based conflation as a limitation common to all ten styles. This limitation rests on specifying behaviors as inherently positive or negative and leads to mixing the description of the content of leadership behaviors with the evaluation of their underlying intentions, quality of execution, or behavioral effects. We outline how this conflation leads to amalgamation, construct redundancy, and most problematically, causal indeterminacy, which calls into question the entire evidence base of leadership style research. These weaknesses are not limited to the ten leadership styles but are inherent in the valenced research logic that has been dominant for seventy years. Thus, the common finding that positive leadership styles lead to positive outcomes and negative styles lead to negative outcomes might be an artifact of conflation rather than a reflection of reality. To address these concerns, we suggest distinguishing between intended and displayed leadership styles, as well as their realized effects. We also call for utilizing a configurational approach. These recommended actions would provide a strong foundation for future research on leadership styles.

我们系统地回顾了八种积极领导风格 (真诚型、魅力型、关怀与定规型、授权型、伦理型、工具型、仆人型和变革型领导) 和两种消极领导风格 (虐待式监督和破坏性领导), 并确定了效价偏见导致的混淆 (valence-based conflation) 是这十种风格共有的局限性。这一局限性在于将行为指定为本质上积极或消极的, 并导致将领导

行为内容的描述与其潜在意图、执行质量或行为效果的评估相混淆。我们概述了这种混淆如何导致合并、概念冗余，以及最严重的问题——因果不确定性，这使得领导风格研究的整个证据基础受到质疑。这些弱点不仅限于这十种领导风格，而是效价研究逻辑所固有的，这种逻辑在过去 70 年中一直占据主导地位。因此，积极领导风格导致积极结果、消极风格导致消极结果的普遍发现，可能是混淆的产物，而非现实的反映。为了解决这些问题，我们建议区分预期领导风格、表现出的领导风格以及它们的实现效果。我们还呼吁利用组态方法（configurational approach）。这些建议的行动将为未来领导风格的研究提供坚实的基础。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Few concepts are more poignant than dignity at this point in history due to the confluence of several profound phenomena that detract from dignity—the pandemic, racial inequality, and technological dehumanization. Scholars have argued that dignity can be experienced at work, and prior research has highlighted the means for doing so, including work that is connected and inspired, respected and embedded, and valued and infused with meaning. Yet to our knowledge, no systematic review of scholarship on dignity at work has been published. There is a dire need to develop a science of dignity at work, as well as a framework that guides research. Our review helps to develop a thorough understanding of the experience of dignity and of the key means by which dignity is established at, and through, work.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The advancement and growth of institutional theory over the past seven decades has brought with it an increasing plurality in its theoretical and empirical approaches, along with a number of critiques about its coherence and impact. We address these critiques, and offer remedies for overcoming the perceived challenges. We begin by examining the intellectual history of institutional theory in management and its founding discipline, sociology, from its origins in the early 1900s to the near-present, identifying key pivot points in its trajectory as well as emerging subfields. We make three novel contributions. First, we synthesize the institutional literature over the entirety of its evolution, in its social and historical contexts, to plausibly account for its development. Second, we advance an analytic narrative that highlights those critical tensions, shifts, and key pivot points that function as inflection points in institutional theory's evolution and generate diverse subfields within it. Third, we propose an integrative conceptual model for advancing research that explicates the elements, functions, and outcomes attending institutions and institutionalization processes.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The evolution of technology is a central theme for management theory due to the transformative effect of technological change on societies, markets, industries, organizations, and individuals. Over the last decades, scholars from a broad range of theoretical and methodological traditions have generated a vast yet dispersed body of literature on technology evolution. We offer a comprehensive synthesis of the major streams of scholarship on technology evolution by dividing the literature into four perspectives: technology-realist, economic realist, cognitive interpretivist, and social constructionist. We further show that each perspective offers a divergent account of three central mechanisms—variation, selection, and retention—that drive discrete, continuous, and cyclical patterns of technology evolution. We integrate these perspectives by highlighting that they all emphasize recombination, environmental fit, and path dependence as central drivers of those three mechanisms. This integration opens paths toward a more complete account of technology evolution than that offered by the currently scattered state of the extant literature. We emphasize the need for a coevolutionary framework that cuts across the four perspectives to push the literature forward. Subsequently, we outline the foundation of this framework and propose future research opportunities by which the literature on the evolution of technology can advance.

技术演进是管理理论的一个核心主题，因为技术变革对社会、市场、行业、组织和个人具有变革性影响。在过去的几十年里，来自广泛理论和方法论传统的学者们就技术演进生成了大量但分散的文献。我们通过将文献分为四个视角——技术现实主义、经济现实主义、认知解释主义和社会建构主义，对技术演进的主要学术流派进行了全面的综合。我们进一步展示了每个视角对驱动离散、连续和周期性技术演进模式的三个核心机制——变异、选择和保留——提供了不同的解释。我们通过强调这些视角都将重组、环境契合和路径依赖视为这三个机制的核心驱动力，从而整合了这些视角。这种整合为比目前分散的现有文献更完整地解释技术演进开辟了道路。我们强调需要一个跨越四个视角的协同演进框架来推动文献的发展。随后，我们概述了这一框架的基础，并提出了技术演进文献可以借以推进的未来研究机会。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The leadership and work–life balance literatures are not well-integrated, yet both examine the management of employees. Leadership theory is work-centric in conceptualizing leadership styles and underemphasizes nonwork influences on leaders’ and subordinates’ nonwork outcomes. Work–life studies overlook leadership theory regarding how work–life support reflects but one aspect of what leaders do. Competing narratives coexist over whether work–life support mutually benefits work and nonwork outcomes (a synergistic “dual agenda” view) or if one comes at the expense of the other (a “dueling outcomes” view). Based on our review of 127 studies, we define work–life supportive leadership as a leadership characteristic when leaders (a) prioritize actions to provide active support for employees’ needs and preferences for managing work, family, and personal life roles; and (b) are experienced by subordinates as exhibiting such behaviors. We find clear support for the dual agenda view and observe that work–life supportive leadership is embedded within many leadership styles. Future research can advance each field’s understanding of leader work–life support dynamics. For future research, we direct leadership scholars to focus on work–life supportive leadership’s impact on subordinates’ job performance and nonwork outcomes and work–life scholars to broaden their research focus to encompass leadership and the work domain holistically.

领导力和工作-生活平衡文献尚未得到很好的整合,然而两者都在研究员工管理。领导力理论在概念化领导风格时以工作为中心,且低估了非工作因素对领导者和下属非工作结果的影响。工作-生活研究忽视了关于工作-生活支持如何仅反映领导者所做工作的一个方面的领导力理论。关于工作-生活支持是共同有利于工作和非工作结果(协同的“双重议程”观点),还是其中一个以牺牲另一个为代价(“对立结果”观点),竞争性的叙事并存。基于我们对127项研究的综述,我们将工作-生活支持型领导力定义为一种领导特征,即领导者(a)优先采取行动,为员工管理工作、家庭和个人生活角色的需求和偏好提供积极支持;并且(b)被下属感知为表现出此类行为。我们发现对双重议程观点的明确支持,并观察到工作-生活支持型领导力嵌入在许多领导风格中。未来的研究可以推进每个领域对领导者工作-生活支持动态的理解。对于未来的研究,我们建议领导力学者关注工作-生活支持型领导力对下属工作绩效和非工作结果的影响,并建议工作-生活学者将其研究重点扩大到全面涵盖领导力和工作领域。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

In this article, we review management and organizational research that describes and explains “organizational body work” —purposeful, organizationally embedded efforts to shape human bodies. We conceptualize human bodies in terms of three dimensions—materiality, meaning, and functionality—and argue that organizational body work is constituted by programs of purposeful effort involving activities situated in and shaped by organizational life. Based on a review of 209 articles and books that feature descriptions of organizational body work, we unpack the concept in three main ways. First, we offer an inductively developed process model of organizational body work that comprises five key themes: the triggers, forms, consequences, and contexts of organizational body work, and the variations of bodies targeted. Second, a key observation that emerged from our review was that organizational body work is animated by a set of organizational tensions, and so we explore three such tensions situated in the cultural, health, and political dynamics of organizational life. Third, we suggest eight directions for future research intended to illustrate and inspire rather than set boundaries around the study of organizational body work.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Error research in organizational science and operations management has increased in volume, scope, and theoretical and methodological sophistication. Missing from these knowledge advancements are an explicit focus and an integrative framework capturing dynamic processes of errors. Most notably, many extant organizational science studies are rooted in a static error-as-event perspective without incorporating operations management insights on dynamic patterns of errors. We therefore provide a systematic analysis of both organizational science and operations management literatures and offer an error-as-process perspective that sees errors as a cascade (or chain) of emergent triggers, adaptive activities, and social interactions that develop, change, and travel through organizational systems over time. We organize our review around three themes that undergird error phenomena research: (a) the temporal relationship between error prevention (that happens before errors occur) and error management (that arises after errors occur); (b) temporal patterns of error emergence, cumulation, and movement cross work flows; and (c) the dynamic error equilibrium that is characterized by error-amplifying or error-corrective feedback loops. We then mark four pathways toward an integrative view of error-as-process to reposition and broaden error research. Finally, we close with suggestions to understand and study errors as dynamic processes in a more substantial way.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Despite modest progress, women remain significantly underrepresented in the executive ranks. To better understand the causes and consequences of gender inequality in the upper echelons of organizations, researchers in multiple disciplines have undertaken a growing and diverse set of studies. While this research has produced a rich set of findings, its breadth and equivocal nature makes it challenging to identify general implications from this disparate literature and the most compelling areas for future work. Thus, we undertook a comprehensive review of the executive gender literature to develop an integrated understanding of the factors influencing female executive representation, the experiences of those women, and the outcomes associated with their presence in the upper echelons. We also leverage our review to identify four key areas—the centrality of information processing, contextual elements influencing behavioral outcomes, overcoming entrenched bias, and moving beyond symbolic representation—and multiple potential research questions that we believe will help scholars to continue to advance this important and growing line of research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Organizational experience is generally expected to have a positive effect on subsequent task performance. However, research over the past two decades has recognized an increasing number of circumstances in which the performance effects of experience are less clear or even negative. Given the inconclusive evidence on the nature of the experience–performance relationship, we conduct a systematic review and synthesize previously unconnected streams of literature on the organizational experience–performance relationship into a contingency framework on how the applicability, accessibility, and adoption of experiential knowledge jointly moderate the commonly assumed positive effect of organizational experience on performance in a focal task. Based on our integrative contingency framework, we identify important gaps in our understanding of these boundary conditions and develop a research agenda to expand our understanding of organizational experience effects on organizational performance.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Strategic imitation occurs when a firm purposefully attempts to reproduce, in whole or in part, other firms' products, processes, capabilities, technologies, structures, or decisions in its pursuit of competitive advantage. Imitation is a pervasive firm behavior, and the literature relating to imitation is growing rapidly. In the resource-based view, for example, imitation is core because it is assumed to undermine interfirm performance heterogeneity and erode leaders' competitive advantage. We argue that work on imitation is circumscribed by a core set of assumptions: imitation is easy, weak firms imitate, uncertainty promotes imitation, and there is only one imitation strategy. We review the origins and implications of these assumptions in the extant literature, and, more importantly, expose a set of emerging counterassumptions. In light of these counterassumptions, we propose foundations for a new conceptual model of imitation that focuses on evolutionary dynamics. We suggest that imitation may be a key source of dynamic capabilities and innovation, and that it in turn gives rise to competitive advantage.

战略模仿发生在企业为了追求竞争优势，有目的地尝试全部或部分复制其他企业的产品、流程、能力、技术、结构或决策时。模仿是一种普遍的企业行为，与模仿相关的文献正在迅速增长。例如，在资源基础观中，模仿是核心，因为它被认为会破坏企业间的绩效异质性并侵蚀领先者的竞争优势。我们认为，关于模仿的研究受到一组核心假设的限制：模仿是容易的、弱势企业会模仿、不确定性促进模仿，以及只有一种模仿策略。我们回顾了现有文献中这些假设的起源和影响，更重要的是，揭示了一组新兴的反假设。鉴于这些反假设，我们为一种专注于演化动力学的模仿新概念模型提出了基础。我们认为，模仿可能是动态能力和创新的关键来源，并进而产生竞争优势。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Mental health challenges are a ubiquitous workplace concern, with approximately 20% of people having a mental illness and most employees reporting at least one symptom of poor mental health. Yet, research on work and mental health challenges remains fragmented and sparse. We provide a historical overview of workplace attention to mental health versus physical health, noting areas where workplaces' response to physical health could serve as a model for attention to mental health. We then share results of an interdisciplinary review of 556 studies on mental health challenges and work, wherein we integrate themes in three broad categories: antecedents, outcomes, and interventions for mental health challenges. Our review suggests that a primary impediment to progress is the frequent theoretical and methodological conflation between (poor) mental health and mental illness, with unexplained inconsistency in the temporality, severity, and content of mental health measures across studies. Based on these findings, we present suggestions for critical areas of future research, including increased emphasis on proactive workplace interventions and research that addresses the distinction—and relationship—between mental health and mental illness at work. By elucidating the complex relationships between work and mental health, we hope to propel future research on mitigating and supporting employees' mental health challenges.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Indigenous Peoples and contexts have offered valuable insights to enrich management and organization theories and literature. Yet, despite their growing prevalence and impact, these insights have not been compiled and synthesized comprehensively. With this article, we provide a systematic and thorough analysis of Indigenous management and organization studies research published over a 90-year period (1932–2021), and synthesize this body of work into a multidimensional framework, exploring the various features and methodological considerations of Indigenous research. Our analysis reveals that the literature in the field remains fragmented and dispersed across many different subfields and publication outlets, making it challenging for researchers to aggregate, synthesize, and build upon prior works. Our framework integrates insights into recurrent themes and provides a common language to further advance this vital field of research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Why does a person work? Over the last two decades we have seen an exponential growth in research distinguishing three orientations towards work (job, career, calling) and how they bear on who we are and what we do. Our integrative review of this literature highlights an outsized focus on the calling orientation as well as a static view of work orientations in general. More fundamentally, we find consistent evidence in the empirical record contradicting the idea of three, mutually exclusive work orientations. Instead, we derive an alternative framework, consisting of two orthogonal dimensions (job/calling and career) yielding four profiles. Using this new framework, we work to resolve prior contradictions, definitional confounds, and erroneous assumptions. Further, we catalogue insights pertaining to how and when an individual's work orientation changes over time including identifying four key drivers (learning, affect, hardship, and their relationships). We conclude by offering an updated agenda for future research including a need for career orientation research to catch up with our knowledge of calling, an embrace of variance (and moderation) in sampling, more consideration of temporal variation, as well as situating work orientations in organizational practices and a rapidly changing world.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

In this review, we integrate insights from the extensive but fragmented literature on information intermediaries. Tracing the evolution of this research, we observe a shift from a world dominated by expert critics to one where these traditional intermediaries sit alongside newer forms, such as media rankings and ratings, as well as online review aggregators. As a result of this proliferation, producers are often subject to simultaneous public evaluation by multiple intermediaries. To understand the potential impact of these changes, we build a framework that specifies the central characteristics of intermediaries and their evaluations and use this framework to compare and contrast three ideal types of intermediaries. This structured comparison reveals important differences in the nature of intermediation by distinct types of intermediaries. We discuss implications for key producer outcomes and highlight important new questions for future research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

“Intersectionality,” defined as the intertwined and multiplicative effects of multiple identity groups, considers how various combinations of individuals’ social identities (e.g., gender, race/ethnicity, age) and their embedded meanings impact their lives, their employment, and the organizations where they work. Despite the value of understanding employees’ intersectional experiences for diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) initiatives, the management field lacks a comprehensive review of intersectionality research. By examining how different levels of power perpetuate, amplify, or attenuate experiences associated with intersectionality, we synthesize findings from 153 articles to provide insight into identity combinations that have been studied, outcomes associated with intersectionality experiences, and the variety of organizational and individual responses that occur when intersectionality is experienced. Our multilevel power lens highlights intersectionality trends relevant for DEI research and practice alike. We end with a discussion of how identity representation, contextual and analytical considerations, and theoretical extensions provide fruitful avenues for future research on intersectionality.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Organizational scholarship on virtuality and women’s career equality are growing research streams relevant to the changing nature of work. Yet these streams are underintegrated, creating a lack of nuanced understanding of how virtuality impacts gender equality. We review findings from 100 articles and synthesize two main research perspectives to develop an integrative framework of virtuality’ s mixed effects for women. Studies grounded in person–environment fit theory have tended to emphasize positive effects, while those based on social role theory have examined both positive and negative effects. A critical insight from our review is that while growing virtuality holds promise for advancing gender equality by enabling opportunities for women to overcome persistent career challenges, it may simultaneously inhibit their success. However, few studies have examined these dynamics together. Our review illuminates the career-enhancing and career-damaging mechanisms through which virtuality–gender interactions concurrently improve and undermine women’ s equality outcomes. These dual mechanisms create three virtuality tensions for women between: (a) work–nonwork boundary control and interference, (b) enhanced and reduced job opportunities, and (c) social integration and exclusion. We offer a research agenda that attends to both sides of these tensions, identifies their interdependencies, and examines how they operate over time.

关于虚拟性和女性职业平等的组织学研究是与工作性质变化相关的日益增长的研究流派。然而，这些流派尚未得到充分整合，导致对虚拟性如何影响性别平等的理解缺乏细致入微的认识。我们回顾了 100 篇文章的研究结果，并综合了两个主要的视角，以开发一个关于虚拟性对女性产生混合影响的整合框架。基于人与环境匹配理论的研究往往强调积极影响，而基于社会角色理论的研究则考察了积极和消极影响。我们综述的一个关键见解是，虽然日益增长的虚拟性通过为女性提供克服持久职业挑战的机会，为促进性别平等带来了希望，但它也可能同时抑制她们的成功。然而，很少有研究同时考察这些动态。我们的综述阐明了虚拟性与性别互动同时改善和破坏女性平等结果的职业增强和职业损害机制。这些双重机制为女性创造了三个虚拟性张力，分别存在于：(a) 工作与非工作边界控制与干扰之间，(b) 增强与减少的工作机会之间，以及 (c) 社会整合与排

斥之间。我们提出了一个研究议程，关注这些张力的两个方面，识别它们的相互依赖性，并考察它们随时间推移的运作方式。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

As a substantial amount of research has accumulated on the harmful consequences of workplace aggression for target employees, we believe it is now of particular importance to examine moderators that alleviate or amplify these harmful effects. We ask the following questions: For whom is workplace aggression more, or less, detrimental? Moreover, what can target employees and the organization do to mitigate the harmful effects of aggression? We propose to address these questions with an integrative review of empirical research on moderators of the harmful effects of workplace aggression on targets. In this review, we identify and illustrate five broad perspectives that existing research has primarily used to explain the moderating effects: resource-depletion, social-relational, appraisal, self-regulation, and social-influence perspectives. In addition, we identify a large number of moderators and synthesize them into three categories of individual moderators—trait-based, intrapersonal, and coping-based—and three categories of contextual moderators—collective, interpersonal, and job-based. We address research findings on each category of moderators organized around the theoretical perspectives. We conclude with a general discussion of an overarching summary, redundant and saturated findings, as well as research gaps and future directions.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Management research has increasingly explored the domains of ecosystems, platforms, and open/user/distributed innovation—governance structures focused on engaging with external communities. While these research areas include substantial empirical and theoretical work and share notable similarities, the literature streams have evolved separately limiting our ability to understand underlying mechanisms and dynamics. We comprehensively review these distinct literatures to highlight commonalities and induce novel insights. We introduce the overarching concept of the managed ecosystem governance structure through which an organization engages external communities for value creation and capture such that the locus of activity resides outside organizational boundaries while the locus of control remains within the organization. It represents a translucent hand between the invisible hand of the market and visible hand of the organizational hierarchy. Because the extant literature only lightly addresses incumbent organizations transitioning to these models and rarely touches upon those operating with multiple governance structures simultaneously, we further review and synthesize research on organizational adaptation and ambidexterity. From this integrative review, we identify capabilities to execute managed ecosystems including shepherding communities without exploiting them, managing data and intellectual property, ecosystem-driven open adaptation, and ambidextrous governance. We additionally present opportunities for future research across these research domains.

管理研究越来越多地探索生态系统、平台和开放/用户/分布式创新领域——这些治理结构专注于与外部社区互动。虽然这些研究领域包括大量的实证和理论工作并具有显著的相似性，但文献流是独立演变的，限制了我们理解底层机制和动态的能力。我们全面回顾了这些不同的文献，以突出共同点并归纳出新颖的见解。我们引入了受管生态系统治理结构的总体概念，组织通过该结构吸引外部社区参与价值创造和获取，使得活动中心位于组织边界之外，而控制中心保留在组织内部。它代表了市场“看不见的手”与组织层级“看得见的手”之间的“半透明之手”。由于现有文献仅略微涉及现有组织向这些模式的转型，且很少涉及同时运行多种治理结构的组织，我们进一步回顾并综合了关于组织适应和二元性的研究。通过这一综合综述，我们识别了执行受管生态系统的能力，包括在不剥削社区的情况下引导社区、管理数据和知识产权、生态系统驱动的开放式适应以及二元治理。此外，我们还提出了这些研究领域未来研究的机会。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Organizational aesthetics comprises a way of understanding organizational life based on immediate sensory reactions (i.e., sight, hearing, taste, smell, and touch) to the material components of organizing (e.g., artifacts, physical settings, and material practices). Despite growing interest in the topic, however, research has been fragmented across management areas. To advance scholarly knowledge in this field, we reviewed the empirical work dealing with aesthetics. Our review yields two major insights. First, we identify three perspectives on the role of aesthetics. Scholars have treated aesthetics as (a) a directed stimulus (that elicits product evaluation and work organization), (b) a knowledge tool (that is entwined with creative work and everyday organizational tasks), or (c) an open-ended outcome (that serves as a personal experience). Second, we find that each perspective highlights emotional and cognitive mechanisms through which aesthetics is implicated in organizing. Building on these two insights, our review offers an integrative framework that provides a comprehensive picture of the state of the field, illuminating the work of aesthetics in and around organizations and providing avenues for future studies.

组织美学包含一种基于对组织物质组成部分（如人工制品、物理环境和物质实践）的即时感官反应（即视觉、听觉、味觉、嗅觉和触觉）来理解组织生活的方式。尽管对该话题的兴趣日益增长，但研究在管理领域中仍处于碎片化状态。为了推进该领域的学术知识，我们回顾了处理美学的实证工作。我们的回顾产生了两个主要见解。首先，我们确定了关于美学作用的三种视角。学者们将美学视为（a）定向刺激（引发产品评价和工作组织），（b）知识工具（与创意工作和日常组织任务交织在一起），或（c）开放式结果（作为一种个人体验）。其次，我们发现每种视角都强调了美学参与组织的情感和认知机制。基于这两个见解，我们的回顾提供了一个整合框架，全面展示了该领域的现状，阐明了美学在组织内部及其周围的作用，并为未来的研究提供了途径。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We review the ways in which gender is theorized in social network research and propose an alternative approach for future research to consider. To assess “what we do,” we undertake an evaluative review. In that review, we first examine how gender is typically theorized in structural approaches to social network research. Then, in greater detail, we review social network research that affords more diversity into such theorizing. We organize this more detailed review around a framework that is based on the level of analysis at which the implications of gender are invoked (cognitive, behavioral) and the focus of relational mechanisms that are used (ego based, alter based). Following this review of “what we do,” we consider “what we can do differently” by reflecting on the state of the literature and proposing a broad agenda, which we see as an alternative to many of the current approaches. We illustrate the implications of this alternative using four research topics and approaches.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Identification (a state of perceived “oneness” with a given target) fulfills fundamental human motives and facilitates a range of positive outcomes, but it also has a dark side. While detrimental effects of identification in organizations have been captured in various studies, the field of management lacks a comprehensive blueprint of the state of this research. This omission is particularly significant given recent calls for some “course corrections” in the field, which signal the need to balance the dominant preoccupation with the positive effects of identification and identity with more consideration of their negative effects. It is also a missed opportunity for impact given the relevance of the topic to understanding current identity-related tensions and issues within organizations (e.g., debates around diversity and inclusion). We address this oversight with a comprehensive review of the dark side of strong identification, focusing specifically on exclusive, mixed, and multiple identifications. In doing so, we highlight the need for a more balanced understanding of the ways identification processes influence our lives, organizations, and society at large.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

In this review, I integrate a wide range of literature that has examined how the “geographic mobility” of high-skilled workers creates value for organizations and individuals. Drawing on this interdisciplinary literature, I document that it creates value by facilitating the transfer and recombination of knowledge, transfer of social capital, organizational norms, and financial capital, as well as by creating opportunities for individuals to develop skills, seek resources, and experience wage increases. I also review the literature around “geographic immobility” and synthesize this body of research under a framework of “geographic mobility frictions” that constrain and add costs to geographic mobility. I enumerate four key types of frictions—regulatory frictions, occupational/ organizational frictions, personal frictions, and economic/environmental frictions—that act as impediments to geographic mobility. I then propose a research agenda around studying whether and how provisioning “geographic flexibility” through “work-from-anywhere” policies might help individuals and firms capture value from geographic mobility and mitigate adverse effects of geographic mobility frictions. I also outline future research questions related to how adoption of geographic flexibility might alter future patterns of geographic mobility, and the future geography of work.

在这篇综述中，我整合了广泛的文献，这些文献研究了高技能员工的“地理流动性”如何为组织和个人创造价值。借鉴这些跨学科文献，我证明了它通过促进知识的转移与重组、社会资本的转移、组织规范和金融资本的转移，以及为个人创造发展技能、寻求资源和体验工资增长的机会来创造价值。我还回顾了关于“地理非流动性”的文献，并在“地理流动性摩擦”框架下综合了这一研究体系，这些摩擦限制了地理流动性并增加了其成本。我列举了作为地理流动性障碍的四种主要摩擦类型：监管摩擦、职业/组织摩擦、个人摩擦以及经济/环境摩擦。随后，我提出了一个研究议程，围绕研究通过“随处办公”政策提供“地理灵活性”是否以及如何帮助个人和企业从地理流动性中获取价值，并减轻地理流动性摩擦的负面影响。我还概述了与采用地理灵活性如何改变未来地理流动模式以及未来工作地理分布相关的未来研究问题。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

A rarely acknowledged fact about organization theory (OT) is that many of its ideas stem from the field of artificial intelligence (AI). For example, key OT concepts such as problemistic search, heuristics, exploration, requisite variety, and organizational scripts all have their roots in AI. The main goal of this paper is to expose the full range of AI ideas that have been used in OT. We do so by explaining key AI ideas and showing how OT used them. Our review covers over 100 OT works that depend on AI ideas both critically and explicitly. We group these ideas into 10 AI approaches that speak to three fundamental processes in organizations: search, representation, and aggregation. We argue that this broad and deep borrowing from AI stems from fundamental structural similarities between AI and OT, as both fields study how artificial systems (programs and organizations) can pursue intelligent behavior. We also identify areas of AI from which OT scholars may continue to draw inspiration and suggest ways in which AI technologies may continue to affect organizations. Overall, our work shows that, beyond its effect as a technology, AI has given OT a set of models about how organizations work.

关于组织理论 (OT) 的一个很少被承认的事实是, 它的许多想法都源于人工智能 (AI) 领域。例如, 关键的组织理论概念, 如问题搜寻、启发式、探索、必要多样性和组织脚本, 都起源于人工智能。本文的主要目标是揭示在组织理论中使用的全方位人工智能思想。我们通过解释关键的人工智能思想并展示组织理论如何使用它们来实现这一目标。我们的回顾涵盖了 100 多篇批判性且明确依赖人工智能思想的组织理论著作。我们将这些思想分为 10 种人工智能方法, 这些方法涉及组织中的三个基本过程: 搜寻、表征和聚合。我们认为, 这种从人工智能中广泛而深入的借鉴源于人工智能和组织理论之间基本的结构相似性, 因为这两个领域都研究人工系统 (程序和组织) 如何追求智能行为。我们还确定了组织理论学者可以继续汲取灵感的人工智能领域, 并提出了人工智能技术可能继续影响组织的方式。总的来说, 我们的工作表明, 除了作为一种技术的影响之外, 人工智能还为组织理论提供了一套关于组织如何运作的模型。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Understanding the consequences of homophily, which is among the most widely observed social phenomena, is important, with implications for management theory and practice. Therefore, we review management research on the consequences of homophily. As these consequences have been studied at the individual, dyad, team, organizational, and macro levels, we structure our review accordingly. We highlight findings that are consistent and contradictory, as well as those that point to boundary conditions or moderators. In conducting our review, we also derive implications for management research from insights gained by research in other disciplines on this topic. We raise specific issues and opportunities for future research at each level, and conclude with a discussion of broader future research directions, both empirical and conceptual, that apply across levels. We hope that our review will open new vistas in research on this important topic.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Movement between sequentially-held roles—role transition—has long attracted scholars' attention for its ubiquity and importance in people's work and non-work lives. In our integrative review of 313 cross-discipline empirical articles, we find that the transitions attributes defined by Ebaugh (1988) and Ashforth (2001), the field's seminal works, have been largely left unintegrated and unmeasured. Rather, while scholars may refer to attributes, they in fact study people's lived transition experiences. To bring coherence and relevance to a fragmented field, we leverage the literature to propose a field-level shift to an experience-based framework. We organize our review around three vistas that undergird the transition experience we see studied in the research. These include four transition-related movements (psychological, physical, behavioral, and relational); the whole person in transition (interrelated non-work and work life spheres); and the person-in-network transitioning (transitions impacting and impacted by one's social entourage). We mark a pathway toward this experience-based view, issuing three challenges for management researchers: broadening the study of movements beyond the psychological (first challenge), examining work and non-work transitions' effects on organization-relevant outcomes (second challenge), and charting how individuals' transitions impact their entourage and vice versa (third challenge).

角色转换——即在先后担任的角色之间移动——因其在人们工作和非工作生活中的普遍性和重要性，长期以来一直吸引着学者的关注。在我们对 313 篇跨学科实证文章的整合性综述中，我们发现由 Ebaugh (1988) 和 Ashforth (2001) 这两部该领域的开创性著作所定义的转换属性，在很大程度上仍未得到整合和测量。相反，虽然学者们可能会提到属性，但他们实际上研究的是人们真实的转换经验。为了给一个碎片化的领域带来连贯性和相关性，我们利用现有文献提出向基于经验的框架进行领域层面的转变。我们围绕支撑研究中所观察到的转换经验的三个视角来组织我们的综述。这些视角包括四种与转换相关的移动（心理、物理、行为和关系）；转换中的完整个人（相互关联的非工作和工作生活领域）；以及网络中转换的个人（转换影响着个人的社交圈，同时也受其影响）。我们指出了通往这种基于经验观点的路径，并向管理学研究者提出了三项挑战：将移动的研究扩展到心理层面之外（第一项挑战），考察工作和非工作转换对组织相关结果的影响（第二项挑战），以及描绘个人转换如何影响其社交圈，反之亦然（第三项挑战）。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Research in strategic management and organizational behavior has increasingly focused on understanding how organizations achieve and sustain performance in fast-changing environments. Strategy research has suggested that senior managers, through their decisions, influence capabilities at the organizational level. Organizational behavior research has suggested that teams, through engaging in learning within and across their boundaries, contribute to organizational-level capabilities. Only recently have researchers started to link the two sets of insights, exploring the idea that team learning plays a critical bridging role in how decisions by senior managers translate into organizational performance outcomes. This paper organizes these insights into a model of capability development focused on how different kinds of team learning routines may support organizational capabilities that create competitive advantage. The model introduces a strategic view of team learning, highlighting the ability of senior managers to shape team learning routines effectively as a critical skill because of its role in building organizational capabilities. We identify a lack of research in this area and suggest future directions to address it.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

New ideas are central to a wide array of organizational phenomena and research that involve creativity and innovation. Yet, there is little consensus on what the concept of ‘ideas’ means, with a broad range of creative outputs being conceptualized as ideas. This fragmentation makes it challenging to compare studies and build a cumulative base of knowledge. To integrate different streams of organizational research, we reviewed papers across the creativity, innovation, entrepreneurship, design, knowledge creation, and network literatures. We propose a “wave-particle duality” framework of ideas to synthesize two distinct but complementary approaches to understanding and studying ideas. Our framework offers guidance on how to approach the study of ideas, reconciles apparent conflicts in the literature, and suggests opportunities for advancing our understanding of ideas in creative work.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Social networks are dynamic by nature. While network research has typically treated relationships between social actors as static, there has been a surge in literature extending a dynamic lens to intraorganizational networks. Critically, there is no comprehensive and systematic review of intraorganizational network dynamics studies. Moreover, the field lacks programmatic coherence, clear and consistent terminology, and methodological clarity. This review attempts to resolve these issues. To foster a common language, we provide an integrative definition and clarify the scope of intraorganizational network dynamics. This allows us to distinguish four domains of dynamic network theorizing. Building on this, we develop an encompassing framework that maps the multiple facets of this literature and apply it to organize our summary and synthesis. We then take a bird's-eye view of the full body of research and discuss four foundational areas in which network dynamics research can be conceptually and methodologically extended. We end by elaborating on the issue of interdependence in network data and providing an overview of leading statistical approaches for modeling longitudinal network data that explicitly account for dependence among observations. We see this review as an entry point for researchers interested in intraorganizational network dynamics and as a way to spark new scholarship on questions that remain open in this literature.

社会网络本质上是动态的。虽然网络研究通常将社会行动者之间的关系视为静态的, 但将动态视角扩展到组织内网络的文献正大量涌现。关键在于, 目前还缺乏对组织内网络动态研究的全面且系统的综述。此外, 该领域缺乏程序上的连贯性、清晰且一致的术语以及方法论上的明确性。本综述试图解决这些问题。为了培养共同语言, 我们提供了一个整合性定义并明确了组织内网络动态的范围。这使我们能够区分动态网络理论化的四个领域。在此基础上, 我们开发了一个涵盖该文献多个方面的综合框架, 并将其用于组织我们的总结和综合。随后, 我们对整个研究体系进行了宏观审视, 并讨论了网络动态研究可以在概念和方法上进行扩展的四个基础领域。最后, 我们详细阐述了网络数据中的相互依赖性问题, 并概述了用于模拟显式考虑观测值之间依赖性的纵向网络数据的领先统计方法。我们将本综述视为对组织内网络动态感兴趣的研究者的切入点, 并将其作为激发针对该文献中仍待解决问题的新学术研究的一种方式。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

An increasing number of scholars are using interventions to positively affect individual and organizational outcomes at work. Yet the potential of intervention-based management research is currently limited by ambiguities surrounding: (a) what constitutes an intervention study, (b) how and why interventions bring about desired change, and (c) guiding theoretical and methodological principles for intervention studies. To address these challenges, we provide an integrative review of 172 management publications that use individual-centered interventions and synthesize insights about how researchers can trigger, study, and explain the process of positive change in organizations through intervention research. We begin by providing conceptual clarity and specificity to intervention-based research by analyzing the variety of interventional designs to identify core components and areas of fragmentation. We then offer an integrative framework that synthesizes existing intervention studies around the core mechanism pathways through which individual change is realized. Finally, we provide guidance on methodological considerations and discuss the critical issues that scholars confront when using interventions. Our hope is that the insights we uncover in this review will not only identify blind spots and areas of opportunity for intervention research but also contribute to deeper understanding of the tension between theoretical and applied managerial implications.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This paper focuses on the emergent importance of curiosity at work for individuals and organizations by reviewing management research on curiosity at work. We start by leveraging prior reviews on early and contemporary foundations of the curiosity construct in the larger psychological literature, with a focus on definitional clarity, dimensionality, and differences with other constructs in its nomological network. Next, we review different streams of management research on curiosity at work (i.e., broad generative and nongenerative effects, curiosity as a catalyst for personal action, curiosity as a catalyst for interpersonal action, curiosity as a catalyst for leadership, curiosity as an organizational or professional norm, and curiosity as a catalyst for organizing). Interweaving these diverse literatures and research streams gives us the wherewithal to provide conceptual clarity to curiosity research and highlight how curiosity not only has generative effects at the individual level but also acts as a more dynamic, interpersonal, and organizational property. In addition, our review brings attention to the potential dark side of curiosity. We end by outlining how the more nuanced insights of the role of curiosity at work generated by our review provide an impetus for future research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The diversity literature has long proposed that diversity benefits team performance because the broader range of information, knowledge, and perspectives that members with different attributes bring to their teams enhances the cognitive processes through which teams perform their tasks. This paper reviews the empirical research based in this argument to identify what we know about the effects of diversity on team cognitive processes and identify directions for future research. We first differentiate the effects of diversity that operate through differences in cognitive resources from those that operate through differences in cognitive structures, both of which may derive from diversity in the same attributes. Then, basing our analysis in the view of teams as information processors, we review the findings of research on how diversity affects cognitive processes associated with the two major aspects of information processing—information surfacing and information combination—through which teams perform their tasks. Based on the review, we point to consistent themes, areas in need of clarification, research gaps, and fruitful avenues for future research, particularly focusing on improving the specification of theoretical mechanisms, focusing examinations of contingency effects and paying more attention to boundary conditions, and increasing research on how demographic diversity affects team cognitive processes.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Diverse perspectives and ideas among senior leaders (top management teams and boards of directors) might generate substantial value for organizations. In theory, such diversity could provide a foundation for creative insights, innovative strategies, and strong organizational performance. Unfortunately, empirical research on these and other possible outcomes has generated a complex array of confusing findings. Our systematic review, the first to consider all types of relevant studies, attempts to make sense of the complicated landscape. On the negative side of the coin, the review highlights unsolved theoretical puzzles, severely fragmented empirical studies, and methodological conundrums. As a result, it calls into question several widespread assumptions and practices. On the positive side of the coin, our work surfaces some important pockets of consistency in existing empirical findings, mostly driven by studies using direct measures of cognitive diversity among senior leaders rather than demographic proxies. Our recommendations for the future include dramatically increasing qualitative research to move beyond a powerful deductive straightjacket that seems to exist. We also recommend taking a finer-grained approach through a substantial narrowing of quantitative research in the near term to better capture and understand key concepts, measures, and boundary conditions.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This review aims to redress the growing gap between the receding discourse on bureaucracy and bureaucracy's continuing presence as the predominant organizational form. Reviewing a century of organizational research on bureaucracy, we find three main perspectives, which developed in succession but persist in parallel: bureaucracy as an organizing principle, as a paradigmatic form of organization, and as one type of structure among others. We argue that these three perspectives should be brought into closer dialogue and expanded, so we can overcome the decontextualized, reified, and atomized ways in which bureaucracy is often viewed. To that end, we offer three pathways to stimulate future research—exploring bureaucracy in its wider context, bureaucracy in action, and bureaucracy's interdependencies and configurations. Finally, we discuss how we can better understand the various guises in which bureaucracy continues into the 21st century.

本综述旨在弥合关于官僚制的论述日益减少与官僚制作为主要组织形式持续存在之间日益扩大的鸿沟。通过回顾一个世纪以来关于官僚制的组织研究，我们发现了三种主要的观点，它们相继发展但并行不悖：官僚制作为一种组织原则、作为一种范式化的组织形式，以及作为众多结构中的一种类型。我们认为，这三种观点应该进行更紧密的对话并加以扩展，以便我们能够克服通常看待官僚制的去语境化、物化和原子化的方式。为此，我们提供了三条路径来激发未来的研究——探索更广泛背景下的官僚制、行动中的官僚制，以及官僚制的相互依赖性和配置。最后，我们讨论了如何更好地理解官僚制在进入 21 世纪时所呈现的各种形态。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This paper provides a comprehensive, integrative conceptual review of work on “communities of practice” (CoPs), defined broadly as groups of people bound together by a common activity, shared expertise, a passion for a joint enterprise, and a desire to learn or improve their practice. We identify three divergent views on the intended purposes and expected effects of CoPs: as mechanisms for fostering learning and knowledge sharing, as sources of innovation, and as mechanisms to defend interests and perpetuate control over expertise domains. We use these different lenses to make sense of the ways CoPs are conceptualized and to review scholarly work on this topic. We argue that current debate on the future of work and new methodological developments are challenging the received wisdom on CoPs and offer research opportunities and new conceptual combinations. We argue also that the interaction between the lenses and between CoP theory and adjacent literatures might result in new theory and conceptualizations.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We review and synthesize research on the effects of incentives on ethical and unethical behaviors. Our review of 361 conceptual and empirical articles, which are scattered across multiple disciplines (e.g., management, psychology, economics, education, health care delivery), reveals wide variation in how they conceptualize key concepts (i.e., incentives, ethics), how they theorize the effects, and what samples and research methods they use in empirical tests. We identify seven theoretical view that explain the link between incentives and unethicality, and synthesize them into three primary processes: cost–benefit comparison, motivated reasoning, and decreases in prosocial motivation. Our review of empirical evidence shows that some effects are relatively more established (e.g., goal-driven motivated reasoning) than others (e.g., prosocial motivation decline), but they all await more field (vs. laboratory experiments) evidence. In addition, giving substantial attention to the forms of unethicality in specific contexts, we show whether and how the effects of incentives on unethicality vary by professional domains, especially in education, health care delivery, and for-profit business. Building on the review, we present a multilevel, cyclical process model capturing how incentives and unethicality are related. We conclude by identifying opportunities for future research.

我们回顾并综合了关于激励对伦理和非伦理行为影响的研究。我们对分布在多个学科（如管理学、心理学、经济学、教育学、医疗保健服务）的 361 篇概念性和实证性文章的综述显示，它们在如何界定核心概念（即激励、伦理）、如何对效应进行理论化，以及在实证测试中使用何种样本和研究方法方面存在巨大差异。我们识别了七种解释激励与非伦理行为之间联系的理论观点，并将其综合为三个主要过程：成本效益比较、动机性推理以及亲社会动机的降低。我们对实证证据的回顾表明，某些效应（如目标驱动的动机性推理）比其他效应（如亲社会动机下降）相对更成熟，但它们都期待更多的实地（相对于实验室实验）证据。此外，通过对特定背景下非伦理行为形式的充分关注，我们展示了激励对非伦理行为的影响是否以及如何随专业领域而变化，特别是在教育、医疗保健服务和营利性商业领域。基于该综述，我们提出了一个捕捉激励与非伦理行为如何关联的多层面、循环过程模型。最后，我们确定了未来研究的机会。

110. Barriers and Boosts: Using Inequity Frames Theory to Expand Understanding of Mechanisms of Race and Gender Inequity

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Inequity can be framed in terms of disadvantage or advantage, with different consequences for how people understand the inequity. Here we ask, how do scholars conceptualize race and gender inequity in organizations? Using the perspective of inequity frames theory, our review reveals a chronic disadvantage lens in existing scholarship: race and gender inequity are overwhelmingly described as being caused by disadvantage. In turn, we find that scholars of such demographic inequity in organizations often focus solely on disadvantaging mechanisms, such as prejudice and stereotypes, belonging threats, and structural barriers. Nevertheless, our review of disparate literatures on attractiveness, nepotism, and social class (which use an advantage lens) demonstrates how specific and distinct advantaging mechanisms –including helping behaviors, permissiveness, and structural advantages –also create inequity. Such advantage mechanisms are largely missing in race and gender inequity literatures, despite the likelihood that such mechanisms contribute to, and ultimately allow the persistence of, race and gender inequity in organizations. Finally, we highlight steps scholars can take to expand the lenses they use to examine demographic inequity, and as such, expand the range of mechanisms identified and leveraged to reduce such inequity.

不平等可以用劣势或优势来界定，这对于人们如何理解不平等会产生不同的后果。在这里，我们探讨学者们是如何概念化组织中的种族和性别不平等的。利用不平等框架理论的视角，我们的综述揭示了现有学术研究中长期存在的“劣势视角”：种族和性别不平等被压倒性地描述为由劣势造成的。相应地，我们发现研究组织中此类人口统计学不平等的学者往往只关注致劣机制，如偏见和刻板印象、归属感威胁以及结构性障碍。然而，我们对关于吸引力、裙带关系和社会阶层（使用优势视角）的零散文献的综述表明，特定且独特的致优机制——包括帮助行为、宽容和结构性优势——也会产生不平等。尽管这些机制很可能促成并最终导致组织中种族和性别不平等的持续存在，但在种族和性别不平等文献中，此类优势机制在很大程度上是缺失的。最后，我们强调了学者们可以采取的步骤，以扩展他们研究人口统计学不平等的视角，从而扩大识别和利用以减少此类不平等的机制范围。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The pursuit of outcomes is the raison d'être for strategic alliances, yet the literature on outcomes is rather fragmented. Moreover, conceptual and empirical confusion exists between strategic alliance outcomes and how well the alliance is working. Important behavioral terms, such as conflict and tension, are also used without conceptual clarity. We tackle these issues by consolidating the spectrum of strategic alliance outcomes and explaining how outcomes are often intertwined. We also distill the literature regarding how well the alliance is working into three 'functioning indicators' and highlight their conceptual distinctiveness vis-à-vis outcomes. We disentangle definitions and implications of three important behavioral issues in alliances—tradeoffs, frictions, and tensions—and discuss how they are rooted in partner interdependence. Lastly, we offer an 'outcome-centric' perspective on strategic alliances, which shifts the emphasis from outcomes as end results to the pursuit of outcomes as explanatory starting points. This perspective offers new opportunities to theorize about the functioning of strategic alliances, behavioral manifestations of partner interdependence, and the pursuit of multiple outcomes in strategic alliances.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The division of firm surplus between labor and shareholders, and its impact on firms' value creation, are central topics in strategy theory and practice. Early studies of value appropriation within firms devoted considerable attention to the dynamics of bargaining between labor—typically, organized labor—and the owners of capital. Since the 1960s, however, a decline in unionization across most of the major economies, and a series of technological and economic changes, have led to profound shifts in the bargaining process between labor and capital. This review synthesizes the findings of prior literature and argues for three increasingly important and often overlooked consequences of these changes. First, individual bargaining has dramatically expanded the range of worker characteristics, values, and preferences that can now be accommodated in employment arrangements. Second, surplus division has become a strategic variable that organizations can differentiate on. Third, labor market institutions have become more varied, and their role in setting the terms of negotiation has become more prominent.

企业剩余在劳动力和股东之间的分配，及其对企业价值创造的影响，是战略理论与实践的核心议题。早期关于企业内部价值获取的研究非常关注劳动力（通常是工会化劳动力）与资本所有者之间谈判的动态过程。然而，自 20 世纪 60 年代以来，大多数主要经济体的工会化程度下降，以及一系列技术和经济变革，导致劳资谈判过程发生了深刻变化。本综述综合了以往文献的研究结果，并提出了这些变化带来的三个日益重要且常被忽视的后果。首先，个人谈判极大地扩展了目前在雇佣安排中可以容纳的工人特征、价值观和偏好的范围。其次，剩余分配已成为组织可以进行差异化竞争的战略变量。第三，劳动力市场制度变得更加多样化，其在设定谈判条款方面的作用变得更加突出。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Entrepreneurship is routinely promoted as a solution to our most pressing societal and environmental challenges. Two emerging literature streams have sought to examine how and when such solutions may emerge. In this review, we examine the literature on social entrepreneurship (SE) and environmental entrepreneurship (EE) to expose potential linkages, disconnects, and a path forward. We do so by combining bibliometric network analyses with a detailed qualitative review of the literature from 1994 to 2019. Through this process we: (a) identify a pattern of convergent evolution, whereby SE and EE share some common elements today, while originating in distinct scholarly communities with different epistemological roots; (b) offer a conceptual framework that identifies specific areas for collaboration and learning between SE and EE; and (c) propose how these streams can be integrated in order to elevate the impact of the field of entrepreneurship. We argue that such integration can enable entrepreneurship research to fulfill its promise of understanding how and when entrepreneurial action contributes to the public good.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We conducted an integrative review of research on listening relevant to work and organizations, published from 2000 to 2021, and across three disciplines (management, psychology, and communication studies). We found that listening research is fragmented across three perspectives: (1) perceived listening, (2) listeners' experience, and (3) listening structures. We discuss how integrating these perspectives highlights two major tensions in listening research. First, there is a tension between speakers' perceptions and listeners' experience, which reveals a listening paradox—while listening is perceived to be beneficial for speakers, it can be experienced as costly and depleting for listeners. This paradox reveals why people struggle with listening when it is needed the most. Second, listening structures in organizations can create tensions between organizational goals and listeners' experiences. While organizations use listening structures to enable and signal listening, these efforts can impose greater costs on listeners, reinforce existing power structures, and create opportunities for unwanted surveillance. Managing these tensions provides fertile ground for future research, in part because recent advances in communication technologies are changing the dynamics and structure of listening in organizations.

我们对 2000 年至 2021 年间发表在管理学、心理学和传播学三个学科中与工作和组织相关的倾听研究进行了综合性回顾。我们发现，倾听研究分散在三个视角中：(1) 感知到的倾听，(2) 倾听者的体验，以及 (3) 倾听结构。我们讨论了整合这些视角如何凸显倾听研究中的两个主要矛盾。首先，说话者的感知与倾听者的体验之间存在矛盾，这揭示了一个倾听悖论——虽然倾听被认为对说话者有益，但对倾听者而言，它可能被体验为代价高昂且令人精疲力竭的。这一悖论揭示了为什么人们在最需要倾听的时候却难以做到倾听。其次，组织中的倾听结构可能会在组织目标与倾听者体验之间产生矛盾。虽然组织利用倾听结构来促成和传达倾听信号，但这些努力可能会给倾听者带来更大的成本，强化现有的权力结构，并为不必要的监控创造机会。管理这些矛盾为未来研究提供了肥沃的土壤，部分原因是通信技术的最新进展正在改变组织中倾听的动态和结构。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

High-achieving employees, the "stars" of an organization, are widely credited with producing indispensable, irreplaceable, value-enhancing contributions. From the recruitment of celebrity chief executive officers to the fierce competition for star scientists, and from lucrative contracts for sports icons to outsized bonuses for top salespeople, human capital strategies have long promoted the importance of star performers. Sixty years of research on stars has witnessed a wide array of contexts, levels of analysis, and subdimensions, much of which is focused on the accomplishments of these alpha-tail individuals. More recently, however, scholars have begun to draw varied conclusions regarding both the favorable and unfavorable impacts of star performers, leading to a balkanization of perspectives comprising the stream. Our review of the multidisciplinary work on stars synthesizes disparate studies, settles definitional problems, and integrates complementary factors into a coherent formative construct. Through this, we foster the development of a research agenda concerning the manner in which star performers are, by their very nature, simultaneously red giants and black holes, the precise balance of which is fertile soil for future inquiry.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Are self-aware leaders more effective? Are self-aware workers more productive and satisfied? Studies of self-awareness, which have been undertaken in a range of fields, have implications for a wide variety of topics in organizational behavior. Yet, this research has been scattered, resulting in gaps, siloed insights, a lack of clear and consistent conceptualization, and the confounding of causes and effects with self-awareness itself. We review the organizational behavior and psychology literatures to distinguish, summarize, and assess research on self-awareness as both process and content. Our synthesis of past work on the content of self-awareness is organized around three distinct targets: internal, external, and social. Our paper concludes with an evaluation of the implications of our findings for future research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Transaction cost theory (TCT) has been fruitfully applied to a wide range of organizational phenomena, as reflected in a vast and evolving body of research. However, in part due to the theory's broad success, important advances in some fields have not diffused to other fields. In this essay, we lay out a path toward a pluralistic view of TCT that incorporates insights from multiple fields, primarily strategy and international business. In so doing, we critically assess the assumptions, key constructs, and evolving theoretical logic of TCT. We then propose an agenda for future research, highlighting opportunities for scholars to (a) expand and deepen the exchange of insights between strategy and international business, and further integrate TCT with the trust literature and with recent insights from behavioral economics and psychology, and (b) further apply TCT to study recent phenomena such as platforms and two-sided markets, the implications of artificial intelligence for governance decisions, and the pursuit of nonpecuniary objectives such as sustainability.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Employability, which is commonly conceptualized as one's ability to realize job opportunities within and between employers over time, has attracted considerable attention from diverse academic disciplines for decades. Research in these disciplines has largely evolved independent of other fields, thus limiting the accumulation, validation, advancement, and utility of employability. Two central stakeholders in much of this research are employers and employees, yet the vast majority of studies since the year 2000 have failed to explicitly consider this interdependence, instead being characterized by an overwhelming emphasis on the employee and individual agency. Conversely, the comparatively limited research examining the employer perspective has often excluded consideration of the employee. Our review highlights these characteristics, along with outlining other common critical issues and recommendations for overcoming them. We also articulate how social exchange theory can serve as an underlying mechanism to integrate research within and between disciplines, and we present the strategic employability architecture framework based on strategic human resource management to facilitate integration of employer and employee perspectives.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Research to date on leader behaviors such as justice rule adherence, abusive supervision, and ethical leadership has found a clear linkage between such behaviors and employees' work attitudes and performance. Historically, and surprisingly, understanding of what initiates these impactful leader behaviors is much more limited, and only recently have scholars begun to examine their antecedents. Thus, the goal of our integrative review is to advance cumulative knowledge of why leaders are fair, ethical, and nonabusive—which we refer to collectively as principled leader behaviors. Our review is structured around a framework of four theoretical lenses that elucidate what initiates and perpetuates such behaviors: interpersonal motives, focused on relational explanations; instrumental motives, centered on these behaviors as a means to some end goal; moral motives, which characterize these leader behaviors as an end in themselves; and self-regulation and disposition, focused on leaders' automatic inclinations and capacity to enact these behaviors. We not only synthesize previously fragmented findings of what shapes principled leader behaviors, but also highlight areas of overlap and distinction across them. Extending our framework, we highlight the interplay of lenses and critical research avenues to better understand why leaders treat followers in beneficial and not harmful ways.

迄今为止，关于公正规则遵循、虐待性监督和伦理型领导等领导行为的研究发现，此类行为与员工的工作态度 and 绩效之间存在明确的联系。从历史上看，令人惊讶的是，对于引发这些具有影响力的领导行为的原因，人们的理解要有限得多，直到最近学者们才开始研究其前因。因此，本整合综述的目标是推进关于领导者为何公平、伦理且非虐待（我们统称为原则性领导行为）的累积性知识。我们的综述围绕一个由四个理论视角构成的框架展开，这些视角阐明了此类行为的引发和持续因素：人际动机，侧重于关系解释；工具性动机，核心是将这些行为作为实现某种最终目标的手段；道德动机，将这些领导行为描述为目的本身；以及自我调节与特质，侧重于领导者执行这些行为的自动倾向和能力。我们不仅综合了以往关于塑造原则性领导行为的零散发现，还强调了它们之间的重叠与区别。通过扩展我们的框架，我们强调了各视角之间的相互作用以及关键的研究途径，以更好地理解领导者为何以有益而非有害的方式对待下属。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The concept of craft has long lived in the margins of organizational research and has typically been equated with a primitive form of manufacturing. Craft, however, seems to have had a resurgence, and is now increasingly associated with alternative approaches to work and organization in contemporary society. Yet, despite growing research on the phenomenon, insights have remained fragmented due to a lack of common theoretical infrastructure. In an effort to synthesize the disparate threads of research on craft, we conducted an interpretive review of the concept's use in management and organizational literature over the past century. Based on this we propose a reconceptualization of craft as a timeless approach to work that prioritizes human engagement over machine control. We identify the distinct work skills and attitudes that are typically associated with craft, and illustrate how these appear across two conventional configurations (traditional and industrialized craft) and three contemporaneous configurations (technical, pure, and creative craft) that are visible in the literature. Finally, we suggest how our framework could be used as a general theory for understanding alternative approaches to work against the backdrop of growing affordances of machine technology, and sketch future research avenues for exploring specific craft-related tensions and evolutionary processes.

手工艺的概念长期以来一直处于组织研究的边缘，通常被等同于一种原始的制造形式。然而，手工艺似乎正在复兴，并且在当代社会中越来越多地与工作和组织的替代方法联系在一起。尽管关于这一现象的研究不断增加，但由于缺乏共同的理论基础，相关见解仍然是碎片化的。为了综合关于手工艺的零散研究线索，我们对过去一个世纪管理和组织文献中该概念的使用进行了阐释性回顾。基于此，我们提出将手工艺重新定义为一种永恒的工作方法，它优先考虑人的参与而非机器控制。我们识别了通常与手工艺相关的独特工作技能和态度，并说明了这些技能和态度如何出现在文献中可见的两种传统构型（传统手工艺和工业化手工艺）以及三种当代构型（技术手工艺、纯粹手工艺和创意手工艺）中。最后，我们建议如何将我们的框架作为一种通用理论，在机器技术可供性不断增长的背景下理解替代性的工作方法，并勾勒出探索特定手工艺相关张力和演化过程的未来研究路径。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Membership change—adding, replacing, and losing members—is a common phenomenon in work teams and charts a different theoretical space from prior team research that has assumed stable team membership and shared team properties. Based on a comprehensive review of 133 empirical studies on team membership change since 1948, we propose a temporal framework pertaining to the causes and consequences of membership change. Three key theoretical insights emerge from our evidence-based integration: (a) Membership change first disrupts team cognitive, behavioral, and interpersonal processes and states (e.g., transactive memory systems, coordination) but can benefit team performance after teams adapt to form new processes and states; (b) whether and to what extent team performance benefits from membership change is contingent on the magnitude of membership change, requirements of team communication, member adaptation-related attributes, change in team knowledge, skills, abilities, and other characteristics (KSAOs), and team knowledge work; and (c) poor team experiences motivate member departure and may make it challenging for newcomers to join and teams to adapt to membership change. Our review moves team research into new avenues that do not presume stable team membership and shared team properties in understanding team functioning and performance, and outlines key directions to advance integrative theory.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

As globalization has become a defining issue for business and society, an increasing amount of research has examined how multicultural experiences affect a variety of psychological and organizational outcomes. We define “multicultural experiences” as exposure to or interactions with elements or members of a different culture(s). We then provide a comprehensive review of the literature and detail how multicultural experiences impact intrapersonal, interpersonal, and organizational outcomes, including creativity, psychological adjustment, intergroup bias, trust, morality, leadership effectiveness, and individual or firm performance, exploring key mechanisms and boundary conditions that have also emerged. We then present a new theoretical framework—the “Structure–Appraisal Model of Multicultural Experiences”—that organizes the overall pattern of findings and provides a roadmap for future research. The structure part of our model proposes that deeper multicultural experiences produce integrative processes that transform intrapersonal cognition, whereas broader multicultural experiences activate comparative processes that influence interpersonal attitudes and behaviors. The appraisal part of our model suggests that these intrapersonal and interpersonal effects are only likely to occur when appraisals of one’s multicultural experiences are positive rather than negative. We conclude by discussing practical implications for individuals and organizations, as well as future directions for researchers to consider exploring.

随着全球化成为商业和社会的一个定义性议题，越来越多的研究考察了多文化经验如何影响各种心理和组织结果。我们将“多文化经验”定义为接触或互动于不同文化的元素或成员。随后，我们对文献进行了全面回顾，并详细阐述了多文化经验如何影响个人内部、人际和组织结果，包括创造力、心理调节、群体间偏见、信任、道德、领导有效性以及个人或公司绩效，并探讨了其中出现的关键机制和边界条件。接着，我们提出了一个新的理论框架——“多文化经验的结构-评估模型”——该模型整理了研究结果的整体模式，并为未来研究提供了路线图。我们模型的结构部分提出，更深层次的多文化经验会产生转化个人内部认知的整合过程，而更广泛的多文化经验则会激活影响人际态度和行为的比较过程。我们模型的评估部分表明，只有当一个人对多文化经验的评估是积极而非消极时，这些个人内部和人际效应才可能发生。最后，我们讨论了对个人和组织的实践意义，以及研究人员未来可以考虑探索的方向。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Our article reviews research on “organizational science and health care,” defined broadly as research focusing on topics commonly studied in the organizational and management literatures and conducted in health care settings. Using almost 700 articles published in leading organizational science (OS) and health care (HC) journals over the past decade, we first apply network methods to map this burgeoning field of research, highlighting topics that appear more in the foreground (and background) of the field. We then conduct an in-depth review of recent and influential articles, studying the five most prominent topics: organizational change, learning, coordination/cooperation, teams/ structure, and performance. Next, we synthesize this research, highlighting the patientcentered, dynamic, and specialized nature of health care work, and detailing disciplinary distinctions across studies published in OS and HC journals. Whereas research in OS journals tends to emphasize broad generalizability and organizing processes, research in HC journals tends to emphasize contextualized problems and the role of organizational structures and practices in solving them. We conclude by articulating the need for a broader coordination that integrates both of these disciplinary orientations in ways that could allow scholars to advance organizational science and health care with future research that is both rigorous and relevant.

我们的文章回顾了关于“组织科学与医疗保健”的研究，该领域被广泛定义为在医疗保健背景下开展的、侧重于组织和管理文献中常见主题的研究。通过使用过去十年发表在领先的组织科学 (OS) 和医疗保健 (HC) 期刊上的近 700 篇文章，我们首先应用网络方法来绘制这一蓬勃发展的研究领域，突出了在该领域中处于前景 (和背景) 的主题。随后，我们对近期具有影响力的文章进行了深入回顾，研究了五个最突出的主题：组织变革、学习、协调/合作、团队/结构以及绩效。接着，我们综合了这些研究，强调了医疗保健工作以患者为中心、动态且专业化的性质，并详细说明了发表在 OS 和 HC 期刊上的研究之间的学科差异。OS 期刊的研究往往强调广泛的普适性和组织过程，而 HC 期刊的研究则倾向于强调情境化问题以及组织结构和实践在解决这些问题中的作用。最后，我们阐明了进行更广泛协调的必要性，即以能够让学者通过未来既严谨又相关的研究来推进组织科学和医疗保健的方式，整合这两种学科取向。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Absenteeism from work is disruptive and expensive for organizations and may be indicative of poor work adjustment for employees. Yet, traditional individual-centric explanations for absence are inadequate, particularly given the rise of relational, teamfocused, and customer-driven work designs and in growing recognition of the permeable boundary between work and nonwork. Although there has been considerable research interest in social and relational causations of absenteeism, limited effort has been spent systematizing the evidence and formulating an overall model of the social dynamics of the behavior. Our review integrates this multidisciplinary body of research, explicating the social and relational determinants of absenteeism. We propose a multilevel model that identifies the social factors shaping absence that stem from the work (organization, occupation) and nonwork (family, community, nation or society) domains. The model establishes six primary paths and related theories through which these social factors operate, encompassing normative influence, social exchange, job resources, work attitudes, emotions, and ethics. The review offers evidence for the influence of the social context and provides insights concerning how team dynamics, occupational norms, gender composition, family demands, community forces, and cultural context affect absenteeism. We conclude with future research directions and social implications for attendance management, bridging absenteeism and presenteeism literatures.

缺勤对组织而言具有破坏性且成本高昂，并可能预示着员工的工作适应不良。然而，传统的以个人为中心的缺勤解释已不足够，特别是考虑到关系型、以团队为中心和客户驱动的工作设计的兴起，以及人们日益认识到工作与非工作之间存在渗透性边界。尽管学术界对缺勤的社会和关系成因有着浓厚的研究兴趣，但在系统化证据和构建该行为社会动态的整体模型方面所做的努力有限。我们的综述整合了这一多学科研究体系，阐明了缺勤的社会和关系决定因素。我们提出了一个多层次模型，识别了源自工作（组织、职业）和非工作（家庭、社区、国家或社会）领域的影响缺勤的社会因素。该模型确立了这些社会因素发挥作用的六条主要路径及相关理论，涵盖了规范影响、社会交换、工作资源、工作态度、情绪和伦理。本综述提供了社会情境影响的证据，并就团队动态、职业规范、性别构成、家庭需求、社区力量和文化背景如何影响缺勤提供了见解。最后，我们提出了未来的研究方向以及考勤管理的社会意义，架起了缺勤与出勤主义文献之间的桥梁。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

A surprising and ironic lack of shared cognition currently exists about team cognition, including how to define the construct, organize the research, and integrate across multiple disjointed constructs. In response to team cognition at a critical crossroad, we provide a comprehensive on the concept of team cognition at a critical crossroad, we provide a comprehensive and cross-disciplinary review, highlighting similarities and differences between constructs and integrating across constructs. Specifically, we synthesize 10 disjointed team cognition constructs into three overarching dimensions. By establishing a common vocabulary to describe team cognition, the three-dimensional framework enhances our ability to evaluate accumulated research, recognize points of intersection, and identify key research gaps. Whereas the three-dimensional framework unites the team cognition literature conceptually, we see networks as a powerful tool to unite the team cognition literature methodologically. Networks neatly merge the structure and content of team cognition, multiple knowledge domains, the interrelationship between cognitive processes and cognitive representations, and the measurement capability to answer new and sophisticated research questions. By providing conceptual integration within a network configuration, we offer theoretical and measurement redirection to hasten the next frontier of team cognition research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The diffusion of organizational practices remains a central concern for scholars from diverse disciplines and backgrounds. We assess the most recent 20 years of research on interorganizational diffusion to establish findings that are now conclusive and identify important questions or areas of research that remain unaddressed. We identify five key issues with the literature, which are largely a consequence of viewing diffusion as a source of homogeneity across organizations. We further propose a point of view that calls for a more fundamental reorientation of diffusion research. Our main contention is that researchers have focused on diffusion processes as producing similarities among organizations but have overlooked theoretical and empirical indications that diffusion processes often create and sustain differences among organizations. We seek to draw attention to this omission, demonstrate its significance, and make a case for a reorientation of diffusion research. In doing so, we hope to advance a more realistic future research agenda that considers diffusion as a source of both homogeneity and heterogeneity across organizations.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Understanding whether and how work design affects human cognition is important because: (a) cognition is necessary for job performance, (b) digital technologies increase the need for cognition, and (c) it is vital to maintain cognitive functioning in the mature workforce. We synthesize research from work design, human factors, learning, occupational health, and lifespan perspectives. Defining cognition in terms of both knowledge and cognitive processes or fluid abilities, we show that five types of work characteristics (job complexity, job autonomy, relational work design, job feedback, and psychosocial demands) affect employees' cognition via multiple pathways. In the short-to-medium term, we identify three cognitively enriching pathways (opportunity for use of cognition, accelerated knowledge acquisition, motivated exploratory learning) and two cognitively harmful pathways (strain-impaired cognition, depleted cognitive capacity). We also identify three longer-term pathways (cognitive preservation, accumulated knowledge, and ill-health impairment). Based on the emerging evidence for the role of work design in promoting cognition, we propose an integrative model suggesting that the short-to-medium term processes between work design and cognition accumulate to affect longer-term cognitive outcomes, such as the prevention of cognitive decline as one ages. We also identify further directions for research and methodological improvements.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The concept of climate strength—the extent of agreement among group members regarding climate perceptions—has evolved from a statistical criterion for aggregation to a focal management construct. We review 156 empirical team climate studies spanning the last decade, observing a widely held assumption that environmental stimuli influence climate strength. However, closer inspection of these studies suggests that this relationship is far more complex and nuanced than previously considered. This is problematic, since an oversimplified view of how climate strength develops may lead to erroneous conclusions—for example, that everyone will share similar perceptions if exposed to the same stimuli. Our review: (a) distinguishes experiences from interpretations, explaining how some stimuli are experienced by all (some) yet are interpreted differently (the same); (b) distinguishes stimuli from the contexts in which they occur, explaining how contextual elements—specifically, the structural dimensions of teams—are not stimuli but rather act as lenses through which experiences and interpretations occur; and (c) develops a more complete theory of climate strength reflecting contemporary work practices—including informal structures and teams with more fluid boundaries—by explaining how these lenses simultaneously filter multiple stimuli in either complementary or competing ways.

气候强度（团队成员关于气候感知的共识程度）的概念已从聚合的统计标准演变为核心的管理概念。我们回顾了过去十年间的 156 项实证团队气候研究，观察到一个被广泛接受的假设，即环境刺激会影响气候强度。然而，对这些研究的进一步审视表明，这种关系比之前认为的要复杂和微妙得多。这是有问题的，因为对气候强度如何发展的过度简化观点可能会导致错误的结论——例如，如果暴露在相同的刺激下，每个人的感知都会相似。我们的综述：(a) 区分了体验与解释，解释了为什么某些刺激被所有人（或部分人）体验到，但却被以不同（或相同）的方式解释；(b) 区分了刺激与其发生的背景，解释了背景要素——特别是团队的结构维度——不是刺激，而是作为体验和解释发生的透镜；以及 (c) 通过解释这些透镜如何以互补或竞争的方式同时过滤多种刺激，开发了一个反映当代工作实践（包括非正式结构和边界更具流动性的团队）的更完整的气候强度理论。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Time—whether objective (“clock”) time or the subjective experience of time—is an essential concept for understanding how individuals, teams, and organizations evolve, grow, learn, and change. Yet most management research and literature reviews have typically emphasized objective time to the exclusion of subjective time. Our review focuses on this lesser studied “other” time, beginning with a review of how seminal articles on time have historically conceptualized subjective time. From this initial review, we offer an integrative and multilevel definition of subjective time as the experience of the past, present, and future, which occurs as individuals and collectives mentally travel through, perceive, and interpret time. Then, using this new definition to frame the remainder of the review, we examine the literature employing subjective time concepts to address three key questions: what is subjective time, how does it operate, and why does it matter? Our analysis provides new ways to understand subjective time and the important role it plays in organizational phenomena. We conclude by challenging management scholars to consider three priorities for future research: the fundamental relationship between subjective time and meaning, the unclear nature of event time, and the ways in which objective time is dependent upon subjective time.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The question of agency has been neglected in social network research, in part because the structural approach to social relations removes consideration of individual volition and action. However, recent emphasis on purposive individuals has reignited interest in agency across a range of social network research topics. Our paper provides a brief history of social network agency and an emergent framework based on a thorough review of research published since 2004. This organizing framework distinguishes between an ontology of dualism (actors and social relations as separate domains) and an ontology of duality (actors and social relations as mutually constituted) at both the individual and the social network level. The resulting four perspectives on network agency comprise individual advantage, embeddedness, micro-foundations, and structuration. In conclusion, we address current debates and future directions relating to sources of action and the locus of identity.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Stigma has become an increasingly significant challenge for society. Recognition of this problem is indicated by the growing attention paid to it within the management literature, which has provided illuminating insights. However, stigma has primarily been examined at a single level of analysis: individual, occupational, organizational, or industry. Yet, cultural understandings of what is discreditable or taboo do not come from the individual, occupation, organization, or industry that is stigmatized; on the contrary, they come from particular sources that transcend levels. As such, we propose that current silos within the literature may not only be preventing engagement with insights from different levels of analysis but, importantly, be preventing us from truly understanding stigmatization as a social process. To address this issue, we review the stigma literature and then present a cross-level integrative framework of the sources, characteristics, and management strategies therein. Our framework provides a common language that integrates insights across these levels and enables a shift in attention from how actors respond to stigma to broader processes of stigmatization.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

With societal inequalities continuing to increase and organizations providing the vast majority of people with their income, we wanted to assess the ways in which organizational practices are implicated in the burgeoning of social and economic inequality. Following an integrative review of the literature drawn from across the social sciences, we found that the multiple ways in which five major organizational practices—hiring, role allocation, promotion, compensation, and structuring—are enacted emerged as being central to the reproduction of inequality. We also uncovered how the persistence of these practices, and the inequality they induce, can be largely attributed to a constellation of three highly institutionalized myths, efficiency, meritocracy, and positive globalization. Our analysis further reveals how, as scholars, we bear a corresponding responsibility to reconsider how we engage in research on and teaching about organizations. The implications of this for our future work are discussed.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This article presents an in-depth review of scholarship on how mandatory and voluntary regulatory pressures on firms affect their environmental strategies and performance. Although mandatory regulation typically has a strong and positive influence on firms' environmental performance, studies of the effects of voluntary pressures demonstrate that by themselves they are unlikely to bring about significant improvement in environmental outcomes. Accordingly, future research should focus on the complementary impacts of mandatory and voluntary programs on organizations' environmental strategies and performance rather than analyzing their separate influence. Scholars should examine i) more than a single environmental pressure at a given time, ii) more than one response to the regulatory context, iii) the synergy between mandatory and voluntary pressures, iv) the impact of imperfect enforcement, and v) the political influence corporations exert on the mandatory and voluntary pressures that affect them. This essay argues that managers react to environmental regulations in different ways depending on how they understand the multiple pressures that they confront and their opportunities to influence the outcomes.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We review research on the organizational causes (how do organizations contribute?) and consequences (how are organizations affected?) of economic inequality. Our review of 151 conceptual and empirical articles indicates that organizational research on economic inequality not only encompasses a wide range of topics at multiple levels of analysis but also that this broad-scope literature exhibits conceptual ambiguities and lacks overarching organizing frameworks. To address these two issues, we develop an organizational perspective on economic inequality and clarify it as uneven distribution in the endowment and/or access to resources in a society, which manifests in differential abilities and opportunities to engage in value creation. Following this, we integrate the reviewed research to highlight the bidirectional relationship between societal economic inequality and organizations, and eight mechanisms that drive this relationship. We conclude by identifying opportunities for future research on economic inequality in research on management and organizations.

我们回顾了关于经济不平等的组织原因(组织如何造成影响?)和后果(组织如何受到影响?)的研究。我们对151篇概念性和实证性文章的回顾表明,关于经济不平等的组织研究不仅涵盖了多个分析层面的广泛主题,而且这一范围广泛的文献还表现出概念上的模糊性,且缺乏统领性的组织框架。为了解决这两个问题,我们提出了关于经济不平等的组织视角,并将其明确为社会资源禀赋和/或获取资源的不均衡分布,这体现为参与价值创造的能力和机会的差异。随后,我们整合了所回顾的研究,以强调社会经济不平等与组织之间的双向关系,以及驱动这种关系的八种机制。最后,我们确定了管理和组织研究中关于经济不平等的未来研究机会。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Social support research proliferated across multiple disciplines for more than a half century. This growth, as well as disciplinary differences, resulted in mixed views, conceptualizations, and operationalizations. This review synthesizes knowledge and empirical findings from more than 4,500 studies across disciplines. We summarize several characteristics of social support studied in the literature: quantity and quality, utilization, source, content, format, and consistency. We also identify four dynamic roles of social support in predicting individual outcomes directly, indirectly, and interactively (with stressors): a positivity catalyst, a positivity enhancer, a negativity buffer, and a negativity exacerbator. We find that the incongruence between social support, stressors, and individual characteristics accounts for the diverse roles of social support and mixed findings. Based on our analysis, we discuss how management scholars may draw insights from other disciplines to advance social support research and provide recommendations for future research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Given its extremely negative impact, it is not surprising that there is extensive literature focused on understanding and reducing corruption. However, the existing academic work focuses largely on corruption in government. Yet, corporations play a key role in much of the corruption that occurs in society and are important contexts for corruption themselves; they are also very different from governments and, we argue, deserve focused study and the development of a coherent theory of corporate corruption. In this article, we define corporate corruption and argue that management researchers are uniquely positioned to contribute to the development of a theory of corporate corruption and the development of solutions to prevent it. We then examine the current state of research on this important topic and propose a framework for organizing research on corporate corruption into four perspectives: corporate corruption as rational action, corporate corruption as institutionalized practice, corporate corruption as cultural norm, and corporate corruption as moral failure. We go on to propose a research agenda for management scholars in some traditional areas of management research to take this important but under-researched topic forward, as well as highlight some of the methodological challenges that management researchers face in conducting research in corporate corruption.

鉴于其极端的负面影响，有大量文献致力于理解和减少腐败也就不足为奇了。然而，现有的学术工作主要集中在政府腐败上。然而，在社会中发生的大部分腐败中，企业扮演着关键角色，且企业本身也是腐败的重要背景；企业也与政府截然不同，我们认为，企业腐败值得专门研究并建立连贯的理论。在本文中，我们定义了企业腐败，并认为管理学研究者在为企业腐败理论的发展以及预防腐败的解决方案的开发做出贡献方面具有独特优势。随后，我们考察了这一重要课题的研究现状，并提出了一个框架，将企业腐败研究组织为四个视角：作为理性行动的企业腐败、作为制度化实践的企业腐败、作为文化规范的企业腐败以及作为道德失败的企业腐败。接着，我们为管理学者在一些传统的管理研究领域提出了研究议程，以推进这一重要但研究不足的课题，并强调了管理学者在进行企业腐败研究时面临的一些方法论挑战。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Our review of acquisition research from the 2008 to 2018 period shows that a large and quickly growing portion of this work has focused on the behavioral aspects of acquisitions. Although this contemporary scholarship holds significant potential to advance our knowledge of acquisition processes and outcomes, because it has been scattered across a wide range of topics and levels, scholars have not yet systematically discussed and integrated the insights we have gained. The growing focus on the multidisciplinary aspects of strategic decisions exacerbates this challenge. In response, we provide a brief literature review of the behavioral acquisition literature, offer a comprehensive view of the state of knowledge in this area, and develop a research agenda capable of guiding researchers toward building a comprehensive understanding of the behavioral aspects of acquisitions. We also point to novel methods we feel will help scholars pursue underexplored avenues, offering the potential to further advance the study of acquisitions.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Time-use refers to the amount of time spent working and how that time is allocated over a particular period. A growing number of scholars are considering how social context—people’s immediate social environments (e.g., colleagues and managers, norms, work groups, and nonwork demands)—shape time-use. However, this research is fragmented across disciplines, methods, and levels of analysis. To integrate and advance knowledge in this area, we review empirical studies that inform current understanding of social context and time-use. In doing so, we develop a framework that reveals how the extant literature coalesces around four taken-for-granted social meanings: time-use as dedication, time-use as performance, time-use as identity, and time-use as power. These four meanings are anchored in broadly shared societal ideologies but are enacted and interpreted locally as people engage time in a specific context. Looking across the four social meanings, we discuss how they are interconnected, and identify overarching themes that unite them. Building on these insights, we suggest important directions for future research on the social context of time-use.

时间利用是指在特定时期内用于工作的时间量以及这些时间是如何分配的。越来越多的学者正在考虑社会背景——即人们的直接社会环境（例如，同事和经理、规范、工作团队和非工作需求）——如何塑造时间利用。然而，这项研究分散在不同的学科、方法和分析层面。为了整合并推进该领域的知识，我们回顾了为当前对社会背景和时间利用的理解提供信息的实证研究。在此过程中，我们开发了一个框架，揭示了现有文献如何围绕四个公认的社会意义凝聚：作为奉献的时间利用、作为绩效的时间利用、作为身份的时间利用和作为权力的时间利用。这四种意义植根于广泛共享的社会意识形态，但在人们于特定背景下投入时间时，会在局部被执行和解释。通过审视这四种社会意义，我们讨论了它们是如何相互关联的，并确定了将它们统一起来的总体主题。基于这些见解，我们为未来关于时间利用社会背景的研究提出了重要方向。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Artificial intelligence (AI) characterizes a new generation of technologies capable of interacting with the environment and aiming to simulate human intelligence. The success of integrating AI into organizations critically depends on workers’ trust in AI technology. This review explains how AI differs from other technologies and presents the existing empirical research on the determinants of human “trust” in AI, conducted in multiple disciplines over the last 20 years. Based on the reviewed literature, we identify the form of AI representation (robot, virtual, and embedded) and its level of machine intelligence (i.e., its capabilities) as important antecedents to the development of trust and propose a framework that addresses the elements that shape users’ cognitive and emotional trust. Our review reveals the important role of AI’s tangibility, transparency, reliability, and immediacy behaviors in developing cognitive trust, and the role of AI’s anthropomorphism specifically for emotional trust. We also note several limitations in the current evidence base, such as the diversity of trust measures and overreliance on short-term, small sample, and experimental studies, where the development of trust is likely to be different than in longer-term, higher stakes field environments. Based on our review, we suggest the most promising paths for future research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Literature has long highlighted that entrepreneurs benefit from having the right network connections. We observe, however, that although the large and growing literature on entrepreneur network evolution shares a common focus around the formation and dissolution of entrepreneurs' interdependent, socially embedded relationships, this literature is fragmented and does not always use the explicit language of network theory. We conduct an integrative review to put forth a typology of five core drivers of entrepreneur network evolution. A core insight of our review is that most entrepreneurial network research emphasizes an overarching pattern that suggests substantial pathdependence, with new ties often being local to entrepreneurs' existing network, hierarchical, and geographic positions. We label this perspective structural localism. By contrast, more recent, emerging research on entrepreneurial action in forming interorganizational relationships, much of which does not use the language of network theory (e.g., ties and networks), suggests a more dynamic and path-creating pattern. We label this perspective agentic network change. After explicating the distinct theoretical foundations and behavioral assumptions of each perspective, we sketch a research agenda for better balancing our understanding of the two and how they intertwine.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Risk has become a crucial part of organizing, affecting a wide range of organizations in all sectors. We identify, review, and integrate diverse literatures relevant to organizing risk, building on an existing framework that describes how risk is organized in three “modes” —prospectively, in real-time, and retrospectively. We then identify three critical issues in the existing literature: its fragmented nature, its neglect of the tensions associated with each of the modes, and its tendency to assume that the meaning of an object in relation to risk is singular and stable. We provide a series of new insights with regard to each of these issues. First, we develop the concept of a risk cycle that shows how organizations engage with all three modes and transition between them over time. Second, we explain why the tensions have been largely ignored and show how studies using a risk-work perspective can provide further insights into them. Third, we develop the concept of risk translation to highlight the ways in which the meanings of risks can be transformed and to identify the political consequences of such translations. We conclude the article with a research agenda to elaborate these insights and ideas further.

风险已成为组织过程中的关键部分，影响着各行各业的广泛组织。我们在现有框架的基础上，识别、回顾并整合了与组织风险相关的各类文献，该框架描述了风险如何以三种“模式”被组织——前瞻性、实时性和回顾性。随后，我们识别了现有文献中的三个关键问题：其碎片化的性质、对各模式相关张力的忽视，以及倾向于假设与风险相关的客体含义是单一且稳定的。针对这些问题，我们提供了一系列新的见解。首先，我们提出了风险周期的概念，展示了组织如何参与所有三种模式，并随着时间的推移在它们之间进行转换。其次，我们解释了为什么这些张力在很大程度上被忽视了，并展示了采用风险工作视角的视角如何能为这些张力提供进一步的见解。第三，我们提出了风险转译的概念，以强调风险含义可能被转化的方式，并识别此类转译的政治后果。文章最后提出了一个研究议程，以进一步阐述这些见解和观点。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Beginning with Simon (1947)—and motivated by an interest in the effect of formal organizational structure on decision-making—a large body of research has examined how organizations process information. Yet, research in this area is extremely diverse and fragmented. We offer a retrospective of past research to summarize our collective knowledge, as well as identify and advance new concerns and questions. In doing so, we identify three critical issues: a division between an aggregation perspective and a constraint perspective of structure, little focus on informational sources of conflict, and uneven treatment of various stages of decision-making. We then offer a road map for future research that elaborates the role of organizational structure in decision-making. In this endeavor, we offer an ecological perspective of information processing that addresses the issues and provides opportunities to expand research in new directions.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The widespread implementation of algorithmic technologies in organizations prompts questions about how algorithms may reshape organizational control. We use Edwards' (1979) perspective of "contested terrain," wherein managers implement production technologies to maximize the value of labor and workers resist, to synthesize the interdisciplinary research on algorithms at work. We find that algorithmic control in the workplace operates through six main mechanisms, which we call the "6 Rs"—employers can use algorithms to direct workers by restricting and recommending, evaluate workers by recording and rating, and discipline workers by replacing and rewarding. We also discuss several key insights regarding algorithmic control. First, labor process theory helps to highlight potential problems with the largely positive view of algorithms at work. Second, the technical capabilities of algorithmic systems facilitate a form of rational control that is distinct from the technical and bureaucratic control used by employers for the past century. Third, employers' use of algorithms is sparking the development of new algorithmic occupations. Finally, workers are individually and collectively resisting algorithmic control through a set of emerging tactics we call algoactivism. These insights sketch the contested terrain of algorithmic control and map critical areas for future research.

摘要 (中文):

算法技术在组织中的广泛实施引发了关于算法如何重塑组织控制的问题。我们采用爱德华兹 (Edwards, 1979) 的“争夺领域”视角——即管理者实施生产技术以最大化劳动价值，而工人则进行反抗——来综合关于工作中算法的跨学科研究。我们发现，工作场所中的算法控制通过六个主要机制运作，我们称之为“6 R”：雇主可以使用算法通过限制 (restricting) 和推荐 (recommending) 来指导工人，通过记录 (recording) 和评分 (rating) 来评估工人，以及通过替换 (replacing) 和奖励 (rewarding) 来惩戒工人。我们还讨论了关于算法控制的几个关键见解。首先，劳动过程理论有助于揭示工作中算法的普遍积极观点所存在的潜在问题。其次，算法系统的技术能力促进了一种理性控制形式，这种形式不同于雇主在过去一个世纪中所使用的技术控制和官僚控制。第三，雇主对算法的使用正在引发新的算法职业的发展。最后，工人正通过一套被称为“算法激进主义” (algoactivism) 的新兴策略，以个人和集体的方式抵制算法控制。这些见解勾勒出算法控制的争夺领域，并绘制了未来研究的关键领域。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Academic interest in start-up teams has grown dramatically over the past 40 years, with researchers from a wide variety of disciplines actively studying the topic. Although this widespread interest is encouraging, a review of the literature reveals a lack of consensus in how researchers conceptualize and operationally define start-up teams. A lack of consensus on the core phenomenon—a foundational part of a strong paradigm—has stifled the systematic advancement of knowledge about start-up teams, which has downstream implications for the viability of this field of research. To advance the development of a stronger paradigm, we present a multidimensional conceptualization of start-up teams that is derived from points of consensus in existing definitions. Our multidimensional conceptualization accounts for the fact that although all are under the umbrella of the concept of “start-up team,” start-up teams vary in a set of key ingredients—ownership of equity, autonomy of strategic decision-making, and entitativity. This conceptualization serves as a framework for reviewing and beginning to integrate past research on start-up teams. It also serves as a framework for guiding and informing an integrated program of future research on start-up teams. By introducing a multidimensional conceptualization of start-up teams, we highlight the value of considering the defining ingredients of start-up teams for furthering a stronger paradigm.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Although values were once the central focus of institutional scholarship, they occupy a marginal position in the contemporary literature. Viewing this situation as both a significant problem and a latent opportunity, our paper seeks to stimulate change by pursuing three broad aims. The first is to present an integrative review of the institutional and sociological literatures on values. This review addresses basic questions about values' nature, origins, and functions, and uncovers many latent connections between these currently separate bodies of research. Drawing on this literature review, our second aim is to elaborate the “value of values” for institutional analysis. Specifically, we will suggest that a renewed focus on values can (a) enhance our understanding of institutions and their human inhabitants and (b) increase the moral and practical relevance of institutional scholarship. Our third aim is to sketch out a preliminary agenda for future research. Although we stress that values can be incorporated into contemporary research in many different ways, our main focus is on promoting research that gives renewed attention to the enduring problems that were at the heart of early institutional scholarship.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Homophily, the tendency to associate with similar others, is a fundamental pattern underlying human relationships. Although scholars largely agree on the definition of homophily, their empirical measures of it vary widely. This both raises the question of whether everyone is studying the same phenomenon and suggests that our understanding of homophily is incomplete. To address this question, we examined the homophily literature from 1954 through 2018 and constructed a typology that includes the empirical measures most commonly used. We found that these measures tend to neglect the meaning that people attribute to and derive from homophilous relationships in three ways. First, measures often do not capture how individuals' interactions with others influence their sense of the world—how social constructions affect meaning. Second, measures often do not capture whether individuals interpret and attach importance to their associations or similarities the same way researchers do. Finally, measures often do not capture the meaning-related ambiguities introduced by studies of multiple types of social contexts, associations, and similarities. Because homophily remains a central construct in social science, this divergence between measures and meaning suggests a need for refinement.

摘要 (中文):

同质性 (Homophily), 即与相似的人交往的倾向, 是人类关系背后的基本模式。尽管学者们在很大程度上认同同质性的定义, 但其对应的实证测量方法却大相径庭。这既提出了是否所有人都在研究同一现象的问题, 也表明我们对同质性的理解是不完整的。为了解决这个问题, 我们审查了 1954 年至 2018 年间的同质性文献, 并构建了一个包含最常用实证测量的分类体系。我们发现, 这些测量方法往往在三个方面忽略了人们赋予同质关系以及从中获得的意义。首先, 测量往往未能捕捉到个人与他人的互动如何影响他们对世界的感知——即社会建构如何影响意义。其次, 测量往往未能捕捉到个人是否像研究人员那样解释其关联或相似性并赋予其重要性。最后, 测量往往未能捕捉到由多种类型的社会背景、关联和相似性研究所引入的与意义相关的模糊性。由于同质性仍然是社会科学中的一个核心概念, 这种测量与意义之间的分歧表明需要进行完善。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Entrepreneurial team formation—the process through which founders establish a team to start a new venture—has important implications for team performance and entrepreneurial success. Although research on entrepreneurial team formation is gradually growing, it is at a critical juncture and marked by considerable fragmentation. In part, this is because scholars have examined entrepreneurial team formation through different disciplinary lenses and within very different contexts. Our structured content analysis situates the literature based on questions addressed for new venture team formation, such as why, how, when, and where entrepreneurial teams are formed. The resulting integrative framework delineates the dynamic nature of the formation process, the origins of new venture teams, primary formation strategies used to initiate cofounding relations, and their effects on team characteristics, processes, and performance. Two key insights emerge to guide future research. One, the need for integration, especially across disciplines and contexts, acknowledging the role of the latter in shaping the formation process. Two, the need to embrace (self-) selection and endogeneity of founding characteristics, processes, and performance outcomes to the antecedent formation stage. We conclude that entrepreneurial team formation research is a fertile ground that has met merely a fraction of its potential to advance important knowledge in the field.

创业团队组建——创始人建立团队以创办新企业的动态过程——对团队绩效和创业成功具有重要影响。尽管

关于创业团队组建的研究正在逐渐增加，但它正处于一个关键时刻，并呈现出明显的碎片化特征。部分原因是学者们通过不同的学科视角和在截然不同的背景下考察了创业团队的组建。我们的结构化内容分析基于针对新创企业团队组建提出的问题（如为什么、如何、何时以及在哪里组建创业团队）对文献进行了定位。由此产生的整合框架描绘了组建过程的动态性质、新创企业团队的起源、用于启动共同创业关系的主要组建策略，以及它们对团队特征、过程和绩效的影响。研究提出了两个关键见解以指导未来研究。第一，需要进行整合，特别是跨学科和跨背景的整合，并承认后者在塑造组建过程中的作用。第二，需要接纳创始特征、过程和绩效结果相对于前置组建阶段的（自我）选择性和内生性。我们的结论是，创业团队组建研究是一片肥沃的土地，目前仅实现了其推动该领域重要知识进步潜力的极小部分。

149. Interruptions and Task Transitions: Understanding Their Characteristics, Processes, and Consequences

中断与任务切换：理解其特征、过程与后果

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Frequent interruptions and task transitions are an inescapable reality of modern organizational life, yet the relevant research spans across numerous seemingly disconnected domains that paint an incomplete and often inconsistent picture regarding the detrimental and/or beneficial consequences of such transitions, thus undermining the potential for this body of research to inform theory and practice. In this study, we review research relevant to interruptions such as intrusions, breaks, distractions, and discrepancies, as well as relevant work on multitasking and multiple goal self-regulation. In so doing, we identify ambiguities in the existing literature, and shed light on shared and unshared features across studies and fields to bring some coherence and start reconciling existing knowledge. At a theoretical level, our review reveals that behaviors on a task and the related interruptions and task transitions cannot be fully understood without taking into account the system of goals, within which they are embedded. We highlight that how people decide what to pay attention to and when to stop a goal pursuit to engage in another; have important emotional, cognitive, and performance implications; and provide directions for advancing knowledge on interruptions and task transitions.

频繁的中断和任务切换是现代组织生活中不可避免的现实，然而相关研究跨越了许多看似互不关联的领域，这些领域对这种切换的有害和/或有益后果描绘了一幅不完整且往往不一致的图景，从而削弱了这一研究领域指导理论和实践的潜力。在本研究中，我们回顾了与中断相关的研究，如侵入、休息、分心和差异，以及关于多任务处理和多目标自我调节的相关工作。在此过程中，我们识别了现有文献中的模糊之处，并阐明了跨研究和跨领域的共有及非共有特征，以带来一定的连贯性并开始调和现有知识。在理论层面，我们的综述揭示了，如果不考虑任务所嵌入的目标系统，就无法充分理解任务行为以及相关的中断和任务切换。我们强调，人们如何决定关注什么以及何时停止一项目标追求以投入另一项，具有重要的情感、认知和绩效影响；并为推进关于中断和任务切换的知识提供了方向。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Resource seeking, or the act of asking others for things that can help one attain one's goals, is an important behavior within organizations because of the increasingly dynamic nature of work that demands collaboration and coordination among employees. Over the past two decades, there has been growing research in the organizational sciences on four types of resource seeking behaviors: feedback seeking, information seeking, advice seeking, and help seeking. However, research on these four behaviors has existed in separate silos. We argue that there is value in recognizing that these behaviors reflect a common higher order construct (resource seeking), and in integrating the findings across the four literatures as a basis for understanding what we do and do not know about the predictors and outcomes of resource seeking at work. More specifically, we use conservation of resources (COR) theory as a framework to guide our integration across the four literatures and to both deepen and extend current understandings of why and when employees engage in resource seeking, as well as how resource seeking behaviors may lead to both individual and collective-level outcomes. We conclude with a discussion of future research needs and how COR theory can provide a fruitful foundation for future resource seeking research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Compared with people of average attractiveness, the highly attractive earn roughly 20 percent more and are recommended for promotion more frequently. The dominant view of this “attractiveness advantage” is one of taste-based discrimination, whereby attractive individuals are preferred without justification in economic productivity. We conduct a comprehensive review of research on attractiveness discrimination, finding relatively more evidence that this phenomenon constitutes, to some extent, statistical (as opposed to solely taste-based) discrimination, in which decision makers assume that attractive people are more competent and discriminate based on instrumental motives. We then review research that speaks to whether decision makers might be correct in assuming that attractive workers are more productive, finding that the attractive possess a slight advantage in human and a notable advantage in social capital. We finally review studies evaluating whether an advantage exists beyond that explained by capital differences. We find that the current body of work provides inconclusive evidence of taste-based but relatively more conclusive evidence of statistical discrimination processes. Our integrative view suggests how attractiveness biases can be detected more effectively, and points to key directions for future research on the sources of the attractiveness advantage. We conclude by discussing the promise of an integrative approach to understanding other achievement gaps, such as those on the basis of gender, race, and social class.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

We review the organizational literature on power in light of Bourdieu' s concept of capital to further a political capital perspective on power in organizations. In reviewing the literature, we find that Bourdieu' s concepts of economic, cultural, social, and symbolic capital provide a useful beginning, yet are imprecise and insufficient for organizational research. We therefore modify and extend Bourdieu' s typology to include knowledge, reputational, organizational, and institutional capital as distinct varieties of political capital in organizations. We provide an integrative framework and further review the concept of political capital as determinant of power within organizations, focusing on its activation and mobilization, its convertibility, and the contingency of its value in organizations. We also bring to the fore various mechanisms latent in the extant literature that explain how political capital generates power—not only resource dependence but also status, identification, and legitimacy. Our proposed political capital framework provides a foundation for further research on power in organizations.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Although high-quality work relationships are essential for organizational effectiveness and employee well-being, they often fracture in the course of organizational life. To better understand how work relationships recover from relationship fractures, we provide an integrative review under the umbrella of relational resilience. We establish a unified definition of relational resilience, and then use two broad attributes—resilience processes and resilience foundations—as an organizing framework for our discussion of relational resilience. Resilience processes describe how fractures are triggered, interpreted, and repaired. We review common triggers of relationship fracture and describe two distinct pathways—gradual drifts and abrupt shocks—to fracture, highlight the important role that positive attributional and prosocial sensemaking processes play in facilitating postfracture repair, and discuss the process by which fractured relationships are restored or strengthened. Resilience foundations describe the preconditions for successfully engaging in prosocial sensemaking and relational repair. Our review identified the relational foundations critical to positive sensemaking and positive relational attributions, and the reparative foundations critical to relational repair. Finally, we organize insights and future directions around six themes: balancing and realigning emotions, synchronizing attributions and cognitions, contingencies of effective repair, fracture pathways and repair, trajectories of repair, and reciprocal relationships.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

This article reviews the history, foundations, development, and position of systems psychodynamic scholarship in organization studies. Systems psychodynamic scholarship focuses on the interaction between collective structures, norms, and practices in social systems and the cognitions, motivations, and emotions of members of those systems. It is most useful to investigate the unconscious forces that underpin the persistence of dysfunctional organizational features and the appeal of irrational leaders. It is also well equipped to challenge arrangements that stifle individual and organizational development. The article documents the tension, in this body of work, between an “outside-in” perspective, focused on institutions’ influence on individuals, and an “inside-out” perspective, focused on leaders’ influence on institutions. It also interrogates the marginalization of systems psychodynamic scholarship, positing that its marginality is both a social defense for organization studies as a whole and a generative feature of the systems psychodynamics approach. Granting it a position of functional, rather than oppressed, marginality, the article concludes, will enrich research about the experience, management, and organization of contemporary work.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Interdependence is a core concept in organization design, yet one that has remained consistently understudied. Current notions of interdependence remain rooted in seminal works, produced at a time when managers' near-perfect understanding of the task at hand drove the organization design process. In this context, task interdependence was rightly assumed to be exogenously determined by characteristics of the work and the technology. We no longer live in that world, yet our view of interdependence has remained exceedingly task centric and our treatment of interdependence overly deterministic. As organizations face increasingly unpredictable work streams and workers codesign the organization alongside managers, our field requires a more comprehensive toolbox that incorporates aspects of agent-based interdependence. In this article, we synthesize research in organization design, organizational behavior, and other related literatures to examine three types of interdependence that characterize organizations' workflows: task, goal, and knowledge interdependence. We offer clear definitions for each construct, analyze how each arises endogenously in the design process, explore their interrelations, and pose questions to guide future research.

Organizations are simultaneously embedded in inter-organizational networks and ecosystems, yet research on networks and ecosystems developed in isolation. Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The state of the economy represents a concern for individuals and shapes their behavior in profound ways. The current review of studies on how individuals respond to economic cycles reveals that organizational relevance of such responses has often not been considered, and the literature is characterized by a variety of seemingly disconnected explanations for how and why individuals respond to the perceived state of the economy. I develop a theoretical framework that systematizes the literature and accounts for the seemingly disparate findings, highlighting the underlying functionality of such responses for individuals. I then integrate the literature on individual responses to economic cycles with organizational research to examine the meaning of different individual responses from the perspective of organizational functioning. This integration generates a novel insight that individually functional responses to economic cycles can be dysfunctional from the perspective of organizations, often hindering rather than helping organizations' performance and undermining the well-being of other organizational members. The systematization of the literature also reveals that many responses which would be predicted by the identified theoretical processes and which would be also relevant to organizations have not been studied, laying an agenda for future organizational research.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The past decade has experienced an increase in the number of studies on organizational space or where work occurs. A number of these studies challenge traditional views of organizational space as a fixed, physical workspace because researchers fail to account for the spatial dynamics that they observe. New technologies, shifting employee-employer relations, and burgeoning expectations of the contemporary workforce blur boundaries between home and work, connect people and things that historically could not be linked, and extend workspaces to nearly everywhere, not just office buildings. Research on these transformations calls for incorporating movement into the physicality of work. Thus, organizational scholars have turned to process studies as ways to examine the dynamic features that create and alter spatial arrangements. However, the rapidly growing work in this area lacks integration and theoretical development. To address these concerns, we review and classify the organizational literature that casts space as a process, that is, dynamically as movements, performances, flows, and changing routines. This review yields five orientations of organizational space scholarship that we label as: developing, transitioning, imbricating, becoming, and constituting. We discuss these orientations, examine how they relate to key constructs of organizational space, and show how this work offers opportunities to theorizing about organizations.

摘要 (中文):

在过去的十年中，关于组织空间或工作发生地的研究数量有所增加。其中一些研究挑战了将组织空间视为固定物理工作空间的传统观点，因为研究人员未能解释他们观察到的空间动态。新技术、不断变化的雇佣关系以及当代劳动力日益增长的期望，模糊了家庭与工作之间的界限，连接了历史上无法联系的人和物，并将工作空间扩展到几乎任何地方，而不仅仅是办公大楼。对这些转型的研究要求将移动性纳入工作的物理性中。因此，组织学者转向过程研究，以此作为考察创造和改变空间安排的动态特征的方法。然而，该领域快速增长的研究缺乏整合和理论发展。为了解决这些问题，我们回顾并分类了将空间视为过程（即动态地视为移动、表演、流动和不断变化的常规）的组织文献。本次综述得出了组织空间研究的五个取向，我们将其标记为：发展中（developing）、转型中（transitioning）、交织（imbricating）、生成（becoming）和构成（constituting）。我们讨论了这些取向，考察了它们如何与组织空间的关键概念相关联，并展示了这项工作如何为组织理论化提供机会。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

The entrepreneurship setting—an extreme organizational context—provides fertile ground for organizationally relevant theory testing and development. In this article, we propose that randomized experiments in the context of entrepreneurship have considerable potential to advance theory in entrepreneurship, as well as other areas of organization science, including organizational behavior and strategic management. We ground this proposition in a multipronged review of randomized experiments in entrepreneurship (REE). Based on this review of prior work and emerging trends, we provide illustrative examples of innovative theory-driven experiments and motivate future research to consider randomized experiments in the entrepreneurial context both for testing boundary conditions and enhancing organizational theorizing broadly.

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Interpersonal competition is ubiquitous in organizations and is studied across a variety of disciplines. However, these literatures have developed in parallel with little integration, stunting scholarly progress and leaving researchers and practitioners uncertain as to whether competition within organizations is beneficial versus harmful. This review attempts to resolve these issues. First, we define interpersonal competition as existing when an individual desires, and directs behavior toward, attaining relative superiority over other(s) on a particular dimension. Second, we review the empirical research on the consequences of interpersonal competition, focusing on the factors that determine when interpersonal competition is helpful versus harmful for individual and interpersonal outcomes in organizations, while highlighting the common mechanisms that appear to underlie these factors. This prior work suggests when competition is appraised as a challenge, its downsides are mitigated and its benefits are most evident. Conversely, when competition is appraised as a threat, its downsides become most evident. We hope this review provides an entry point for scholars interested in interpersonal competition and a more parsimonious account of its consequences.

人际竞争在组织中无处不在,并且在多个学科中都有研究。然而,这些文献是平行发展的,很少有整合,这阻碍了学术进展,并使研究人员和从业者不确定组织内部的竞争是有益还是有害。本综述试图解决这些问题。首先,我们将人际竞争定义为:当个体渴望并在特定维度上针对他人采取行动以获得相对优势时,人际竞争即存在。其次,我们回顾了关于人际竞争后果的实证研究,重点关注决定人际竞争何时对组织中的个人和人际结果有利或有害的因素,同时强调了似乎构成这些因素基础的共同机制。先前的研究表明,当竞争被评估为一种挑战时,其负面影响会得到缓解,而其益处最为明显。相反,当竞争被评估为一种威胁时,其负面影响变得最为明显。我们希望本综述能为对人际竞争感兴趣的学者提供一个切入点,并对其后果提供更简洁的解释。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

People design and use technology for work. In return, technology shapes work and people. As information communication technology (ICT) becomes ever more embedded in today's increasingly digital organizations, the nature of our jobs and employees' work experiences are strongly affected by ICT use. This cross-disciplinary review focuses on work design as a central explanatory vehicle for exploring how individual ICT usage influences employees' effectiveness and well-being. We evaluated 83 empirical studies. Results show that ICT use affects employees through shaping three key work design aspects: job demands, job autonomy, and relational aspects. To reconcile previous mixed findings on the effects of ICT use on individual workers, we identify two categories of factors that moderate the effects of ICT use on work design: user-technology fit factors and social-technology fit factors. We consolidate the review findings into a comprehensive framework that delineates both the work design processes linking ICT use and employee outcomes and the moderating factors. The review fosters an intellectual conversation across different disciplines, including organizational behavior, management information systems, and computer-mediated communication. The findings and the proposed framework help to guide future research and to design high-quality work in the digital era.

人们为工作设计并使用技术。反过来,技术也塑造了工作和人。随着信息通信技术 (ICT) 在当今日益数字化的组织中变得愈发嵌入,我们的工作性质和员工的工作体验受到 ICT 使用的强烈影响。这项跨学科综述侧重于将工作设计作为探索个人 ICT 使用如何影响员工效能和福祉的核心解释手段。我们评估了 83 项实证研究。结果显示,ICT 使用通过塑造三个关键的工作设计方面来影响员工:工作要求、工作自主性和关系方面。为了调和以往关于 ICT 使用对个体员工影响的矛盾发现,我们确定了两类调节 ICT 使用对工作设计影响的因素:用户-技术匹配因素和社会-技术匹配因素。我们将综述发现整合到一个全面的框架中,该框架描绘了连接 ICT 使用与员工结果的工作设计过程以及调节因素。该综述促进了不同学科之间的智力对话,包括组织行

为学、管理信息系统和计算机中介传播。研究结果和提出的框架有助于指导未来的研究并在数字时代设计高质量的工作。

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Based on our review of the past 40 years of strategy implementation research, we find that the focus of the research area has moved from the pioneering structural control view to a more adaptive conception of strategy implementation. Whereas early research focused mainly on how to conceptualize strategy implementation plans and how to establish optimal structures, systems, incentives, and controls for strategy implementation, the adaptive turn has shifted the research emphasis on to how organizations make sense of and enact strategies in practice. Although this adaptive turn has contributed significantly to understanding how strategies are implemented and adapted, it has also led to a further fragmentation of the field. We put forward an integrative view that aims at combining the distinctive strengths of the two complementary views. Instead of focusing on either conceptualizing or enacting, we call for researchers to examine the continuous interplay of conceptualizing and enacting strategies at multiple hierarchical levels and in multiple organizational units simultaneously. We hope that our review will inspire future strategy implementation research to complete the adaptive turn through an enhanced, integrative view of strategy implementation.

基于我们对过去 40 年战略实施研究的回顾，我们发现该研究领域的重点已从先驱性的结构控制观转向了更具适应性的战略实施概念。早期的研究主要关注如何概念化战略实施计划，以及如何为战略实施建立最佳的结构、系统、激励和控制，而适应性转向则将研究重点转移到组织在实践中如何理解和落实战略。尽管这种适应性转向为理解战略如何实施和调整做出了重大贡献，但它也导致了该领域的进一步碎片化。我们提出了一种整合视角，旨在结合这两种互补观点的独特优势。instead of 专注于概念化或落实，我们呼吁研究人员研究在多个层级和多个组织单元中同时进行的概念化和落实战略的持续相互作用。我们希望我们的综述能通过一种增强的、整合的战略实施视角，激励未来的战略实施研究完成适应性转向。

163. What Do We Know About Knowledge Integration: Fusing Micro- and Macro-Organizational Perspectives

我们对知识集成了解多少：融合微观与宏观组织视角

Abstract / 摘要 (EN):

Knowledge integration is the raison d'être for the existence of the firm (Grant, 1996a; Kogut & Zander, 1992) and has been widely studied across many subfields in management and organizational studies. However, few constructs have received as much scholarly attention as knowledge integration while remaining so equivocally defined and measured, leading to a confusing array of conceptualizations, undermining its theoretical, empirical, and practical usefulness. As a theoretical construct, knowledge integration also cuts across the macro and micro levels, gaining attention from scholars interested in explaining the microfoundations of strategy and capabilities (e.g., Felin & Hesterly, 2007; Lewin, Massini, & Peeters, 2011). However, the interplay among these micro and macro factors is often overlooked, and its implications for theory building are ignored. To address these issues, we examine and integrate micro and macro organizational perspectives on knowledge integration. We provide a review of its definitions and offer our definition based on key dimensions identified. We discuss and analyze the micro and macro perspectives, presenting key assertions, propositions, limitations, and conclusions from representative studies. Finally, we integrate the diverse perspectives we discuss, showing how their interplay can enrich future scholarship and our understanding of knowledge integration as a key organizational construct.

知识集成是企业存在的理由 (Grant, 1996a; Kogut & Zander, 1992), 并在管理和组织研究的许多子领域中得到了广泛研究。然而, 很少有构念像知识集成那样受到如此多的学术关注, 却仍然定义和测量得如此模糊, 导致了一系列令人困惑的概念化, 损害了其在理论、实证和实践上的有用性。作为一个理论构念, 知识集成还跨越了宏观和微观层面, 吸引了有兴趣解释战略和能力的微观基础的学者 (例如, Felin & Hesterly, 2007; Lewin, Massini, & Peeters, 2011)。然而, 这些微观和宏观因素之间的相互作用往往被忽视, 其对理论构建的影响也被忽略。为了解决这些问题, 我们考察并整合了关于知识集成的微观和宏观组织视角。我们回顾了其定义, 并根据识别出的关键维度提出了我们的定义。我们讨论并分析了微观和宏观视角, 展示了代表性研究的关键断言、命题、局限性和结论。最后, 我们整合了所讨论的不同视角, 展示了它们的相互作用如何丰富未来的学术研究以及我们对知识集成这一关键组织构念的理解。
